CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Holiday business was steady and classed as fair. Since Christmas receipts have been sufficiently large to easily take care of all present needs. Shipping business continued good.

Roses are in good supply. Among the offerings are some excellent American Beauties, Killarney, Ophelia, Russell and Hoosier Beauty. Carnations, too, are in good supply. Easter lilies are plentiful. Paper White narcissi have been having a fair market. The same is true of stevias. Valley is plentiful, while sweet peas, orchids and violets are in fair supply. Other offerings are poinsettias, callas, rubrum lilies and snapdragons. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

P. J. Olinger had a good cut of his new red carnation seedling, Radium, for the holidays. The blooms proved popular with buyers.

C. E. Critchell had an excellent lot of valley and orchids for the yuletide demand.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been getting in an excellent cut of Killarney roses from the Bloomhurst Floral Co., at Lockland.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held Monday, January 8. C. H. H.

This is not the time to build greenhouses, but it is a good time to think about it. Dietsch construction has stood the test of years. Not only are Dietsch houses among the oldest standing today, but you will find each house an improvement over the last. Our construction is advancing with the times. We advocate nothing that has not proved its value. There will be better houses than we are now building, and they will be built by us.

It will pay you to investigate Dietsch greenhouse materials and methods of construction.

Jacobs Greenhouse Construction Endorsed by World-famous Architects

This range of Jacobs greenhouses is now in course of erection for Mr. J. Insley Blair at Tuxedo, N. Y. They are without a doubt the "last word" in greenhouse construction.

The plans, which contained all manner of modern improvements and scientific arrangements, were drawn by the internationally famous architects, Carrere & Hastings, who, after thoroughly examining practically every style of construction in their search for the absolute maximum of efficiency, placed their plans and construction contracts with us.

Is it not fair to assume that what we are doing for them we can do equally well for you?

WE KNOW WHAT TO DO AND WHAT NOT TO DO

What's more, we can save money for you.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The days preceding Christmas were ideal for shopping—bright, cold, dry—so that a great deal of the buying was done early. Every florist declares it the best Christmas ever, though the cold weather at the last necessitated much extra wrapping. The supply of carnations was far beyond the quantity usually available at this season. The stock was of good quality. Violets were scarce and there were practically no sweet peas on the market. Roses were good and mostly in demand, especially Russell and Ophelia, with Ward a leader for corsage work. Paper White narcissi sold well, as did snapdragons and mignonette. Cyclamens and poinsettias were the leaders in plants, owing to the scarcity of azaleas. Small ardisias sold well. Peppers and primroses were good and soon disposed of. Many effective arrangements of plants and baskets were seen; also baskets of boxwoods and reds, for table decorations. Ground pine seemed to be scarce at the outset, but finally loomed up sufficiently to supply the demand. Mistletoe and holly moved about as usual.

Various Notes.

Henry Smith had an extra store, as usual, and was well pleased with the trade.

Eli Cross cleaned up on a lot of fine poinsettias. He also had an extra store for the rush.

Miss Hary Hartnett says she had the biggest Christmas business ever, more than she could nicely handle.

Arthur F. Crabb reports a good clean-up of stock during the holidays.

Alfred Hannah & Sons were well stocked for Christmas business and disposed of a great number of plants.

The Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. had its usual fine exhibit of plants and cut flowers.

Wenzel Cukerski had a lively call for the fine lot of primroses, ferns, etc., that he had in readiness Christmas.

A. F. C.

Paxton, Ill.—Addems, Morgan & Co. say they have every confidence that spring business will break all records, so they are working up a larger stock of bedding plants than ever before.

DELIVERIES

We're doing everything in our power to speed them up.

RAW MATERIALS used in greenhouse construction are pretty well tied up.

War business—of course.

That's a condition beyond our control—a thing we can do nothing about.

But what happens to that material when we do get it is a condition that's not beyond our control.

Bad outside conditions make necessary the making of inside conditions better.

We're doing that very thing.

We're continually putting in new machinery to increase the speed of our production.

For instance, we recently put in a machine that enables four skilled men to do the work that formerly required ten. With the labor market in its present condition, it is doubtful whether we could get the ten skilled men anyway. The new machine increases production 40%. While one of these new machines was plenty to take care of the quantity of work, we finally decided to put in another to cut in half the amount of time necessary to do it in.

We are making time-saving improvements like this all along the line. To the end that when raw material reaches us, it will go from us to you in the form of your greenhouse, just as quickly as possible.

To the end that when we say (as we did at the top of this ad) that we're doing everything in our power to speed up deliveries, we'll be stating a fact—not just talking.

For Transplanting Carnations

The following is an extract from a letter from Mr. Arthur Taylor, of Boonton, N. J

"The Skinner System is highly valuable in transplanting carnations from the field to the greenhouse. After watering them the night before, the soil was in ideal condition so that we could dig the plants up with every root intact. The plants were strong and started right off growing. They have done better than any lot of plants I have ever had."

CYPRESS "THE WOOD ETERNAL"

A 5 TO 0 SHOT
"Cypress Wins In a Canter"

CYPRESS LASTS PRACTICALLY FOREVER

As a straw to show how the wind blows, a recent issue of The Florists' Review carried advertisements from the following greenhouse contractors and material men, all of whom recommend CYPRESS in large, black, healthy display type:

JOHN C. MONINGER CO., Chicago, users of Cypress ("and no substitutes.") ALL CYPRESS.
STOKES BROTHERS CO. (Inc.), Philadelphia—specialize in CYPRESS Bench Boards.
LOCKLAND LUMBER CO., Lockland, Ohio, shout for "Spot Clear CYPRESS." SCHNUTE-HOLTMANN CO., Evansville, Ind., announce "Clear Cypress."
ADAM SCHILLO LUMBER CO., Chicago, specialize in "PECKY CYPRESS."

The A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., Neponset, Boston, Mass., while not advertising in this paper, is strong on CYPRESS for sash bars and Hot Bed Sash, with "Pecky" cypress bench lumber.

Now the joke in this is: No dealer in a "substitute" for CYPRESS mentioned his "cheaper" article. Those who use clear, heart CYPRESS seem to be PROUD OF IT. They are willing to "go before the country" on the standard that all experience in greenhouse construction has set—clear, heart CYPRESS, "and nothing but."

THERE'S AN ARGUMENT IN THIS SO PLAIN WE DON'T HAVE TO TELL IT.

There's Profit for You in the Facts—So Plain You're Bound to Go After It.

How about our free booklets in the CYPRESS POCKET LIBRARY? They're attractive—and chock full of greenhouse "hoss-sense." Vol. 1 is the Government Report on the "wood eternal"; VOL. 3 has the last word on GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION; Vol. 20, "Cypress for All Farm Needs"—it's new; Vol. 36 is the interesting book on Home Carpentry; Vol. 37 is the big "Silo Book"—a dandy treatise of the Silo question. A postal will bring you one or a dozen—they're free, absolutely. Write us a letter just for luck and good-fellowship—and as a good business move.

We have several of the J. C. Moninger Company's greenhouses which have proved satisfactory in every way. The writer has been ordering greenhouse material from the J. C. Why is Evans Getting the Business?

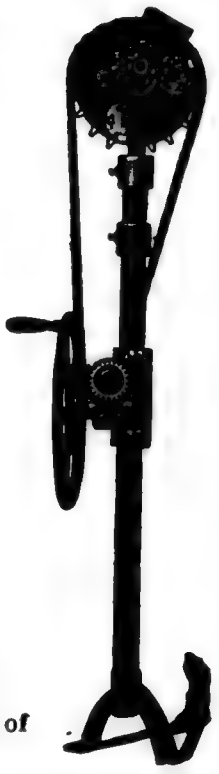
John A. Evans Company, Richmond, Indiana. Cromwell, Conn., Dec. 8, 1916.

Gentlemen:—We are satisfied that there is no better ventilating arm on the market than the Twentieth Century. It lifts the sash with much less power than the old style arms and holds them firmly in place.



The new Twentieth Century side ventilating arm not only opens very easily, but it folds up in such a way that there is no arm sticking out in the walk, as with the old styles.

We can highly recommend the Twentieth Century arm and you are welcome to refer to us.

Very truly yours,
A. N. PIERSON, Inc.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS PAGES TWO AND THREE

IRON FRAMER 51 x 300 FEET.

How J. T. Milliken, of Crescent, Mo., is Turning Pleasure into Profit.

SOME men get their keenest pleasure out of pure pleasure.

Others get it out of pure business.

Still others get pleasure out of both pleasure and business.

Then again, there are those who take pleasure in making all their pleasures pay.

Mr. Milliken might be called one of the latter.

His real business is in St. Louis.

His estate business is among the beautiful hills of Crescent. Here he has an extensive range of greenhouses for carnations and roses. The five we built for him are Iron Frame.

As is so often the case, the first houses were of that experimental brand of construction which were bought because "the price looked right."

The price was right for that brand of houses, but Mr. Milliken wasn't long in finding out that the brand was wrong.

Then it was we began selling him some real houses.

If you are thinking of building, let us give you some good, husky, money-making thoughts to think. Thoughts that bear both on what a house costs to buy, and what it costs to keep it bought.

Say when and where, and we'll be there.

ASTER PINK ENCHANTRESS

Upright in habit, as distinguished from the Branching form. The plant is very vigorous, and produces long, strong stems for the support of numerous large exhibition blooms. The flower is always full double; petals are of medium length and very broad; those toward the center fold in very regularly, while gradually, toward the outer edge, the petals stand out more and more until those on the outside recede from the center, thus increasing the diameter of the flower, which compares very favorably in size with the largest-flowering kinds on our farm. Color similar to that of the Enchantress carnation; flowers late. Pkt., 15c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., $1.00; oz., $3.00.

DORNER'S NOVELTIES for 1917

NEW CARNATIONS

ROSALIA—Cerise pink, large three and one-half inch flower of a true cerise pink color. Form is perfect. Calyx strong, never bursting. Stem is at all times strong and wiry. The growth is far above the average when we consider vigor, health and early and free flowering qualities. ROSALIA is a decided improvement on ROSETTE, having a better color and a better commercial habit.

OLD GOLD—We offer this as the earliest and most free flowering yellow carnation we have yet produced. A decided improvement over YELLOW PRINCE, being of a stronger growth, is perfectly clean and healthy, produces larger stems and more bloom. The color is a deep yellow with faint pink stripes.

The above two varieties, Price: $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

NEW LATE CHRYSANTHEMUM

FALL BEAUTY—A large Japanese reflex of a pleasing pink color with a shading of deep cream to the base of the petals and center of the flower. Has an extra strong stem, is especially fine for Thanksgiving, maturing November 25th to December 10th. The color, combined with its being so late and its extra keeping qualities, makes it of especial commercial value.

Price: $3.50 per doz.; $30.00 per 100

FOR YOUR PROTECTION, MR. FLORIST,

ACCEPT "SUPERIORA" MAGNOLIA LEAVES ONLY

EXTRACTS FROM OUR ENDORSEMENTS

C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "My customers insist on having the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolias, as they claim these are the best, and that they do not dry out or become moldy, and that every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest, besides being the best."

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "Other Magnolia prepares have tried to induce us to stock up their goods 'just as good as Dux's' at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us, and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business and will not take a chance of losing it; in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as 'Magnolia Kings.'"

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are the best leaves that we have ever handled, and we have had no complaint from any of our customers who bought these leaves from us. We have stored these leaves under all conditions and found that they will not mould; it is a very satisfactory leaf indeed."

Jos. G. Neidinger Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "We have tried all the Magnolia Leaves that are offered, but find your leaves to be far superior to all others, etc., etc."

The Montreal Floral Exchange, Montreal, Canada, writes: "Our business has increased with you this year over double of what we purchased last season, which is a good recommendation in itself that the trade in Canada appreciates the durability and keeping qualities of your leaf. We appreciate the integrity, promptness and good business methods that have characterized all your dealings with us."

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich., says: "We have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves for the past six years and find in all this time that we have had no complaints but many compliments on these goods., etc., etc."

Jos. E. Koppelman, of Providence, R. I., writes: "We feel that we can sell your leaves to people who have used them once without any trouble. They rather pay the difference than to buy other leaves elsewhere, etc., etc."

New England Florist Supply Co., of Boston, Mass., writes: "Have found 'Superiora' Magnolias the best leaves on the market. The sales on this leaf have been growing with the same rapidity as our business."

Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Have always found that the 'Superiora' brand gives our customers entire satisfaction; in fact, they are the best leaves we have been able to obtain in the last few years."

B. E. and J. T. Cokely, of Scranton, Penn., write: "We have always considered your Magnolia Leaves to be a standard for quality, etc."

The Baltimore Wholesale Florist and Supply Co., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "We are confident that any other manufactured Magnolia Leaves could not compete with yours, as other brands have been offered us, which, after we tried them, we refused to carry in stock."

N. F. McCarthy and Co., of Boston, Mass., write: ". . . It is the opinion of McCarthy and Co. that your good firm prepares the best leaf that has yet been offered in the United States. It is well worth the difference between the prices offered by inferior manufacturers and your agents."

Henry M. Robinson and Co., of Boston, Mass., write: "We are pleased to state that the quality of your leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale, etc."

Reed and Keller, of New York City, say: ". . . and we beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way. We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory; colors vary and leaves mould quickly, etc."

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange, Cleveland, O., says: ". . . never as yet have we had a complaint on the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolia Leaves, nor a carton returned."

Smith and Young, of Indianapolis, Ind., write: "We will continue to use 'Superiora' exclusively as we consider it superior to any other leaf in the market. Since we handle 'Superiora' we have not had one single complaint, etc., etc."

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, writes: ". . . that we have been sending you orders for 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves for several years should prove that we like your goods . . ."

Geo. H. Angermueller, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "It pleases me to say that I have worked up a splendid business on your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, and I credit my success to the fact that the quality of your leaves has always been entirely satisfactory to my customers, etc."

Oscar Leistner, of Chicago, Ill., writes: ". . . As you know, before you gave us the sole agency for the Western country, we were handling a different leaf, but these leaves gave us no end of trouble and our customers were very much disappointed with the quality. Since we have been handling your leaves we find that the complaints from our customers have entirely disappeared, and the trade seems anxious to buy your leaves exclusively. Only today one of our customers told us that he had bought 100 cartons of Magnolias from one of your competitors, but that he has been compelled to return them as his customers absolutely refused to accept them, due to the fact that the leaves are 'off-color' as well as mouldy, etc."

"SUPERIORA" BRAND MAGNOLIA LEAVES ARE SOLD BY EVERY WHOLESALE FLORIST IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

Hamburg Late White Chrysanthemum

This picture was taken December 10, 1916, and will give a good idea of what Hamburg Late White looks like when grown to single stems, planted six inches each way.

Hamburg Late White is pure white under all weather conditions, and is a sport of White Maud Dean, but has no trace of pink as has the original.

The average grower of Chrysanthemums must have varieties which are easy to handle, and from which he can cut as near 100% of perfect blooms as possible. Hamburg Late White has been grown for the last four years, and produces a very high proportion of good flowers. It is not an exhibition variety, but for late white, one of the best for commercial purposes. It can be had in bloom the latter part of November, by taking an early bud; but by selecting later buds, most of the flowers are cut during December, and we would advise a selection of late buds, as the later buds come somewhat fuller, and by selecting late buds, flowers can be had as late as the middle of January.

Keeping qualities are excellent, and where a light, graceful white flower is wanted, Hamburg Late White cannot be surpassed.

Hamburg Late White will be disseminated in the spring of 1917. Plants will be ready March 1, 1917, and all orders will be filled in rotation.

Rooted Cuttings, . . . $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

MRS. HEAL BEGONIAS FOR HOLIDAY BUYERS

Shrewd growers, with well balanced proportions of courage and of caution in their mental constitutions, may shun untried novelties, but are keenly on the alert to secure new plants that have really been proved worthy. Perhaps some of these growers may be favorably impressed by Begonia Mrs. Heal, a comparatively new winter bloomer.

BOTANICALLY speaking, and also classically speaking, the begonia is "the whole thing" in its wide circle of related or associated plants. Not only is it an unusually large genus, comprising species and varieties unnumbered and almost innumerable, but it is the only genus of any importance in its family, the begoniaceæ. It gives its name to the family and practically is the family—with unlimited emphasis on the "is." The other two or three genera in the begoniaceæ family are so small and insignificant that they really "don't count." They are "poor relations." Speaking classically again, the begonia is It, unrivaled in its domination.

Parentage of the Heal Begonias.

Since the species and hybrids of the begonia are already so nearly countless and many of them are exceedingly beautiful, any newly introduced variety must have extraordinary merit to win favor or distinction, or even an indifferent nod of recognition. It seems probable, therefore, that John Heal, of James Veitch & Sons, London, England, has worked sufficiently hard for such success as he has attained in producing from Begonia socotrana his new type of winter-flowering plants, now commonly known as the Heal begonias. He has earned his reward by means of persistent and intelligent experimentation. The credit due him is increased by the fact that his hybrids must endure the test of close competition with such prime favorites as Gloire de Lorraine and Glory of Cincinnati, which also are descendants of B. socotrana.

Like many human beings, B. socotrana derives its chief renown from its children. Yet it could scarcely be one of the ancestors of so fine a race of plants without having some excellent qualities of its own. It could not bequeath characteristics that it did not possess. Though its habit of blooming in the winter may be its greatest recommendation to the hybridizer, it has other merits.

From a Tropical Climate.

In describing the peculiarities of B. socotrana, however, its native climate should first be mentioned, since the original habitat largely predetermines the habits. B. socotrana was discovered in Socotra, otherwise spelled Sokotra, a tropical, sandy island off the coast of East Africa and south of Arabia. The species is distinct and beautiful, with large, deep green, orbicular, peltate leaves. Or, in everyday English, the leaves are almost circular, and are held like a shield or "pelta," with the petiole or leafstalk attached to the under surface of the leaf, near the center, instead of at the margin. Its flowers are bright rose. It belongs, of course, to the semi-tuberous or bulbous group of begonias, about the base of which are formed a cluster of bulbils or bulblets, ordinarily called bulbs.

From Socotra the bulbs of B. socotrana were taken to Kew, where they were grown in 1880, and where Mr. Heal soon afterward observed the plants and shrewdly took an inventory of their latent possibilities. By crossing B. socotrana with several other species, he produced a series of hybrids of greater or less excellence, including Agatha and other sorts that have become more or less known in the trade.

Begonia Mrs. Heal for Christmas.

But the greatest of the whole succession of Heal successes, as far as they have been tried and proved commercially, is Begonia Mrs. Heal.

The Mrs. Heal is the red or rose-carmine variety which is shown in the illustration on this page. It has been put to the test in America as well as in Europe. When it was exhibited by a gardener in Boston in the fall of 1914, it was greatly admired, and one of its closest observers stated in The Review at the time: "If commercial growers would take this variety up, it should make a grand Christmas plant." Apparently the growers are beginning, at least, to take it up. The specimen seen in the illustration was shown at Boston by A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, Mass.

Since B. socotrana is a native of a tropical region, its descendant, the Mrs. Heal begonia, naturally prefers a somewhat high temperature, but this idea may easily be carried to an extreme. One successful grower states that its temperature during the season of growth should not exceed 60 degrees at night and 65 to 70 degrees in the daytime, with a moist atmosphere. Some other growers advise a lower temperature, about 55 to 58 degrees, as the cooler conditions not only produce more durable flowers, but also aid in the suppression of insect pests.

Though Mrs. Heal begonias do not demand an excessive degree of attention, they do demand the right kind of attention. As they are semi-tuberous, they should not be treated either like the tuberous or the fibrous-rooted class, but should receive a sort of intermediate or halfway treatment. That is, they should be only semi-dormant during their period of rest. Though they must not be kept growing like the fibrous group, neither must they be dried off like the tuberous section. They should remain in their pots while resting, and should receive just enough moisture to keep the roots plump and the stems comparatively green; a few of the leaves will generally retain their fresh color. While resting, the plants are kept in a cool house, with a minimum night temperature of about 50 degrees, and it is well to place them on a bench, rather than under it.

When the Plants Have Rested.

As spring approaches, the plants should be stimulated with an increase of warmth and moisture. When they have broken freely, they are repotted. Unlike the tuberous-rooted class, they would suffer a severe check if repotted before growth was well started. A rather coarse compost, containing about two parts of loam to one part of leaf-mold, with sand and manure, is used in repotting. It is necessary at this stage that the watering be careful and moderate; excessive moisture would cause yellowness of the foliage, probably followed by decay.

Propagating Begonia Mrs. Heal.

When the plants have renewed their growth after resting, and just before the potting is done, some growers take the cuttings for propagation. Other growers wait until later, perhaps until near the middle of May, and continue, if occasion requires, to take cuttings in limited numbers until August. The cuttings root readily if placed in pots of sand and leaf-mold in a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees, if the watering is moderate and if precautions are taken to prevent condensation of moisture on the leaves. If strong, sturdy plants are wanted, the early cuttings may be pinched at the points when about six inches high.

As a Boston Grower Does It.

One of the Boston exhibitors of Mrs. Heal begonias says that he grows them with Gloire de Lorraine, and in similar soil, consisting of rough fibrous loam, leaf-mold, cow manure and sand. The manure, he says, he collects in the pastures and breaks it into lumps, and the plants delight in the resulting coarse mixture. He uses the stripe system for shade, producing much the same effect as if slat shades were used. In potting, the compost should be pressed down with only moderate firmness. The plants bloom satisfactorily in 4-inch to 7-inch pots. After the pots are well filled with roots, waterings with liquid manure are beneficial. Side ventilation under the benches is recommended, as the air should be kept in circulation without exposing the plants to direct drafts, which are conducive to mildew.

BUSY WITH BEGONIAS

SOME SEASONABLE NOTES.

Tuberous-Rooted Begonias.

While tuberous-rooted begonias are not good bedding plants except where they can get a fair amount of shade from trees or buildings, they are excellent as pot plants, fine for piazza vases in moderate shade and valuable as summer-blooming pot plants. It is to be regretted that we are unable to utilize them for bedding purposes, as in Great Britain or even in Nova Scotia they easily surpass geraniums as bedders, and after a heavy rain storm, when the geraniums look quite wretched, the begonias look as fresh as ever. The tubers are inexpensive and may be had in separate colors, either single or double. It is well to try some of each, although on the whole the singles are preferable.

To secure some plants in nice bloom before Memorial day, start the tubers now in flats of sand. Place them in a temperature of 60 degrees. Water moderately. Pot off into 4-inch pots before they become too much started, using a light but fairly rich soil, containing a good dash of sand. Grow them along in a temperature of 52 to 55 degrees. Give a shift to 6-inch pots when needed. When these pots become well filled with roots, apply some liquid manure. Some staking will be necessary to hold up the shoots as the flowering season approaches. Protect the plants from hot sunshine, not to the same extent as gloxinias, but enough to prevent any burning of the foliage. Batches of tubers, if plants are needed for bedding out or for piazza boxes, need not be started before March. Try a few of the frilled varieties, which are quite attractive.

Fibrous-Rooted Begonias.

While the tuberous begonias are not, as a rule, adaptable for bedding purposes, the fibrous-rooted varieties of the Vernon type make ideal bedders and succeed equally well in sunshine or shade. These can be propagated either by cuttings taken from carried-over stock plants, or by seeds. Where a large number are needed, seed sowing is much to be preferred. As begonia seeds are quite small, they cannot be sown in the same way as the seeds of stocks, asters or verbenas. Prepare some pans; be sure they are clean. Put ample drainage in them; place a layer of moss over this, then a mixture of fine, light compost, which should be at least one-half leaf-mold. Add some sand. After placing this compost in the pans and spreading it evenly, then press down and water. Now dust some sand over the surface and there sow the seeds with great care. Do not cover them at all. Place squares of glass over the pans and keep them dark until germination starts, then give light. Sow petunias, gloxinias and other fine seeds in the same way as begonias.

These seedling begonias will need pricking off into flats first, and later potting singly. They grow rapidly once the weather becomes warm. All the Vernon and Erfordii section, Gloire de Chatelaine and La Vesuve make ideal bedders as well as excellent pot plants.

Rex Begonias.

Rex begonias, while they have pretty flowers, depend on their foliage almost entirely for their popularity. They are easily propagated at this season by cutting well matured leaves in pieces and standing them edgewise in a warm propagating bench. Discard the thinnest or outer parts of the leaves, as being the least likely to root. There are many beautiful varieties of Rex begonias. They should be stocked by every country florist, for they are easy plants to grow in the average home and seem to give about as much satisfaction as any colored-leaved plants.

THE FAKER.

Does He Harm or Good?

At a recent meeting of the Pittsburgh Florists' Club E. J. McCallum, a commission dealer, defined the several grades of cut flower retailers and in part said of those not conducting stores: "I believe that all these people do both harm and good to the true florist. Harm, because there are instances where as a result a florist will get a 'call down' as being a robber, which undoubtedly is bad for the business, and good because they create ultimate customers for the florist. I mean by this that there are thousands of people who do not feel that their love for flowers is enough to overcome the loss of a dollar bill or even a 50-cent piece. This class of people will gladly spend 25 cents on the corner. A few such purchases convinces him, or her, that these flowers are not as nice as the ones on the stands at a higher price. He thus becomes a customer of the stands, and if anyway well-to-do probably begins to patronize the legitimate florist, where he gets service and art as well as flowers. In any event, if he does not patronize them he certainly never would have anyway, and so the florist is not out anything, even if he did not gain anything.

Seasonable Prices.

The consumer of any commodity will always purchase where his taste dictates. Will we go into a cheap restaurant if we want a good meal? Will we buy a pair of shoes from the curb dealer? Will we step into the phoney jewelry store for a watch? Will you buy your fruit from the peddler's push cart? So, where will flower buyers buy their flowers?

"Little explaining is necessary as to why prices are lower or higher than last time if we only take the trouble to tell customers what conditions such as sunshine, weather, crops, seasons, etc., have to do with the supply. Does the customer question the price of strawberries in March because they are cheap in June?

The Wholesaler's Position.

"Now a word for the wholesaler who is accused of conspiring with the street salesmen to undersell the storeman. Nothing is further from the truth. To start with, the grower never forgets to remind the commissionman that he must have high prices in order to pay his coal and labor bill. The commissionman who ignores this soon finds himself without shippers. That alone prevents the wholesaler from sacrificing stock to anyone. However, Mr. Commissionman receives his flowers in the morning and holds them all for what he thinks a fair price, no matter which class the buyer belongs to. Perhaps he does not clean up that day and is compelled to carry some flowers over until the next day. If so, and the flowers are still in good condition, he tries to get the regular price, but if they finally have to be sold at cheap prices to save dumping them, it at least gives the grower something. It will be seen from this that, except in rare cases, the street men do not get fresh flowers, or if they do they pay full price. It would be the height of foolishness to sell the faker good stock at a low price when there is a chance to sell it to someone else at a higher price. That isn't human nature.

A Partial Remedy.

"Now as to a remedy. I frankly feel that there is none, but I would suggest one thing the retailers could do to remedy this to a great extent and fully believe it is the only partial solution there is. I also firmly believe it would be the cheapest advertising a florist could get. Buy up these flowers during glut periods while they are still good (at a cheap price, of course) and donate them to customers and would-be customers. Thus a box of a dozen carnations or roses, including delivery expense, would be not more than 15 cents. Could you beat that as an ad?"

THE NEW YORK EXHIBITION.

Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., has completed the plan of the floor space for the August convention at New York. The layout is shown herewith and Secretary Young will supply a larger copy with the rules, on request. He believes every foot of space will be sold.

Floor Plan for Trades' Display at the New York Convention of the S. A. F.

With reference to the Convention Garden Mr. Young says: "It will be the opportunity of a lifetime. Do not delay in reserving space if you are interested. The rate for space is only 10 cents per square foot. The garden will be located in a most favorable section of the Botanical Garden, Bronx park, where the exhibits will be seen by thousands of interested people daily. The plantings will be under the supervision of Dr. N. L. Britton, director of the Botanical Garden."

WILL LIMIT IMPORTS

NEW YORK FIRM GIVES NOTICE.

Will Accept No New Business.

As a result of the unusual conditions growing out of the war, importers have had an extremely difficult time, especially with plant shipments, but their embarrassments have not been emphasized so forcefully as is done in an announcement, dated January 8, in which McHutchison & Co., New York, state that they will accept no 1917 import orders for Belgian plants except from those who imported through them last season—that it is their purpose to reduce the volume of the business.

The Notice.

Here is the letter sent to customers:

Jan. 8, 1917.

Though shipments from Belgium were made every spring and fall since the war began, the three circular letters we sent you last fall gave you some idea of the difficulties, uncertainties and expense we had to contend with to get them. What the conditions will be next spring and fall, if the war continues, it is impossible to foresee.

Up to now our organization in Belgium is undamaged and complete. Araucarias, kentias, bays, azaleas, etc., are being grown and receive the same care from the regular staff of men as in normal times. Our packing and shipping facilities are unequaled in Belgium, as is proven by our Belgian firm shipping this fall over 2,600 cases of plants within two weeks after the German authorities issued shipping permits.

Up to now shipments were made with the consent of both the British and German authorities. We expect to get these consents again for next season's shipments, and the canal boats will likely also be permitted to continue to carry the shipments from Ghent to Rotterdam. Any difficulties that arise next season will likely come after the shipments leave Ghent, and of course no Belgian can learn anything about conditions which prevail in the world outside of Belgium.

Last fall most of the shipments arrived in good condition. Some shipments arrived late as a result of war conditions and there was some loss on them, mostly due to the congested condition on our railroads, but whatever profit was made (and the profit was large in many instances) was made by the purchasers. Our Belgian firm can make no profit under present conditions, nor can we—our extra expenses in getting the shipments through the lines and quickly forwarded from here puts the matter of profit for us entirely out of the question.

In view of these facts we will book orders next season for Belgian stock from our regular customers only—those who imported through us from Belgium last season. We figure that by cutting down business to about one-third of normal we can have shipments made by fast passenger steamers and devote all our energy and capacity to the service of those firms who usually depend upon us for their Belgian goods.

We enclose special prices of Arthur de Meyer, Ghent, Belgium, for spring and fall importation. Prices are lower than before the war began, except on some sizes of kentias. The stock will be as good and packed as well as in normal seasons, but so there will be no later misunderstandings we will clearly define the conditions of sale, as we cannot issue a 1917 Belgian catalogue—nothing printed, or anything written in English can pass in or out of Belgium.

As in normal times, all import orders are booked under De Meyer's catalogue (1916) conditions, the purchaser accepting shipment at Ghent nurseries and it traveling from there at his risk and expense. As it may be impossible to cancel an order once placed, we require a deposit of twenty-five per cent with order to guarantee acceptance of shipment at destination. No order will be reported to Belgium until these conditions are accepted and the deposit made. All shipments are covered by both marine and war risk insurance to New York, though it is of course impossible to get any insurance to cover risks of damage to perishables to destination.

We have outlined the situation frankly to you; you know what risks you take, what chances of large profits are yours. We will be pleased to book your order and urge you to mail it as soon as possible, as the mails take much longer to get into Belgium than the shipments to come out of there under present conditions.

It is probable McHutchison & Co. have handled more Belgian stock than any other importing firm.

What It Means.

The principal importance to the trade lies in the fact that a shortage of plants is indicated—if the largest and possibly the best equipped importer feels the necessity of reducing the volume of business to, as suggested, one-third the normal size, other importers will be likely to act along similar lines and in the aggregate it will mean a large reduction in the supply of stock made available for the trade in this country. It is fairly certain that little if any profit has been made on Belgian plants the last two years, but their absence will leave a void to be filled with other stock.

Elwood, Ind.—F. W. Blubaugh, who opened a store November 25 on one of Elwood's best business corners, says that from the start business at the store has been good, with the daily sales increasing each day.

Laurel, Del.—L. M. Smith & Co. always have found Mistletoe one of the most satisfactory of white chrysanthemums and have this season been pleased to obtain a yellow sport. It is like the parent in being a fine incurved flower of good size, with stiff stem and a well clothed neck. The color is almost the same as that of Chrysolora. Good blooms can be had as late as January.

Geraniums

GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

How late can geranium cuttings be taken from a sand propagating bed to produce good 4-inch plants by the middle of May? How late can geranium cuttings be taken to produce 4-inch plants by the middle of May?

W. D. T.—O.

If you put in late fall cuttings these would have been well rooted some time ago and now should go into 2¼-inch pots. If left too long in a propagating bench, the plants become stunted and more easily fall a prey to bacterial diseases later in the season.

If cuttings are taken at once they will make good 4-inch stock in a carnation temperature by the middle of May. Do not postpone putting in the cuttings any longer than is absolutely necessary. Stock for 3-inch pots can be propagated as late as the middle of February.

C. W.

SOIL FOR GERANIUMS.

What would be the best soil for potting rooted geranium cuttings? My soil is somewhat new. Also, what soil would be best for potting 4-inch stock later?

H. P. S.—Pa.

For potting rooted cuttings of geraniums, your soil, even if rather new, would answer nicely if a little old, well rotted manure and a little sand were added to it. For 4-inch stock add a 4-inch pot of fine bone to each bushel of soil; also one-fourth of well decayed manure. Spent hotbed manure, after it has been dried somewhat and screened, answers well. If you have a heavy soil, add a little leaf-mold at the first potting. Bench soil which has been used for chrysanthemums will do well for geraniums.

C. W.

GERANIUM FOLIAGE BLIGHTED.

Under separate cover we are mailing you a geranium plant. Can you tell us what is the matter with it? A great many of our plants are affected in a similar manner. Any advice you can give us will be appreciated.

T. N. G.—O.

The roots and stem of the geranium plant seemed perfectly sound, but the foliage was quite withered and seemed to have suffered from a fungoid affection. This trouble is common this season, due chiefly to the peculiar climatic conditions. I would suggest that you keep the plants in pots well picked over. Destroy any badly affected ones and spray with Fungine or Bordeaux mixture. Cleanliness will help a great deal in keeping fungoid affections in check; therefore do not throw any debris below the benches. On outdoor stock, spraying with the same fungoid remedies is all you can do. Clearer skies will help to get rid of the disease. C. W.

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL.

Please tell me the right time to pot rooted cuttings of geraniums to have 4-inch pot plants in bloom Decoration day. If rooted cuttings were potted now, how long would it be before they were good, strong 2¼-inch pot plants?

L. K. M.—Pa.

The geraniums should have gone into 2¼-inch pots as soon as they were rooted. The plants should be well rooted in their pots and ready for a shift into 3-inch pots about January 1. They can be moved into 4-inch pots about two months later. Some growers shift from 2¼-inch to 4-inch pots, but you will find that you have better results by giving two shifts in place of one.

C. W.

GERANIUMS DOING POORLY.

I am sending you a plant of a Buchner geranium. These are nice looking plants, but are not good and I have heard they will not bloom. I had the same trouble with this variety last year. Can you give me any information on the subject?

H. M. M.—Ill.

As the geranium plant was frozen solid on arrival, I could not determine what the trouble was. Your sample plant was quite vigorous, but seemed to be too soft. I am inclined to think you are giving them too rich soil. Use soil in which some old and thoroughly rotted manure is used and add a little fine bone to it. This will help to build up more stocky growths which will flower freely. Do not feed the plants with liquid animal manure; use a top-dressing of bone instead and compare results.

C. W.

REMEDY FOR FUNGUS.

Please tell us the best remedy for fungus in a greenhouse with hot water heat. It is especially bad on the geraniums, affecting the blooms in the spring. Would sulphur fume lamps help this any?

J. C. T.—N. Y.

If by fungus you mean mildew, the sulphur fume lamps, if they can be guaranteed not to smoke or take fire, would be useful in combating it. Some dry sulphur scattered here and there on the heating pipes also is helpful. The fungoid troubles of geraniums rarely bother the flowers and I think you probably had mildew on them. To guard against this, avoid cold drafts and sudden temperature changes and preserve a dry atmosphere in your house. C. W.

HERE'S ANOTHER MENACE

POWER TO STOP SHIPPING.

In Appropriation Bill.

In the Agricultural Appropriations Bill now before Congress there is a rider attached which, if passed, would give the Federal Horticultural Board at Washington arbitrary and autocratic control over the business of nurserymen and florists who ship plants or trees.

It would give the board the power to establish a quarantine on suspicion, without calling for a hearing, as is required by the federal quarantine law now in force.

The matter is in charge of a committee, of which Congressman John J. Fitzgerald, of Brooklyn, is chairman, and measures have been taken which it is hoped will induce this committee to allow the nurserymen and florists to express their views on a subject that is of such vital importance to them, before such a drastic amendment is adopted.

Efforts to Stop Imports.

It is not generally known that the Association of State Horticultural Inspectors recently advised the Federal Horticultural Board to establish a quarantine that would shut out imports of bays, azaleas, palms, rhododendrons, evergreens and all balled plants from every source; or that the American Forestry Association is seeking a quarantine that would shut out shipments of all kinds of nursery and florists' stock from every source. A conference will be held in Washington, D. C., January 18 and 19, to promote this scheme. The significance of the rider to the appropriations bill therefore will be apparent.

Without azaleas, Manetti stocks, bay trees, fruit stocks and all raw materials our growers could exist, but such a quarantine as proposed would put back the florists' and nursery businesses to where they were forty years ago.

Louisville, Ky.—The 1917 calendar sent out by the Alfred Struck Co., greenhouse builders, carries a large halftone reproduction of the group photograph made at the October meeting of the Indiana and Kentucky state societies of florists, which was reproduced at the time in The Review. Accompanying the calendar is a letter from August R. Baumer, secretary of the Kentucky Society of Florists, urging all non-members to ally themselves with the society.

Columbia City, Ind.—The Wagoner Floral Co., a concern established here twenty years ago, and the Columbia City Greenhouses have been consolidated and incorporated at $25,000, with A. J. Wagoner as president and D. R. Livengood as secretary and treasurer. The new firm is styled Columbia City Floral Co. The company produces its own stock and will do a wholesale as well as retail business. Mr. Wagoner will have charge of the range, 50,000 feet, and Mr. Livengood will be at the offices.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION ROSALIA.

Although Rosette is considered a pretty good carnation by many of the growers who have tried it, F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., which sent it out a few years ago, expects it to be outclassed by Rosalia, the distribution of which has been begun. While Rosalia is said to be an even better color than Rosette, the principal claims for it are on account of its habit. The accompanying illustration shows the character of flower and stem.

THE COMMON CARNATION RUST.

Please tell me what has caused the spots on the enclosed carnation leaves. What is the best remedy?

M. A. B.—Kan.

Your carnations are affected with the common carnation rust. This is brought on by unfavorable cultural conditions, such as too much syringing during dark weather, or a foul atmosphere due to a lack of ventilation, especially after applying a mulch or a heavy dressing of animal manure.

This disease is not the terror to the carnation grower it once was, but of course it is not a desirable visitor. If your plants are badly affected, pick off as many of the spotted leaves as possible and then spray the plants thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture. The Bordeaux tends to keep the spores inactive. Give all the ventilation possible and keep the temperature near 50 degrees at night. Water and syringe sparingly, but do not allow the plants to suffer for want of water at the roots. A. F. J. B.

STARTING TRAILING PLANTS.

When do you advise taking cuttings from German ivy, tradescantias and Kenilworth ivy in order to produce good plants by the middle of May?

W. D. T.—O.

All the plants named are easy of propagation and make quick growths. German ivy and Kenilworth ivy can be put in from the middle of January to the middle of February. Tradescantias, being such rapid growers, are better if not placed in sand before the middle of March. C. W.

EUPATORIUMS AND DELPHINIUMS.

How should Eupatorium ageratoides and E. cœlestinum and the yellow Delphinium Zalil seeds be treated to make them germinate? I have tried several methods without success.

M. R.—N. J.

Eupatorium ageratoides and E. cœlestinum should be sown as soon as possible after the seed is ripe, either in a coldframe or in flats. It will do no harm if they are allowed to freeze solid. Cover them with dry leaves, however, and remove these about the end of March. Seedlings, if they do not appear in the fall, will do so in spring. The same treatment will answer well for the yellow Delphinium Zalil, which germinates more slowly than the blue varieties. C. W.

TIME TO SOW STOCKS.

Will you please tell me when to sow ten weeks' stocks in order to have them in bloom for Memorial day?

R. & S. F. S.—Mont.

Sow at the end of the present month for Memorial day bloom. Pot off singly before planting out. C. W.

FORMOSA LILIES STUNTED.

I have grown a house of Formosa lilies for several years with good results. I pot them up in 4-inch pots, place them under a bench until they are thoroughly rooted and about four inches high, then I plant them out into the bench and keep them slightly shaded for about ten days, with a night temperature of 60 degrees and a day temperature of about 70 degrees. The lilies look strong and healthy and give from four to eight flowers from a 7x9 bulb, but this year they do not grow more than eighteen inches high. I have never had my lilies stunted before. Can you tell me what the trouble is?

S. K.—N. Y.

All the Formosa lilies I have grown have averaged three feet in height, some as much as five feet, a few as dwarf as your average. Your treatment seems to have been correct, and I am led to wonder whether some other variety than Formosa has been, perhaps unintentionally, sold to you. Formosa is not by any means a dwarf lily. One of its strong points has been that it has always been possible to cut long stems with it. This leads me to surmise that you may be growing another variety.

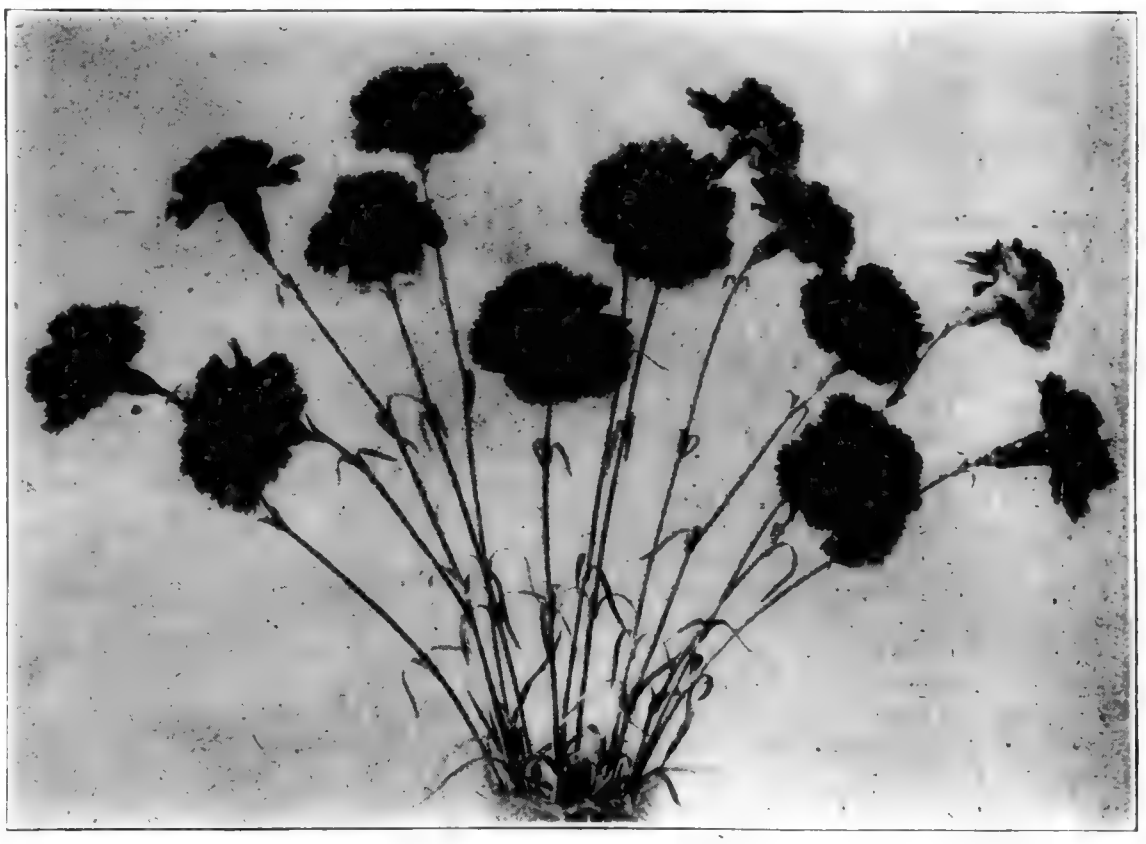
SHOULD SPIRÆAS BE FROZEN?

Should the clumps of Spiræa Gladstone and S. Queen Alexandra be frozen to produce the most perfect flowers? I have had excellent success when they were not frozen, but every florist near here claims they should be frozen.



J. N. M.—Kan.

The fact that you have had excellent success in flowering spiræas that never have been exposed to frost is the best of evidence that freezing, though customary, is not necessary. The advantage of exposure to frost in the case of spiræa clumps is that they start more evenly and more rapidly. F. R.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

New York, N. Y.—Harry A. Bunyard, Inc., dealer in seeds at 42 West Twenty-eighth street, has filed schedules showing liabilities of $12,087 and assets of $3,083. The corporation was formed March 4, 1915, with $25,000 capital stock, to conduct "The Uptown Seed Store." An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against it last month by these creditors: John F. Croom & Bro., Magnolia, N. C., $366; A. T. De La Mare Printing & Publishing Co., New York, $649, and Wm. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, $49. It was alleged that August 26 Harry A. Bunyard, Inc., transferred a portion of its property and gave a chattel mortgage on stock and fixtures.

Greenwood, Ind.—Jacob O. Bishop has acquired twenty-five acres of land near the Greenwood cemetery as a site for a larger range, and as soon as the property is vacated he will commence to remove his range at Euclid and Madison avenues to the new location.

Carnation Rosalia.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Callas.

Callas now will be blooming freely, and to keep them vigorous a top-dressing of fine bone should be applied once in ten days, alternating this with liquid cow manure. Callas are specially fond of bone and Clay's fertilizer; the roots seem to devour both quite greedily. The longer we grow this flower the more convinced are we that the Godfrey calla is the one for commercial growers. The flowers are purer white than in the original type, quite large and far more abundantly produced.

Lobelias.

Only in a few of the coolest parts of the United States can the beautiful blue lobelias be called complete successes as bedding plants. They stand heat fairly well. What they cannot stand is hot, moist and sunless weather, which causes them to rot badly. For window boxes the speciosa or trailing section is quite valuable. At such summer resorts as Bar Harbor, Me., they make a glorious show. Propagation is by seeds or cuttings. A fine crop of cuttings should now be obtainable from the old stock plants. These will root easily and can be topped and divided before the season for spring sales starts. Where seed is sown, treat it as suggested for begonias and transplant the seedlings into flats as soon as it is possible to handle them. The double blue lobelia, Kathleen Mallard, can be propagated only from cuttings.

Vincas.

These notes refer to the flowering type of vinca, botanically called V. rosea, which is a most useful and persistent-flowering bedding plant. I usually grow three colors, pink, pure white, and white with a pink eye. To germinate seed successfully requires a high temperature and some bottom heat. Place in flats or small pots and later shift to larger pots. One pinch will make them bushy. In April or early May, if greenhouse bench space is at a premium, these, in common with other bedding plants, will make a splendid growth if plunged in a hotbed. Give the plants a light, rich soil; if poor soil is given they will always look stunted and starved. The vinca is one of the dependable bedding plants, giving a constant blaze of bloom from mid-June until frost.

Anemone Japonica.

If you are not growing Anemone Japonica you should make up your mind to do so. There is no more valuable florists' flower in September and October, before mums are in good season. A good many buy small plants and, because they do not give quantities of bloom the first season, lose courage and drop them. Allow them to establish themselves; then, in the second season, they will easily attain a height of five feet in good soil. They are easily propagated now from root cuttings. Dig up one or two old plants, cut the thicker roots in pieces half an inch long, scatter these on the surface of a warm propagating bench, cover with sand and water well. Keep them moist; provided your drainage is all right, none will rot and about all will grow. After leaves appear, pot off singly, gradually harden off and plant outdoors about the end of April. If you let your customers see how showy and valuable these are, you should be able to sell a good many young plants each season. A. Japonica alba still is the best white, and Queen Charlotte has not been beaten as a colored variety.

Purchase Seeds Now.

The European war has closed the doors to a large part of the seed imports from the Old World, and it is a hard problem for our seed merchants to secure necessary supplies for their orders. Seed orders should be placed as soon as possible. Do not allow yourself to get hot under the collar if your full order does not arrive by return mail; be indulgent with your dealer. You can have no idea of the difficulties he now has to secure what you need. We must make due allowances not only for late deliveries, but also for some poor germinations, and there is some probability that everything may not come true to name. Sit down and make out your orders now, while the frost reigns supreme and your coal pile steadily dwindles. Be courageous enough to try some novelties and do not buy cheap seeds, especially when it comes to greenhouse plants like cyclamens, cinerarias, calceolarias, primulas, begonias, gloxinias, etc.

Poinsettias.

No one wants poinsettias after the holidays and any left-over stock might as well be laid away under a dry greenhouse bench and left there until May. No water will be needed until the time comes to start up the stock again. Stock plants from beds or benches can be lifted and packed close together in soil in a potting or other shed, where a minimum of 45 to 50 degrees is maintained. You can forget your poinsettias from now until May. Euphorbia jacquiniæflora must not be so severely dried off as the poinsettia—which, by the way, is also a euphorbia—or the greater proportion will die.

FLOWERS FOR VALENTINES.

At the January 4 meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club it was decided to start an active advertising campaign with the object of creating and stimulating a greater demand for flowers for St. Valentine's day, February 14. The form of advertising to be used is poster stamps, on the same plan as those used extensively by the Red Cross and in a number of other commercial lines. The committee has contracted for a large supply of special heart-shaped stamps for distribution through florists to the general public. These stamps are beautifully designed and bear the inscription, "Let your Valentine gift be flowers." The Chicago Florists' Club has arranged to furnish these stamps to the trade at a reasonable price, any profit made to be used for future coöperative advertising for flowers. Florists all over the country are invited to use these stamps. Price list and order blank will be issued shortly, but the committee advises that orders be sent immediately, as stamps are going fast. F. Lautenschlager, 440 West Erie street, Chicago, is in charge.

VALLEY MUST BE NEUTRAL

BRITISH BAN GERMAN PIPS.

Correspondence on the Subject.

It has been suggested that the quantities of valley pips that have come into the United States this season were so great as to lead to the belief that the British government had relaxed its blockade, but recent correspondence indicates that if pips of German origin are coming in it is because shippers are taking a chance, either that or the British authorities have been deceived. The attitude of the British government is set forth in the following letter from Washington:

STATE DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON.

11 Warren Street,
New York City.

Gentlemen—With reference to previous correspondence in regard to your desire to obtain a shipment of lily of the valley pips from Hjalmar Hartmann & Co., of Copenhagen, you are informed that the Department has just received a cablegram from the American Minister at Copenhagen stating that he is informed that the crop of lily of the valley pips in Denmark this year is only one-fifth to one-tenth of the normal crop and that, therefore, to fill existing orders, German pips will have to be used. The Minister indicates that this accounts for the attitude of the British authorities and that Hjalmar Hartmann & Co. are unwilling to make shipments unless positive assurances of non-interference are given by the British authorities. The Minister states that Hartmann has 1,000,000 Danish-grown and 5,000,000 German-grown pips.

In view of this information, the Department is instructing the American Ambassador at London by cablegram to endeavor to obtain assurances of non-interference with at least the 1,000,000 pips which the Department is informed are of Danish origin.

As soon as any information is received from the Ambassador, it will be communicated to you. You will be informed at a later date of the cost of the Department's cablegram and of any reply thereto.

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
For the Secretary of State:
Alvey A. Adee,
Second Assistant Secretary.

300.115/11077

William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., has been active in assisting members of the trade to secure permits to bring forward European goods. He says: "So far as I was advised, and from all information I have had up until this time, the goods for which permits were asked from the neutral countries for lily of the valley

The Sales Staff of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Starts the New Year by Talking Things Over.

pips, seeds, etc., were produced in the countries asking for the permits. From the enclosed it would seem that I have been misinformed.''

The Prospect.

It seems quite clear that the supply of valley pips in Europe this year is materially reduced by the demand for food crops, but that there will be plenty for America should peace come unexpectedly or other circumstances result in raising the blockade. As long as present conditions continue, however, it is plain that the question of supply will keep American valley forcers guessing.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION.

In the local papers at Connersville, Ind., January 1, C. A. Rieman offered the following advertisement as a New Year's resolution for the public:

Resolved, That I will join that rapidly increasing number of big-hearted and thoughtful people who believe in giving flowers to the living and making their lives happy. I will brighten the winter days with the cheering presence of flowers. I will see that the wife, at home with the daily cares and burdens, is left a message of love in the form of flowers. I will see that my dear old mother's life is made joyful by a message such as only flowers can convey. I will send flowers for valentines. I will use them to express my sentiment of love and friendship wherever I can, for nothing speaks more sincerely. I will see that my friends, ill at home or in the hospital, have flowers as a token of my sympathy.

This was followed with the statement that the purchase of flowers is made easy by reason of Mr. Rieman's large assortment, etc.

RANDALL HOLDS SALES MEETING.

A sales meeting and dinner was held by the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, December 26, 1916, in the West room of the Hotel Sherman, thirty-seven members of the sales force being present. The newest offerings from the various Randall factories were discussed and explained and plans for the coming year announced. The meeting was most successful in every particular and hearty coöperation between the men for the future was assured.

MEALY BUG OUTDOORS.

Will you kindly tell me what causes, and how to get rid of, mealy bugs that take possession of my garden plants in the fall of the year? They are low on the stem of the plants, near and on the roots. F. A. P.—Cal.

Any spray to kill the bug would be likely to destroy many of your plants. A force of cold water carefully directed from a hose, and using a fine sprayer, will clean out most of the bugs. C. W.

Nashua, N. H.—Robert Kirkpatrick, who, according to one of his employers, was ''one of the best Scotch lads that ever graced the soil of the U. S.,'' died here recently. Mr. Kirkpatrick was associated with George E. Buxton for seven years and before that time saw service with Judge Hoit. The decedent was a much liked man; the gardeners and florists attended his funeral in a body.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Conrad C. Gindra, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., believes the retailer should carry as varied a stock as possible of both foliage and blooming plants, mentioning especially the sales of Cissus discolor, Stephanotis floribunda and a plant of Ponderosa lemon carrying eleven large fruits, for $25 each plant, showing that the public will buy if the goods are there. Euphorbia and clerodendron are included in the list of uncommon and salable plants. A grand lot of Begonia Mrs. J. A. Peterson was noted and my good friend regretted that he had not a larger stock of this acknowledged peer among begonias. Cyclamens were heavy in bud and foliage, but backward in blooms; this was noted generally through this territory. Carnations White Wonder, Matchless, Alice and Comfort are leaders. ''Vassar College business is exceptionally good this season,'' observed Mr. Gindra. ''We cleaned out our entire cut of chrysanthemums, which were fine. We had the order for the 'Daisy Chain,' which was 1,114 feet in length. It was a daisy, I can assure you.''

Christian Dean, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., remarked that it might seem unchristian, but an increase in the mortality rate would mean more funeral work, which had been dull. The summer season was good, with more planting than formerly, and fair prices. Preparations for a big spring business are under way.

The John Ralph Estate, of Saratoga Springs, finds business good, owing to the fact that Saratoga is becoming more of an all-year resort than formerly.

The Allen Greenhouse Co., of Hudson, N. Y., reported good holiday prospects, with stock to supply the demand. My attention was called to some bushes of Daphne odorata, occupying a space about six feet square, from which 500 blooms were to be cut, to sell readily at 5 cents each. Manager Alfred Sitter thinks it a profitable corner. W. M.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS.

TIN POTS?

I have noted the articles in The Review about the shortage of clay pots. Can we not get someone interested in the manufacture of tin flower pots? This is just the time to do it. I think it is strange they have not come into use before this, as they are just what we want. There is no question whatever as to their being a success and I hope someone will afford us a supply.

A. E. Woodward.

TO MAKE TIGHT JOINTS

As one good turn deserves another, I wish to pass along to the trade a little suggestion on making gas-proof and steam-proof joints, at the same time preserving the threads of the pipes and thus insuring a ready response to the wrench whenever it is necessary to uncouple a joint. My method is to use graphite mixed with steam cylinder oil to form a paste. This compound is used by marine engineers in preference to ordinary pipe compounds or leads.

T. E. Hornby.

COAL-TAR PAINT ON PIPING.

I noticed the letter of M. E., in The Review of December 28, page 82, stating that he had coated his hot water pipes with a paint containing creosote, and that the fumes from the paint had ruined most of the stock in the house and "almost put him out of business." If it is not too late to be of service to him, I have a suggestion to offer.

According to my experience, there is only one chemical that will remove the creosote or counteract its effects, and that is oxide of iron, mixed with pure linseed oil. Paint five or six 2-inch pipes with this every twenty-four hours. Or, if the pipes are larger, do not paint so many of them. A good coat of this on the piping will produce good results almost immediately. Be particular, however, to use nothing but pure linseed oil and oxide of iron. After applying the mixture, open the ventilators two or three inches for about twelve hours, to allow the fumes to escape, and the plants will not be harmed. M. Noir.

"PAINTING" THE PIPES.

All florists, of course, are anxious to have their heating plants last as long as possible, and recent inquiries in The Review have led me to think that my experience might be of some benefit in this connection.

Three years ago I installed a heating system comprising 4,100 linear feet of 4-inch boiler flues. These I painted or covered with raw linseed oil. This was put on quickly by means of burlap saturated with the oil, and rubbed. It took about a week to dry, and formed an air-tight, rust-proof coating. This has proved highly satisfactory and has developed no objectionable features.

However, in conversation afterward with a gentleman whom I knew to be well informed on the subject, I was told by him that a thin lubricating oil, such as auto oil, would be just as good. "In fact," he said, "if the pipes are rusty, such oil would be much better, because it would penetrate under the rust scales as linseed oil would not." So, this fall, in adding 2,400 feet of 4-inch tubes, I acted on his suggestion and covered the pipes with lubricating oil. At this writing it is entirely satisfactory. Lubricating oil is nearly odorless. With the water at 160 degrees, the odor is not noticeable, except, perhaps, just a trifle at first.

This same gentleman told me there was nothing in the world better to "paint" a steam boiler with than pure tallow. He said, "Never use tar preparations. They form a coating and eventually crack loose and become worse than nothing, as they then hold moisture."

If I were protecting steam pipes I would use tallow, put on with a cloth when the pipes are hot. I would do it in the summer, when the ventilators are open. I feel certain it would be a good plan. I have formed the habit of thoroughly cleaning the inside of my boiler—that is, the firebox and flues—just after the close of firing, say June 1, and then coating liberally with oil. We must not forget that it is when idle the boilers rust and not when in use. So protect them thoroughly during the idle months. S. C. Templin.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Call Guarantee Fund.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met in Philadelphia in connection with the local committee for the exhibition in March. A resolution was passed to call for fifty per cent of the guarantee fund, to be paid on or before February 1. Everything pertaining to the coming exhibition seemed to be moving along nicely.

The preliminary schedule of prizes was adopted and will be issued without delay.

Resolutions were adopted expressing regret at the death of W. C. Barry, ex-mayor of Rochester, N. Y., who was one of the earliest supporters of the American Rose Society, and was held in esteem by everyone who knew him.

Department of Registration.

Application for the registration of a new rose was made by John H. Dunlop, Richmond Hill, Ontario, as follows:

Mrs. Henry Winnett—Parentage, Russell x Shawyer; color, bright red about the shade of Richmond; large, full flower, solid color, foliage ample; deliciously fragrant, combining the keeping qualities of Russell with the freedom of Shawyer; form good, petals well reflexed and of solid texture.

Mr. Dunlop said: "I am proud of being the first Canadian grower to have the honor of entering a seedling of such sterling merit, as I have had a number of visitors both from the United States and different parts of Ontario, and all agree as to the quality of this new rose." B. Hammond, Sec'y.

THE CLUBS ARE BUSY

INDIANA FLORISTS' MEETING.

Also Rose Trophy Contest.

The regular annual meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association was held in the Riley room of the Claypool hotel, Indianapolis, January 10. Competition for the Indiana rose trophy was held in conjunction with this meeting.

The session was opened by President Vesey, who gave a short retiring speech. Mr. Vesey thanked the members for their coöperation in making his two terms a success and mentioned the great growth of the society during his last term. Next came the minutes; they were heard and approved. After this Dan Bash and Thomas Hepler were proposed for membership. Their names were held over until the next meeting, as is the usual custom. F. J. Ball and Mr. Schnider were elected to membership. The secretary's report then was read, and it was a record-breaker. The membership of this society has grown from 150 to 167 during the year. This was followed by the treasurer's report, showing a sinking fund of $540.81 and a cash balance on hand of $203.19, making a total of $744. Then came the reports of the auditing committee and the state fair committee, the latter consisting of Harry White, E. O. Steinkamp, J. D. Connor, Jr., Charles Pahud, Adolph Baur and Theodore Dorner. This committee recommended a change of premium list, that is, to strike off the amateur classes and add the amount of these to the professional classes. Several new classifications were made for the professionals, these to be put up to the state agricultural board for approval.

A. F. J. Baur gave a short talk on the accomplishments of the Purdue experiment committee. A vote of thanks was given to the committees by the president, in behalf of the association. Amendments were proposed to the by-laws, Section 3, to take care of the July meeting in a different manner from now on. This, as usual, was held over until the next regular meeting.

State Entomologist Wallace gave an interesting talk on some vital points regarding the shipments of greenhouse stock to other states. A movement was suggested against the importation of foreign stock, such as azaleas, rhododendrons, and all such hard-wooded stock. Committees were appointed to coöperate with Mr. Wallace on this matter and recommendations were made by the association to William Gude, the national representative of the S. A. F., on this same point. There was a vote for increasing the secretary's salary to $100 per year. This was passed.

The New Officers.

The election of officers resulted in the choice of the following: President, Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis; first vice-president, Herman J. Young; second vice-president, Fred Heinl, Terre Haute; secretary, O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis; treasurer, Charles Pahud, Indianapolis.

The judges of the exhibits were Fred Heinl, J. F. Ammann and W. W. Coles. Rose exhibits were made by Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind.; the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind.; the Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis; W. S. Stewart & Son, of Anderson, Ind. The rose trophy was awarded to Frank & Sons, of Portland.

A carnation exhibit was made by Baur & Steinkamp, who exhibited Merry Christmas, scoring ninety points, and their new crimson seedling, which received eighty points. F. Dorner & Sons Co. exhibited Laddie, a pink seedling, scoring ninety-one points; Rosalia, scoring eighty-six points, and a novelty yellow, Old Gold. Some exceptional cyclamens were exhibited by the Bertermann Bros. Co. and some fine Brilliancy coleus by the Pahud Floral Co. After the judging the meeting closed with the auctioneering of the flower exhibits, the receipts of which were given over to the carnation show fund. This was followed by the annual banquet.

Carnation Show Committees Meet.

A mass meeting of the committees for the carnation show was held at the Commercial Club rooms at 10 a. m. of the same day. The committeemen came out strongly and the foundation plans for the forthcoming event were completed. A short talk was made by J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., which was followed by a buffet luncheon.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

HERMAN W. ROGERS.

WHEN a wealthy woman died in Detroit last autumn it changed the course of a popular Chicago florist's life—for his wife was the only heir. Herman Rogers was born in Detroit, but has spent his business life in Chicago. He began with his brother, Thomas C. Rogers, with whom he remained, except for a year spent at the World's Fair with M. F. Gallagher, until the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. Returning from service in the 32d Michigan regiment, he joined Walter Ritzer & Co., but since 1904 has been with Weiland & Risch. In 1901 he married Miss Ella Evans, of Pentwater, Mich. They have a son, Bernard, now 13 years of age. In leaving Chicago for his old home at Detroit, where his wife's inheritance lies, there is the possibility that the trade is not losing him, as his activities have been centered in it so long he may find it difficult to change the habits of years.

AT CHICAGO.

Letter from President Amling.

The meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, held at the Morrison hotel January 4, was better attended than any in some time, over seventy-five members being present. The most important business was the installation of new officers, which took place after the retiring officers had rendered their respective reports. President W. H. Amling, who is just recovering from an illness, was unable to be present, but sent the following letter, which was read by Vice-president Paul Klingsporn, as chairman for the evening:

It is with deep regret that I am missing this meeting. Although I am getting along nicely and have good chances for an early recovery from my late illness, my physician would not grant my request to let me go to the meeting tonight, but called it unwise and urged me to wait another month. Since the pen is mightier than the sword and the doctor stronger than the patient, I must submit to his ruling. However, if I cannot be with you in person I am with you in soul and spirit and wish the club as such, and each member individually, good health and a very happy and prosperous New Year and an enjoyable time for the evening. I hope that all the rest of the officers elected for the coming year come well prepared with a good long speech, so that you will not miss the chairman. Especially our new secretary, who is world-renowned for his talent in speaking, has something up his sleeve and is loaded to the brim. Get it out of him. And I know that the vice-president elect, with his pleasant face and melodious, touching voice, will do such credit to the chair that the club will be more than pleased.

It being the duty of the chairman to appoint certain standing committees, I would beg the following gentlemen to serve for the year:

Committee on Good of the Club—G. Asmus, G. French, Fred Lautenschlager.

Committee on Sports and Pastimes—Pete Olsem, Fred Price and Joe Einweck.

Sergeant-at-arms—Michael Fink.

The other new officers were present, as follows: Vice-president, Paul Klingsporn; secretary, Allie Zech; treasurer, Otto Amling; trustee, W. J. Keimel.

Miscellaneous Business.

W. J. Baumer, of Berwyn, Ill., and recommendations were made by the association to William Gude, the national representative of the S. A. F., on this same point. There was a vote for increasing the secretary's salary to $100 per year. This was passed.

The New Officers.

The election of officers resulted in the choice of the following: President, Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis; first vice-president, Herman J. Young; second vice-president, Fred Heinl, Terre Haute; secretary, O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis; treasurer, Charles Pahud, Indianapolis.

The judges of the exhibits were Fred Heinl, J. F. Ammann and W. W. Coles. Rose exhibits were made by Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind.; the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind.; the Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis; W. S. Stewart & Son, of Anderson, Ind. The rose trophy was awarded to Frank & Sons, of Portland.

A carnation exhibit was made by Baur & Steinkamp, who exhibited Merry Christmas, scoring ninety points, and their new crimson seedling, which received eighty points. F. Dorner & Sons Co. exhibited Laddie, a pink seedling, scoring ninety-one points; Rosalia, scoring eighty-six points, and a novelty yellow, Old Gold. Some exceptional cyclamens were exhibited by the Bertermann Bros. Co. and some fine Brilliancy coleus by the Pahud Floral Co. After the judging the meeting closed with the auctioneering of the flower exhibits, the receipts of which were given over to the carnation show fund. This was followed by the annual banquet.

Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., which was followed by a buffet luncheon.

HERMAN W. ROGERS.

WHEN a wealthy woman died in Detroit last autumn it changed the course of a popular Chicago florist's life for his wife was the only heir. Herman Rogers was born in Detroit, but has spent his business life in Chicago. He began with his brother, Thomas C. Rogers, with whom he remained, except for a year spent at the World's Fair with M. F. Gallagher, until the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. Returning from service in the 32d Michigan regiment, he joined Walter Ritzer & Co., but since 1904 has been with Weiland & Risch. In 1901 he married Miss Ella Evans, of Pentwater, Mich. They have a son, Bernard, now 13 years of age. In leaving Chicago for his old home at Detroit, where his wife's inheritance lies, there is the possibility that the trade is not losing him, as his activities have been centered in it so long he may find it difficult to change the habits of years.

AT CHICAGO.

Letter from President Amling.

The meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, held at the Morrison hotel January 4, was better attended than any in some time, over seventy-five members being present. The most important business was the installation of new officers, which took place after the retiring officers had rendered their respective reports. President W. H. Amling, who is just recovering from an illness, was unable to be present, but sent the following letter, which was read by Vice-president Paul Klingsporn, as chairman for the evening:

It is with deep regret that I am missing this meeting. Although I am getting along nicely and have good chances for an early recovery from my late illness, my physician would not grant my request to let me go to the meeting tonight, but called it unwise and urged me to wait another month. Since the pen is mightier than the sword and the doctor stronger than the patient, I must submit to his ruling. However, if I cannot be with you in person, I am with you in soul and spirit and wish the club as a whole and each member individually, good health and a very happy and prosperous New Year and a memorable time for the evening. I hope that all the rest of the officers elected for the coming year come well prepared with a good long speech, so that you will not miss the chairman. Especially our new secretary, who is world renowned for his talent in speaking, has something piled above and is loaded to the brim. Get it out at him. And I know that the vice president elect, with his pleasant face and [illegible] voice, will do such credit to the [illegible] the club will be more than pleased.

It being the duty of the chairman to appoint certain standing committees, I will [illegible] lowing gentlemen to serve for the year:

Committee on Good of the Club: G. Asmus, G. French, Fred Lautenschlager.

Committee on Sports and Pastimes: Peter Reinberg, Fred Price and Joe Einwick.

Committee on Transportation: Mr. Baur, Mr. Barker to appoint the other members.

Sergeant at arms: Michael Falk.

The other new officers were elected as follows: Vice-president, Paul Klingsporn; secretary, Allie Zech; treasurer, Otto Amling; trustee, W. J. Keinath.

Miscellaneous Business.

W. J. Baumer, of Berwyn, Ill., [illegible]

Thos. Heaven, of Benton Harbor, Mich., were elected to membership. An application from Duncan Robertson was received. It was voted to send a letter of condolence to the respective widows of the late N. J. Rupp and W. L. Kroeschell. As many are planning to attend the convention of the American Carnation Society at Indianapolis, January 31 and February 1, the club accepted the recommendation of the transportation committee that the delegation take the train leaving at 11:40 p. m., via the Monon route.

Sam Seligman made the suggestion that the club plan an advertising campaign via the movies, showing growing methods, the wholesale disposition of stock, interior of retail stores, etc., saying that he could obtain a special price on having the films made. The matter was referred to the S. A. F. Iles Cole, of Springfield, Ill., brought up the subject of a thorough revision of the premium list for the Illinois State Fair, having it brought up to date. This was referred to the Illinois State Florists' Association.

Coöperative Advertising Started.

St. Valentine's day advertising by means of stamps to be pasted on envelopes the same as Red Cross stamps was discussed. It was decided to have these stamps bear the inscription: "Let your valentine gift be flowers," and a committee consisting of F. Lautenschlager, chairman; George Asmus and M. Barker was appointed to handle the affair. The club voted to guarantee part of the expense provided it did not exceed $100. Subscriptions were, however, received from various members before the meeting adjourned, which aggregated more than this sum. The stickers are for sale by the committee.

August Jurgens, who because of his illness was unable to attend, sent a bunch of Golden Spur narcissi, accompanied by a message saying that though he was not there in body he was there in spirit and that he hopes that he can attend the next meeting. Some fine Russells and Ophelias were exhibited by Stielow Bros., Niles Center, Ill., while the Wellworth Farm Greenhouses, Downers Grove, Ill., showed some excellent Killarney Brilliants and Miladys. A vase of Hamburg Late White chrysanthemums was exhibited by C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y.

AT ROCHESTER.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Rochester Florists' Association was held at the Musicians' Headquarters January 8. It was a rousing and enthusiastic get-together; the attendance was well over fifty. The retiring president, Charles H. Vick, presided. Several new members were voted on and admitted. The balloting for officers resulted in the election of the following: President, H. B. Stringer; vice-president, Fred Thomann; secretary, Ambrose H. Secker; treasurer, George T. Boucher; trustees, John Dunbar, A. H. Salter and Hugo Teute. Charles H. Vick then presented to the association the newly made officers, amid much cheering.

Nathan B. Graves, in behalf of the association, spoke of the admirable way in which Mr. Vick had worked so arduously for the association during his two years as president and of the good way in which he had kept the interest up. As a token of esteem, Mr. Graves then presented to the retiring president a handsome cut glass vase, filled with red and yellow roses, with the good wishes of all the members. Mr. Vick suitably responded. Music was furnished by George T. Boucher, Horace J. Head and W. Teute. H. J. H.

AT NEW YORK.

The Administration Change.

The monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club, held January 8, was attended by 150 of its members. Twenty-five new names were proposed for membership and C. C. Reck, L. E. Dupuy, A. Van Praag and M. A. Clarke were elected. Resignations were made by Geo. Ehrle and William Chalmers.

Visitors at the meeting were J. H. Stalford, of Bar Harbor, Me.; B. Hammond Tracy and Theo. Murray, of Boston.

An appropriation of $200 was authorized for the premium list of the American Gladiolus Society.

Great enthusiasm was shown over the outlook for the convention of the S. A. F. The next meeting of the club, February 12, will be devoted exclusively to the interests of the convention.

A letter of sympathy was ordered sent to Jos. H. Vocke, now convalescing at Nashville, Tenn., following a severe attack of pleurisy.

President Weston made an interesting farewell address, in which he gratefully acknowledged the splendid assistance of his various committees. Mr. Weston then introduced his successor, G. E. M. Stumpp, who made an address full of promise of achievement for 1917. He was followed by his staff, Vice-president J. H. Fiesser, Secretary Young, Treasurer Rickards and the new trustees, Messrs. Irwin, Canning and Kottmiller, each of whom pledged his best efforts.

President Stumpp appointed the following committees:

Legislative—W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., chairman; James McHutchison, F. R. Pierson.
Essay and Lecture—Leonard Barron, J. Harrison Dick, L. W. C. Tuthill.
Exhibition—Chas. W. Knight, H. C. Riedel, Richard Hughes.
Special Premiums—John Canning, W. R. Cobb, Julius Roehrs, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., Frank H. Traendly.
House—Philip F. Kessler, A. Buckholtz, A. H. Donaldson.
Annual Dinner—A. L. Miller, Chas. Schenck, Emil Schloss, T. B. de Forest, J. G. Esler.
Awards—P. W. Popp, Henry Weston, Chas. H. Brown, Julius Roehrs, Percy B. Rigby, Jos. A. Manda, Wm. H. Duckham.

A vase of September Morn roses, sent from the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., was highly commended. Two vases of Daphne odorata, by H. F. Byxbee, Norwalk, Conn., received a cultural certificate. A seedling carnation from G. H. Neipp, Chatham, N. J., was highly commended and a display of Roman hyacinths by P. W. Popp received the thanks of the club. J. A. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

As usual following the holiday demand, the market last week was without any special feature, and little life was in evidence up to its close. Prices remained steady at about the previous week's averages. Shipments were comparatively light and the demand by the retailers was less than anticipated. More life is assured for the present week.

Growers of cut flowers have much cause for self-congratulation. They surely have no just cause for complaint on the score of values now prevailing, especially for roses and carnations. American Beauties are again in the van of popularity and the best flowers were held at 50 cents each, with not enough for the demand. Hadley is widely grown this season and the supply is abundant. There seems to be a scarcity in the lower grades of the hybrid teas and good No. 1 roses are worth nearly as much as the long-stemmed arrivals. Few roses sold under $5 per hundred last week; of the long-stemmed ones not many brought over $10, with $15 occasionally for the novelties.

Carnations were a surprise in their steadiness, and the perfect flowers easily commanded $5 and $6 per hundred. Few sold under $4. There was no surplus and everything first-class was instantly absorbed. Larger shipments are expected this week. The best violets January 6 were selling at $1 per hundred. There was no oversupply of the fresh flowers and their popularity seems to be increasing. But there is no retail demand for any but the selected.

The orchid supply of several seasonable kinds is abundant, and prices range from 25 cents for dendrobiums to 60 cents for the cattleyas. Cypripediums are down to $12 per hundred. Longiflorum lilies have receded to $10 per hundred, with a downward tendency. Lily of the valley sold during the week from $5 down to $2 for the low grades, with no special demand for it. Gardenias do not rise above 25 cents each for the highest quality. Most of the arrivals are closed out at $1 per dozen.

Narcissi in several varieties bring from 25 to 75 cents per bunch. The best Purity freesias sold at 75 cents per dozen sprays. Some of them were of exceptional quality. Callas were scarce and held their $2 per dozen price without difficulty. A few gladioli from the south are seen, but there is little demand for them. January 6 saw the last of the chrysanthemums. A few irises are arriving. There has been an overflow of stevia, much of it of a low grade. Some splendid mignonette is seen, and myosotis. The usual seasonable flowers are abundant—sweet peas, wallflowers, daisies, calendulas, tulips and pansies.

Branches of flowering shrubs are displayed and large shipments of wild smilax are arriving. The supply houses seem to be almost as busy as they were before the holidays.

Various Notes.

The New York spring flower show is the event of most importance in the near future, and its opening is only eight weeks away. Secretary Young says it will distance all its predecessors.

The joint committee of the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of New York meets every week. Exhibition space has been so widely spoken for that another floor of the Grand Central Palace may be necessary.

The new vice-president of the S. A. F. is already busy in behalf of the convention here in August. In an interview he said it was "none too early to formulate plans and to put forth efforts to make the coming convention the banner meeting of the society." Mr. Miller is an enthusiast and no sacrifice will be too great on his part in arranging for the enjoyment of the many visitors expected.

Meyer Otile, of Riedel & Meyer, has an injured hand on account of a fall on the icy pavement last week.

The George W. Crawbuck Co. has completed improvements at its big store.

Mayor Badgley, of Chatham, announces January 23 as the date of the annual banquet at Morristown, N. J., of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society.

Lawrence Kervan, of the Kervan Co., had the misfortune to break his right arm last week in a fall on an icy pavement near his home at Bayside, L. I.

Allen Bros. is the title of the green goods house doing business at 204 West Thirtieth street. The young men are contemplating a move to West Twenty-eighth street.

The last of the Hamburg Late White mums were seen in J. J. Coan's windows January 6.

In William Kessler's novelty window last week were branches of forsythia, Bridal Wreath, flowering almond, Japan quince and giant pussy willow.

Messrs. Rigby and Morichard, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., leave this week for a month's outing and rest in Florida, which will include a two weeks' shooting holiday.

W. A. Manda, of South Orange, is enjoying the sulphur baths at Mount Clemens, Mich.

One of the leading exhibitors at the poultry show in Madison Square Garden last week was the MacNiff Horticultural Co.

Miss Perle Fulmer, president of the Ladies' S. A. F., could not have made a better selection for the head of the introduction committee for August than Mrs. Walter Sheridan, of New York.

The New York Bowling Club opened the season Thursday evening, January 4. W. P. Ford, R. J. Irwin, A. Kakuda, Joseph S. Fenrich, John Miesem, P. Jacobson and A. Donaldson were in attendance, as usual. John Miesem led the sports with a score close to 200. January 11 the officers are to be selected.

Miss J. Siegel now is bookkeeper and stenographer for R. J. Irwin, who now has representing him on the road W. E. Cahill, A. J. Rickards and David Thomm. Mr. Irwin reports a fifty per cent increase in his business during 1916.

Frank H. Traendly and Robert Simpson are visiting the large growers of Chicago and vicinity.

C. R. Jaeger, of One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Seventh avenue, had a visit from the stork last week and received as a New Year's gift a bouncing boy.

Charles Millang and Joseph Fenrich are in the same boat—both have succumbed to the grip.

J. Austin Shaw.

An exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York will be held January 13 and 14 at the American Museum of Natural History. The monthly shows usually have been held for an afternoon each only, but it has been decided to try the experiment of holding them for two days. There are classes open to all and others restricted to non-commercial growers. Prizes are offered for cut flowers of orchids, carnations, sweet peas, schizanthus, Buddleia Asiatica and antirrhinums. Premiums also are offered for primula and begonia plants. Special prizes may also be awarded by the exhibition committee for unusual exhibits, and such exhibits are requested. There will be a lecture at 4 o'clock, December 13, on "Darwin and Other Tulips," by John Scheepers. This will be illustrated with colored lantern slides.

Maurice Fuld has arranged a series of twelve practical lessons in gardening, to be given at Hotel Biltmore each Wednesday morning beginning January 17. He also plans to publish a monthly gardening magazine which is to contain no advertisements and to be written largely by himself.

OBITUARY.

John W. Bahr.

While working in his store at Elizabeth, N. J., January 4, John Bahr was stricken with heart failure. He was found dead a little later by his son. Mr. Bahr was 64 years old and had lived in Elizabeth for the last forty years. Most of that time he conducted a flower store at the same place where he died.

Mr. Bahr was born in New York and moved to Elizabeth from there. He was prominent in civic affairs until recent years. He is survived by three sons, Walter W., John A. and Richard A. Bahr, and one daughter, Mrs. Julia A. Sears. The funeral was held January 5. R. B. M.

Hamlin Johnson.

Hamlin Johnson, for many years proprietor of a seed store at Providence, R. I., died December 31 at his home in Seekonk, Mass. He was in his ninety-second year.

Mr. Johnson was born at Brooklyn, Conn., and moved to Providence when a young man. In 1879 he opened a seed and implement store at 6 Exchange place, which he conducted until 1890, when he disposed of it to the Providence Seed Co. His wife having died, Mr. Johnson retired to his farm in Seekonk. There he carried on a greenhouse business for a number of years.

W. H. M.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A lively debate concerning the appointment of a guardian for Miss Hattie B. Whitted, head of the Whitted Floral Co., which operates two stores here, was staged recently before Judge Dahl. Three days before Miss Whitted was declared mentally incompetent to transact her affairs by a nerve specialist, she gave her brother-in-law, John G. Taylor, a power of attorney. When Miss Whitted's condition became known, the creditors of the Whitted Floral Co. came to the front and took charge. The creditors, however, refused to countenance the proposed guardianship of J. G. Taylor or Mrs. Taylor, the latter having petitioned the court for her sister's guardianship. Undue influence was suggested by the questions put by the creditors' attorney in court. Mr. Taylor said the liabilities for the two flower stores amount to about $22,000, and that the assets are $39,000. He admitted, however, that under a forced sale the assets would probably not amount to more than half of the given sum.

Nashville, Tenn.—The state florists, nurserymen and fruit growers will hold their annual conventions here January 31 to February 2, inclusive.

Mineral Wells, Tex.—Fire caused by an exploded oil stove recently did considerable damage to Ely's Floral House. Irreparable damage to many plants was done by the force of the water from the firemen's hose.

Auburn, Ala.—The chair of horticulture of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute will be occupied after the first of the year by George C. Starcher, a young Virginian, who recently resigned his position as associate professor of horticulture at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Tallahassee, Fla.—Thomas G. Gordon, who has launched a florists' business here, says he would like to make an arrangement with some southern grower whereby he could sell flowers and plants in the capital city on a commission basis. Mr. Gordon says it will require some time before he can produce his own stock. College Nurseries, Tallahassee, Fla., is Mr. Gordon's full address.

Columbia, S. C.—What with a splendid year-end clean-up of stock and an auspicious start of 1917 business, Mrs. J. M. Eison intimates that the sunny side of life is uppermost as far as she is concerned.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Elmwood Nurseries & Floral Co., of which Walter Puckett is president and treasurer, has a large block of Easter lilies potted and stored under the greenhouse benches. Superintendent Carl Bucher says he never has any alarm about their being on time; all his worry is the other way. By January 1 his lilies had made four or five inches of growth and he was hoping for cooler weather.

Saint Augustine, Fla.—Speaking of climatic changes, the band ought to play "From Greenland's Icy Mountains to India's Coral Strands" whenever Robert Person draws nigh, for Robert jumped from the florists' business in Duluth, Minn., to the florists' business at old Saint Augustine, Florida's famous resort. Mr. Person worked for the Duluth Floral Co., Duluth, and for Swanson, the Florist, of Minneapolis, but in his new location he is boss.

WHY is the carnation falling behind in the selling in flower stores of the better class?

GERANIUMS are selling splendidly again, at wholesale, of course. The large demand for young stock indicates general confidence in a big spring business.

THERE is a demand for an effective soil pulverizing machine that can be manufactured cheaply enough so that it can be sold at a reasonable price and yet give a margin of profit on which the maker can afford to push it.

THE idea of one man is to trim his service to fit his prices, while another will give the best that is in him and charge accordingly. Whether the men are florists or publishers, it is easy to tell which will make progress.

ONE of the noteworthy features of the Christmas and New Year's trade was the increase in telegraph delivery orders. There will be a tremendous volume of these some day; it needs only for flower givers to know of the service to use it.

THE number of inquiries that come to The Review requiring no other advice than to use one of the standard nicotine extracts according to the directions on the can makes it clear the manufacturers of these commodities are not thoroughly tilling their field.

PRACTICALLY all the available wood of Ophelia rose was used last year for propagating purposes and there still was a shortage of young stock. There will be a strong demand for the variety again this year, for many growers who have not succeeded with any other rose are doing well with Ophelia.

INDIANAPOLIS HOTEL RATES.

In view of the hardware convention to be held in Indianapolis at the same time as the meeting of the American Carnation Society, January 31 and February 1, it has been deemed advisable by the reception committee to have the rates of the Indianapolis hotels published, so that reservations may be made in due time. There are plenty of excellent hotel rooms in Indianapolis, included in the following:

Grand hotel, rooms $1 and up; rooms with bath, $1.50 and up.
Washington hotel, rooms with bath, $1.50, $2, $2.50 and $3.
Claypool hotel, single room without bath, $1.50; with bath, $2.
Severin hotel, room with shower bath, $1.50; room with tub bath, $2 to $3.50 (European plan).

John Bertermann, Chairman.

WE GET A SURPRISE.

In the autumn it became necessary to announce that after December 31 the subscription price of The Review would be $1.50 per year. With it was coupled the statement that those whose subscriptions did not expire until after that date might renew before January 1 at the old rate of $1 per year. At once renewals began to come in, a fairly steady stream of them.

But in the closing week of the year the stream became a flood, with a deluge January 2, when subscriptions for 1,054 years were received—in the last ten days of the offer a total of 2,934!

There proved to be so many new subscriptions in the unlooked-for inundation that 12,200 copies of the issue printed January 3 did not suffice to fill them all! Many of the new subscriptions could not be started until the issue of January 11.

Beginning with this issue the press room order will be to print 12,500 copies of each issue.

Many of those who took advantage of the renewal offer wrote letters of approval like these:

I think The Review is one of the best papers going and would not be without it.—Paul de Nave, Fall River, Mass., December 29, 1916.

I consider The Review my best hired man.—H. P. Myers, Delphi, Ind., December 28, 1916.

We could not get along without The Review and it will be cheap at the advanced price, as every issue contains something especially interesting and instructive to us.—Weisell Greenhouse Co., Ashtabula, O., December 27, 1916.

We often find an item carrying a suggestion that is worth to us, far removed from the active centers, much more than the price of a year's subscription. For instance, this week's issue carries an idea we are going to use in our new store that we feel will be one of the big things for us.—Forest Park Floral Co., Coffeyville, Kan., December 30, 1916.

We think The Review is a very good paper, as it keeps right up to date on all matters pertaining to the business and our dealings with advertisers in The Review always have been satisfactory.—G. L. Curry & Bros., Valencia, Pa., December 29, 1916.

So it is not surprising to find in the letters about advertisements the same story from the other viewpoint, like this:

I have had much success advertising in The Review and consider it the best paper for the trade.—John Stammes, New York, December 31, 1916.

The two insertions sold everything I had.—H. M. Morris, Rantoul, Ill., December 28, 1916.

We wish to take this opportunity to assure you that our dealings with your company have been very satisfactory and that results obtained from advertisements in your paper were gratifying. We wish you continued success during 1917.—Lechner Bros., St. Louis, Mo., December 31, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

HOW CAN WE SAVE?

There is no Adamson law for florists, at least not for the man who is in business for himself. The country florist rises at dawn and works under glass till dark, after which he does his bookkeeping, correspondence and other incidental details. In the middle of the night he gets up and fires the boiler. To such a man a law making eight hours a day's work seems like an extract from Puck, so what will he think of the proposal to gain another sixty minutes of daylight next summer by setting all the clocks ahead one hour?

Daylight saving is one of the things which have been adopted in Europe because of the war. Originally proposed for the purpose of ending the day's work an hour farther before sunset by starting it an hour nearer sunrise, belligerent Europe adopted it as a means of prolonging the day's work. In every way it has operated so successfully that there will be a determined effort to move American clocks ahead next spring. It is an innovation which probably will meet with the approval of all the members of the trade who work in cities, but it holds zero in interest for the gardener who labors from sunup to sundown, with never time to look at the clock.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Last week found the market experiencing the usual after-the-holiday reaction, with both shipping and local trade dull. By January 6, however, business began to pick up, gaining strength steadily up to January 8, on which day a brisk business was done, especially in shipping. On the whole there has been plenty of stock to meet all orders, although at times roses have been hard to find in the desired length or variety, and as the demand for other stock was not pressingly great, prices naturally slumped somewhat.

Probably the stiffest market was on American Beauties, which are still in short supply. Stock coming in was readily disposed of and quotation prices were but little deviated from. Russells again arrived in larger quantities, due to the few bright days around the first of the year, and the quality was also improved. Prices, however, dropped slightly. Roses in general are not overplentiful, but the principal scarcity is on the shorter lengths of pink varieties and on Ophelias. The demand for shorter lengths now far exceeds that for specials. Carnations have arrived in large quantities and the latter part of last week found the wholesalers struggling to avoid a glut. January 8 the situation was somewhat improved, but wholesalers were, nevertheless, willing to accept almost any reasonable offer and some large lots were shipped out of town at cheap rates.

Easter lilies are much more plentiful, while valley remains the same as usual, enough but not too much. Sweet peas and double violets also arrive in larger supply, the former being moved in large quantities, though at somewhat lower prices. The quality is good. Calendulas and mignonette are in small supply. Paper Whites also are beginning to shorten up. The quality on the whole is not above the average. Stevia is rapidly disappearing, while

The Trade's Bankers.

Early January brings the annual bank elections and one finds an interesting sprinkling of trade names in the reports.

Joseph J. Budlong, onion set grower, who this year built a range of greenhouses and started in as a rose grower, is said to be the largest stockholder in the Lake View Trust and Savings Bank. He was reëlected as its president.

Wm. A. Peterson, of Peterson's Nursery, was reëlected a director of the State Bank of Chicago, one of the largest in the city.

E. C. Amling, who has been president of the State Bank of Oak Park since its organization, still holds that position.

August F. Poehlmann is vice-president and a director of the Morton Grove Trust and Savings Bank, the building of which is just across the street from the greenhouse office of Poehlmann Bros. Co.

Albert F. Amling has been vice-president and a director of the Maywood State Bank for several years.

The name of Peter Reinberg appears in the lists of directors of two banks, one national, one state. The former is the Ravenswood National; the latter, the Lincoln Trust and Savings.

The Bowmanville National Bank has J. C. Vaughan as one of its directors.

Simeon F. Leonard, president of the Leonard Seed Co., is a director of the Market Trust and Savings Bank.

Various Notes.

The transportation committee of the Florists' Club has selected the Monon as the route to the Indianapolis carnation meeting, choosing a train that leaves at 11:40 p. m. January 30. The last time the club designated the Monon as the official route to a convention a large number of those who went declined to join the party and traveled on the Pennsylvania, which also could be used to Indianapolis. But perhaps the committee will have better luck this time.

The oldest florist in Woodlawn, J. Bombenger, plans to spread out. His property on Woodlawn avenue is for sale and he is looking about for a good location for a range of houses for wholesale plant growing. In addition to his store Mr. Bombenger has several greenhouses, but the location is no longer favorable for growing. The property is desirable for an apartment building and he expects to realize a good price for that purpose.

As indicating how badly the express companies were snowed under at Christmas, the E. C. Amling Co. states that on one of its shipments to Cleveland December 22 delivery to the customer in that city was attempted January 3. It would seem that the box must have been buried pretty deeply, for if it had miscarried it would have been sold immediately at the place of discovery.

New Year's holiday and between now and Easter will dispose of a larger quantity than in any previous season.

Mrs. F. Stollery sustained injury January 9, when the car in which she, together with a party of friends, was riding, collided with a street car at Wellington avenue and Broadway. The impact hurled the machine through the window of a millinery store on the corner, bringing a load of broken glass down upon the occupants of the car.

F. M. Debois is now with F. Ronsley, 17 East Jackson boulevard.

Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, is much pleased with his Marmon. He has taken several long drives and says the car is all he hoped for.

Clifford Pruner has left the city to resume his work on the road.

The Flower Craft Shop, 1514 Hyde Park boulevard, has a nice, new green and gold light car for its deliveries.

Another automobile for delivery purposes is under contemplation by the E. Wienhoeber Co.

As an indication of how fortune has smiled on R. Scheffler, who succeeded E. T. Wanzer at Wheaton after nine years in his employ, a few months after taking possession he bought a 125-horsepower steam boiler and put steam throughout the eight houses to help and meet any emergencies in the heating line. Upon completion of this improvement, which also called for a couple of traps and receivers, he found opportunity to add another house 36x250. This and several smaller improvements completed, also the peony acreage increased to five, he decided a newer and more modern home was needed, so a 10-room residence was built, with all conveniences even to piping steam from the greenhouse boilers, and the entire place was electrically lighted. At present another house 36x250 is being glazed and will be planted to sweet peas.

Paulus Bros., at the corner of Sunnyside and Clark streets, had a pretty window of azaleas and cyclamens last week. Geo. Paulus says "Christmas business a year ago was extraordinary, but this last one had it beat a mile."

Chas. Grabig, 1843 Irving Park boulevard, says December was the heaviest he has had in funeral work. Mr. Grabig has an especially good stock of cyclamens and ferns.

Out of over 400 Christmas day deliveries only one order went wrong, says Mrs. Williams, proprietor of the Atlas Floral Co.

Mrs. Mary Koeble, 1935 Irving Park boulevard, looks forward to doing a larger business in 1917. She has the assistance of her two sons and an excellent location with no nearby competition.

Victor Bergman is well satisfied with the business at Friedman's for the first week of the new year. He says it held up even better than he hoped.

Completing the balance sheet last week, A. Henderson says he was extremely well pleased with the showing of increase in sales in 1916 over those for 1915 by Henderson & Co.

Commenting on the success had with Ophelia this season, N. J. Wietor says a part of the plants grown by Wietor Bros. are grafted and a part are own

J. Mangel has recently arranged with the A. L. Randall Co. for the installation of one of its large combination fountains and rainbow aquariums, to be placed in the conservatory at the rear of his Palmer House store.

One notes with interest that only two persons have served as president of the village of Morton Grove since its organization, nearly a quarter century ago, and that both are florists. George Harrer was the first president, serving fourteen years, being succeeded by A. F. Poehlmann, the present incumbent.

It is reported that the holidays brought trouble to several local growers through the interruption of shipments of coal from the mines. Several cases are reported in which growers had to go into the open market and pay high prices for a supply, while others are said to have been scraping the bottoms of the bins when delayed shipments arrived.

J. E. Yeats, of Champaign, Ill., was in town January 10, exhibiting blooms of his new red rose, Sarah Yeats. He has booked many orders for young stock from those who will give it a trial next season.

F. Breitmeyer, Mount Clemens, Mich., was in the city last week.

Wm. Desmond, Minneapolis, Minn., was a visitor in the city last week.

Among the week's visitors has been Henry C. Forster, secretary of Fetters Flowers, Inc., Detroit, and also secretary of the Detroit Florists' Club. With him was A. H. Schumacher, a former Chicagoan now with the Fetters corporation.

The next meeting will take place February 6, at the F. J. Knecht & Co. store.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business since the holidays has seen a slump that makes conditions markedly different from what they were last year right after the holiday season. Stock is much more plentiful, and of course the demand seems to have decreased accordingly. Prices are down, but although stock in general is comparatively cheap, there is no glut of any one item. Roses are in good supply and there even is a sufficient quantity of Russells to take care of all orders. This stock has been scarce for a long time, especially at Christmas, and it is a distinct relief to be able to fill orders satisfactorily once more.

Carnations are in quantity and are moved in large lots. The market is kept fairly clean and prices are fair, considering the supply and small demand. Violets are in fine shape and in good supply; they are moving readily at fair prices. The supply of sweet peas has increased to some extent and, while the blooms clean up daily, there is just about enough to take care of the demand.

Cattleyas are in good supply and some exceptionally fine blooms are being cut; prices range from $6 to $7.50 per dozen, and the demand, while not strong, is sufficient to keep the cut moving nicely. The baby roses are being called for more each day for corsage work, and they provide a welcome change from violets and sweet peas. Valley of course remains scarce, but it is about the only item that cannot be furnished in quantity. The quality is not of the best,

There is room for improvement in present conditions and a comparison with last year's at this time is not favorable. Last year, however, was abnormal to a degree, and, while the condition was both healthy and profitable, it is only to be expected that the mark it set cannot be reached every year.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market has held firmly since the holidays. All varieties of flowers are in moderate supply and in brisk demand. Prices are fair for the season. The exceptions to this rule are the whites; Paper White narcissus chiefly, which is in oversupply.

Carnations are coming in much more freely than a week ago. This has brought the price down a point, making them much lower in price than at this time last season, when they were extremely scarce. At the lower price the market has been taking them well. Short-stemmed roses are in good supply, but the demand for them is so active that they bring excellent figures. Long-stemmed roses are rather scarce; they meet with a limited demand. Sweet peas have suffered from the dark weather, which, possibly with the aid of too high a temperature, has caused the buds to drop; the finer weather of the last few days has helped them. Daffodils are becoming more plentiful; freesia has arrived; Lilium rubrum or splendens is in good form; superb white lilac is coming in freely. These are the principal features of a buoyant market, for which few of the growers have enough stock to bring them in more returns than are required to replenish their coal piles. They look for an improvement in the supply soon.

The First Assembly.

The Assembly balls of Philadelphia are historic. They date back to the days when the F. F. P.'s first got together to entertain the men and women of national celebrity. Invitations to the Assemblies have always been prized by those living in other cities. Invitations to subscribe have been equally, if not more, prized by those living in our own city.

The decorations, from the simplicity of the colonial days, have grown to a degree of elaborateness that has more than kept pace with the progress made in art. The decorator of today must paint a floral picture, aided by every accessory at his command that will please the most æsthetic taste. This picture must be original, beautiful and, above all, it must form a harmonious background for the ball itself; or, to be more explicit, the decorations must enhance, not rival, the charming scene on the ballroom floor.

The decorations for the First Assembly ball held in the ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford on the evening of Friday, January 5, 1917, commenced at the Chancellor street entrance to the hotel, where wild smilax and palms, mostly kentias, were used effectively on the broad, winding stairway that leads to the ballroom. A handsome bank of foliage was arranged behind the patronesses, who received at the entrance to the ballroom. The well proportioned, large ballroom was decorated with originality and good taste. The background was formed of hemlock and spruce, which lent an air of dignity and added a delicious woodland fragrance. The immense chandelier that hung over the center of the room gave out a rich, soft, pink light from its shaded globes; delicate festoons of smilax enhanced the effect.

The balconies were simply garlanded with wild smilax. The southern smilax formed the bold outline that hung in curves from pillar to pillar. The more delicate greenhouse-grown smilax was used to soften these lines with finer tracery. Handsome baskets of tiger lilies, Lilium splendens, and of deep pink carnations—Mrs. C. W. Ward—ornamented the pillars. Specimen pink azaleas relieved the deep green of the hemlock and the spruce.

The Clover room, which adjoined the ballroom, was turned into a garden. There were grassy mat walks, arbors, rustic seats and plants and flowers. The effect was extremely beautiful. Perhaps the most striking features were a group of handsome Cibotium Schiedei plants; a fountain of colored water surrounded by tropical plants; some specimen boxwoods; a pergola and prettily arranged sprays of Bignonia venusta. This lovely yellow flower, which is rarely or never seen in commerce, was grown expressly for the decorators. It is easily bruised, so that great care is necessary in placing it safely in position. When placed, with a background of green, on trellis or arbor, it holds up well and is lovely in its rich simplicity.

There were three dinners of unusual size, seventy covers each, on the roof garden of the Bellevue-Stratford, before the Assembly, not to mention a number of smaller dinners in other rooms of the hostelry. One of these dinners was unusually elaborate. The table was oval in shape, hollow in the center, the guests sitting around the outside. The hollow space in the center was filled by a colored electric fountain, rising from a pool of water; around the pool were flowers and plants. About 500 cut Easter lilies were used in this hollow, together with a number of pink azaleas and ferns. Snapdragons and sweet peas were used on the table. The men's boutonnieres were single gardenias.

The supper room for the Assembly ball was laid in the Palm room and adjacent rooms. There were perhaps 200 small tables for four persons each, and one large table for the patronesses. The small tables were each decorated with a single vase or a basket of flowers. One-third of the tables each had a tall vase of Beauties or lilies. Two-thirds of the tables each had a low basket of pink roses. The patronesses were adorned with Beauties and pink roses. There were between 800 and 1,000 guests.

If this picture of floral loveliness is clear, the credit for it is due the brothers Habermehl, who personally arranged it in every detail and courteously explained their work.

Various Notes.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society met in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel January 4. Progress was made. The most important detail is that the American Rose Society will probably put up a rose garden at the forthcoming show in March. If this is done it will insure at least two and probably three rose gardens.

The January meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was held in the library at Vernon park January 11. Edwin Matthews spoke on "Oriental and Occidental Gardens."

The exhibits at the January meeting of the Florists' Club were: Edward Towill, of Roslyn, Pa., pink seedling rose, cross between Maryland and Shawyer; Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, Ind., Carnation Merry Christmas; S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, Mass., Carnations Doris and Rosalia; Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, Mass., Carnation Abington; C. F. Guenther, of Hamburg, N. Y., Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late White. The out-of-town exhibits were staged by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

A fire of unknown origin broke out in the boiler room of the Robert Craig Co. range at Norwood, Pa., about 6 p. m. January 6. Despite heroic efforts of the night fireman, the flames spread to the first-built section of the shed, burning out the props that supported the line of 10-inch feed pipes. This cut off the heat from the greenhouses. Thanks to oil stoves loaned by friends and to a mild night, the contents of the greenhouses were saved. The new shed was damaged. The heating plant was put into commission the next day. About thirty boxes of glass and the lumber for the shed will put the place in order. Robert A. Craig says that a pleasant feature of the scare was the many proffers of help from fellow florists, who loaned oil stoves and offered their greenhouses to house the plants.

J. H. Pyle and son, of Kennett Square, Pa., were in town recently.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. received about 250 bunches of extremely well grown white lilac in a single shipment. The company expects lavender lilac in a fortnight.

Franklin Ely reports heavy orders for flower seeds at the H. F. Michell Co. house. The report was made before cockcrow in the morning and was interspersed with many more cockcrows before it was concluded; in short, the poultry show was on this week.

M. J. Callahan reports a heavy mortuary demand.

The Forrest Flower Shop is originating some pretty specialties.

The late John W. McIntyre commenced work with Heron and Nisbet, retail florists of this city. He then went to Edward Reid, where he earned an enviable reputation as a hard-working wholesaler. After leaving Mr. Reid he was connected with H. H. Battles and the Leo Niessen Co. He was then in the wholesale business on his own account for a time. This business he sold to Walter Davis. Phil.

The Market.

Carnations and sweet peas are arriving in larger quantities and there is a larger demand for them. While not high, the prices of most flowers keep up well. Roses especially are high, but their quality is good. Paper Whites are plentiful and violets are of good quality and plentiful. There is a good supply of orchids. Fern baskets, and baskets with mixed flowers, pussy willows, etc., seem quite popular. Mignonette of good quality but of limited quantity is coming into the market. Good callas and other lilies may be had. There is plenty of stevia to supply the demand and daffodils are more plentiful. Potted tulips appear to be more abundant. There has been good funeral work during the last two weeks and weddings have helped to add to the volume of sales.

Various Notes.

Fred P. Wolfinger reports that the 1916 holiday season was the best he ever had. He had to provide a large blanket last week, which required more than 12,000 violets.

William A. Allen, of Union township, has been selected a member of the grand jury for the January term of the Union county courts.

The January meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club was held this week in the Krueger Auditorium. The club discussed the question of holding another flower show.

The Market.

Business was so heavy at Christmas that it was feared there would be a lull as soon as it was over, but instead there not only was a lively demand for everything at New Year's, but business also has kept up to the high-water mark since. Perhaps there has never been a season when the trade was so generally pleased with the after-holiday business as this year.

The weather man has done all he could to give us bad conditions. Yet flowers of all kinds are cleaned out every day and nothing good goes to the dump. There has been little new in the supply of stock. Many of the azaleas that did not get in for Christmas have come in and have been sold. Peas are perhaps coming in more freely and there are plenty of home-grown orchids to meet all demands.

Snowdrops are beginning to open outdoors and the first daffodils are showing buds. We need nothing so much as a cold wave. Buds on the early-blooming shrubbery are showing signs of swelling, and in another week we shall have the first blooms, if the weather does not change.

Charles Tritschler, who established a business of his own a little over a year ago, is propagating bedding plants heavily. He is building up a good business in cut flowers.

McIntyre Bros. are cutting orchids freely. Their carnations are a feature again this winter, and their new white sport is one of the most fragrant, as well as one of the largest and freest-blooming varieties, in the south.

The Joy Floral Co. is shipping more cut flowers this winter than ever before. The feature of the cut flowers at present is sweet peas of exceptional quality.

Geny Bros. have been fortunate with their azaleas this season, having received them in good condition. As a result they are offering fine stock.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Although the advent of the new year did not create much of a stir in the flower business, there was a satisfactory demand occasioned by receptions, dinner and dancing parties. Roses and carnations, which were cleared out at Christmas, are coming in more plentifully. The shorter grades of roses are most in demand. Carnations are arriving in large quantity and better quality, while daffodils, narcissi and tulips have made their appearance. Violets are rather short but promise well, and sweet peas find a ready sale.

The Market.

The market was in good condition last week. There was plenty of stock of everything seasonable, with prices quite low. Business is reported good with the retailers since the holidays. The stores are using up considerable stock of all kinds, but not enough to clear the big receipts. The local-grown stock has the call and holds up much better than shipped-in consignments.

There is a large cut of carnations, with prices ranging from $1 to $2 for the best stock. Enchantress seems to take the lead over any other variety. Violets are coming in finely, the clear, cold days having brought on a larger crop since the holidays. They make 50 cents per hundred for the best. Roses are arriving in substantial quantities, especially the Killarney varieties, but meet with a slow sale. Beauties, Ophelia, Sunburst and Russell sell best, at reasonable prices in all grades.

Paper Whites continue a glut at present and are down to $2 per hundred. Orchids are in large demand, with a bottom price of $6 per dozen for cattleyas. Valley is having a good call, but it has been scarce in this market since the holidays. Callas and Easter lilies are not numerous at present. Sweet peas are coming in nicely and the fancy varieties are in big demand—$1.50 per hundred for the choice. All greens sell well, especially asparagus.

Various Notes.

The officers of the Florists' Club met last week and set the meeting for this week, January 11, at the store of the St. Louis Seed Co., on Washington avenue, which extended the invitation. President Bourdet received many congratulations on his appointment as state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern Missouri.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold its first meeting of the new year January 15, at the Mission Inn Garden. President Young and Secretary Weber say that it is important that all members attend this meeting.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held an interesting meeting last week at the Eleven-Mile House. The topic of the evening was the coming spring flower show. David Geddis and Jules Bourdet were present and laid before the members the plans of the show, and it was voted that every member give his earnest support. The rest of the evening was taken up with a review of the holiday business. The meeting, according to Secretary Deutschmann, was better attended than any one of the last year.

Henry Ostertag and John J. Burke, of Ostertag Bros., spent the greater part of the last week at Jefferson City, Mo., preparing for decorations for the inaugural of Governor-elect Gardner. A carload of plants and cut flowers was taken to Jefferson City.

The new stores recently opened—the Blossom Show, the Rosery, Robinson's, Miss Histon's, those of A. Young & Co. and the Koenig Floral Co.—report splendid trade. These are all in the western part of the city.

Joseph Hauser, of Webster Groves, reports that he cut as many as 10,000 violets for the holidays. It is also reported that he sold the stock of his new single red dahlia to the American Bulb Co., of Chicago.

F. H. Weber took a day off last week and paid a visit to the wholesale district. The busy season has kept Mr. Weber close to his business.

Mrs. Fred Ude, Jr., left this week to join her husband in Florida, where they will winter with their son, Emil, who has large interests there in fruit farms. Mr. Ude's two other sons will run the greenhouse range at Kirkwood.

The various chairmen who have the spring flower show in charge surely are working overtime in order to make this one the largest and best show ever held in St. Louis. The meetings every Tuesday night at Bourdet's are well attended. Any florist may attend and offer suggestions.

Miss M. S. Newman used many orchids and Beauties last week for social work. Miss Armstrong says they have been exceedingly busy with decorative work since the holidays.

Count von Hoffmann, manager for George Waldbart, has been quite sick since the holidays, being confined to his home for several days. The absence of the manager kept Fred Michel and the rest of the force on the jump.

Henry Young & Son, who have a pretty store on Maryland avenue, had a splendid cut of cattleyas from their own place for the holidays. Ray Young is the buyer for the firm in the wholesale district.

F. G. Grossart, son of G. Grossart, of Belleville, Ill., who has had charge of Valhalla cemetery for the last two years, has resigned his position and accepted a position as landscaper for the University of Nebraska, at Lincoln, Neb. He will leave this week to take up his new duties. Mr. Grossart is a 4-year graduate of the Missouri Botanical Garden. He has the best wishes of his many friends in the trade.

Horace Cheeseman, representing Ralph M. Ward & Co., of New York, spent a few days here last week. Mr. Cheeseman is working his way east from the Pacific coast and reports splendid business in his line.

Quite a number of suburban florists visited the wholesale district last week. Among those seen were Charles Meier, Joseph Hauser, W. J. Pilcher, A. S. Cerny, John Steinicke, Rudolph Gross, Hugo Gross, William and Henry Meier, Thomas Kirkwood, G. Hartman, Paul Ahner, A. G. Ahner and Paul Scheidegger. J. J. B.

was done. Prices were well maintained through the holidays, but they are considerably lower now. Funeral work is one of the mainstays of business at present. The supply of stock is good, but the quality is below the average on most items. The demand for roses keeps up well, but the flowers have weak stems and small buds. Some extra fine Francis Scott Key roses are on the market and sell well. A few good Russells are seen; few Ophelia roses arrived last week. American Beauties bring good prices.

Carnations have slackened in supply, but warm sunshine will bring a large supply to the market. The quality of blooms continues good. Easter and calla lilies are arriving in larger supplies and move well. Valley is plentiful and receives a steady but not large call. Cattleyas and cypripediums are not overplentiful, but there are enougth to supply the trade. Extra good sweet peas arrive and sell fast. The demand for stevia is large, but the supply is small. Bouvardia in the double pink moves well, as also does the single white. Freesia is selling well now. Violets move easily; the quality is extra good. Jonquils and Paper White narcissi clear fast. Baby primroses, cut tulips and heliotrope are all found useful for basket work. The supply of green goods is large and includes fern leaves and mahonia sprays from California.

Various Notes.

The opening of the new Citizens' Bank January 2 called for an unusual quantity of flowers, including large baskets of American Beauties, Key roses, azaleas and palms.

Stephen T. Mahoney, with S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, is visiting his brother here, who has undergone a serious operation.

Wilfred Keller is home for the holidays, looking fit and well.

David Scott, of Corfu, N. Y., is sending in some fine Machet mignonette, with stems about two feet long. The stock sells fast.

Cecil Lester, of George B. Hart's, is home suffering from a severe cold.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Wilson and daughter, of Boston, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Dunbar a few days last week. They are on their way to China. Mr. Wilson devoted eleven years to exploring western China and the borderland of Thibet, and spent the year of 1914 in Japan. Some of the rarest plants discovered by Mr. Wilson in his far eastern travels now are growing in Highland park.

G. D. Bailey, of the Allen-Bailey Tag Co., of Dansville, N. Y., called on the trade last week, as also did Emil C. Volz, of the department of floriculture, Cornell University.

Nancy carnations are well liked by Harry Merritt, of St. Paul boulevard. He considers it the best light pink carnation today, with the exception of Pink Delight, which he thinks is hard to beat when grown right. Nancy has a good selling color and is making two or three times the size of plant of other pink varieties. It needs little support; the only support Mr. Merritt has given it is a hairpin wire on each side of the plants. He received his stock late in

The Market.

The weather for a number of days following New Year's day was dark, gloomy and cold. This caused a sharp drop in cut flower receipts, and as a result prices took a brace and markets have cleaned up remarkably well. With clearer skies, such as we are enjoying this week, supplies are coming in more freely, but the January slump has yet to materialize. Roses have shortened up decidedly and are cleaned up without any special effort, the demand for short-stemmed stock being especially strong. Bright colors continue to sell well. Ophelia retains its great popularity. Carnations are selling better than a week ago. Prices ranged from $4 to $6 per hundred during last week. Violets have been rather short, but with more sun are coming in somewhat more freely.

Bulbous flowers are more plentiful. Paper Whites are good and in big demand, but prices are lower than a year ago. Golden Spurs are as yet mostly French and hold their price well. Some tulips are seen, chiefly La Reine. Lilies have been selling better at lower prices, but still are overdone. Valley sells slowly at $4 to $6 per hundred. Of sweet peas there is a large supply at 50 cents to $2 per hundred. Yellow marguerites are also in good supply and demand. Calendulas are meeting with a larger sale than ever before here in winter. Cattleyas are more abundant and somewhat easier, as are gardenias. A good many wallflowers, bachelor's buttons, primroses, mignonette, snapdragons and other miscellaneous flowers are arriving. Green stock continues to move somewhat slowly.

Various Notes.

John McFarland sold out his big lot of poinsettias at the holidays. He follows them with 10,000 giganteum lilies. Many of these now are a foot high and look well. He has just received 50,000 valley pips, but does not expect to receive more, the Allied blockade being too tight.

Mann Bros. are cutting extra fine mignonette, Golden Spur narcissi and La Reine tulips. For Christmas they had a lot of well berried plants of the bright Skimmia Japonica.

George H. Noyes had some superb flowers of the new carnation, Laddie, an immense pale pink variety, from S. J. Goddard, January 6. Seedling No. 148, Dorner's, is promising—smaller, but of a little more taking color even than Laddie.

Among the flowers coming in from W. J. Patterson, of Wollaston, are bunches of the deliciously fragrant Daphne odorata.

C. J. Sloane, of the Flower Exchange, lost a bet New Year's day, which cost him first-class dinners for half a dozen friends at the Quincy House January 2. He will hedge on any future bets.

Peter Volante, of Newton Center, who leased F. E. Palmer's greenhouses and farm there recently, is marketing some really beautiful cyclamens, primulas and Cincinnati begonias. He has over 125,000 trees and shrubs for spring sales.

Newman Wax, father of Martin and Samuel Wax, is home from the city hospital, where he recently underwent a serious operation at the hands of Dr. Howard Lothrop, and is convalescing nicely. Dr. Lothrop says that Mr. Wax Preparations are being made to handle a record attendance at the annual ladies' night and installation meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, January 16. For the field day at Framingham January 20 a special car will leave Park square, Boston, at 1 p. m. sharp. All interested growers are cordially invited to attend.

In a recent issue of The Review it was stated that a storm had wrecked some greenhouses belonging to Henry Eaton, of South Sudbury. The information came from sources which in the past have proved reliable. In this case it proved to be the reverse.

The annual inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held January 13. The president's address, reports of board of trustees and of the various committees will be read. There will be a prize exhibition of plants and flowers. An additional exhibition will be held February 7.

The Welch Bros. Co. did an excellent New Year's business and is more than satisfied with the way orders are coming in. W. N. C.

LANCASTER, PA.

The first week of the new year has been a mild one, and has meant much to the carnations and sweet peas. Today, January 7, the thermometer reads 60 degrees, outdoors.

January 6 the remains of Mrs. Julius P. Siebold, wife of our fellow florist, were laid to rest in Riverview cemetery. She had only been ill for a few days from pneumonia, and her sudden departure came as a shock to all who knew her. She is survived by her husband and son. The sympathy of the trade is extended to husband and son.

P. K. Murphy, manager at the B. F. Barr & Co. store, has been showing some splendid flower arrangements in his window. Baskets of Enchantress carnations, with graceful sprays of buddleia, made an ideal combination. The Russell, Ophelia and Hoosier Beauty roses are easily among the best grown in Lancaster county.

The Rosery in its new store on Center square, which formerly was known as Antes' Rose Shop, is doing a good business.

Mrs. G. Goldbach was much pleased with the Christmas business, both at her store on North Duke street and at her new store at Columbia, Pa.

H. A. Schroyer had several large decorations recently. Christmas business with him was much in excess of former years. Miss Carrie Steckman is an able assistant at the Schroyer store.

The next meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club will be held January 18. We expect to have the newer varieties of carnations on exhibition, and Elmer J. Weaver will speak on carnations. At 2 p. m. the club will leave the Square by trolley for Strasburg, to visit Charles B. Herr's and Amos N. Rohrer's greenhouses. This annual visit in January to Strasburg is looked upon as one of the red-letter days of the club. All florists are invited to attend.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE new prices announced by the American Can Co. mean an advance of 16 cents per dozen for 3s.

THE blockade restriction promulgated October 6, preventing the importation of grass seeds into Norway, has been canceled.

ACCORDING to A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, the onion set market is firm, with heavy inquiries coming in, especially from the south.

THE arrival of the first flock of 1917 catalogues indicates that an extremely small percentage of the trade has accepted the action of the American Seed Trade Association in recommending the adoption of the cental system.

The first edition of Burpee's Annual for 1917 is 600,000 copies. "Such a large edition," says a pink slip, "must necessarily go to press before the result of the season's harvest is definitely known. Sweet corn is the shortest crop in years. Owing to the scarcity of first-class sweet corn," the prices printed in the book are revised as per the insert.

MORSE'S SWEET PEA NOTES.

Edited by Lester L. Morse, C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, who have perhaps as wide a knowledge of sweet peas as anyone in America, have issued a new book of "Field Notes," brought down to include the season of 1916. The issue lists 1,870 names, with data regarding each. It is by far the most complete record to date and in addition to the descriptions there are lists of preferred varieties in each class and color. There also are several cultural and historical articles. It makes a book of 220 pages. In order to make the work a not too great expense, a price of $1.50 has been put on the book.

BIDS ON FREE SEEDS.

The lack of foreign proposals was the principal feature at the opening of the bids for vegetable and flower seeds for the Congressional distribution of 1918 by the Department of Agriculture at Washington January 9. The only foreign bidder was Denaiffe & Son, Carignan, France, who put in a bid through Charles Johnson, of Berkeley, Cal. In this respect the war made a noticeable difference in the bidding. The number of bidders was reduced to about two-thirds the number who made offers last year and the prices are noticeably higher. A number of seedsmen from the Pacific coast and eastern points attended the opening of the bids, including Thomas Kimberlin, of San Jose, Cal.; Joseph Edmundson, of the California Seed Growers' Association, San Jose; T. W. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.;

BREACH OF EXPRESS WARRANTY.

Tennessee Supreme Court Ruling.

An instructive view of the law of seedsmen's liability for failure of seed sold to conform to the kind contracted to be sold is afforded by the decision handed down by the Tennessee Supreme court the other day in the case of Ford vs. Farmers' Exchange, 189 Southwestern Reporter, 368.

The court holds that for the breach of an express warranty that seed is true to name, where the seller knows the use for which it is bought and the buyer plants it in ignorance of its true character, the measure of recoverable damages is the value of a crop had the seed been as warranted, such as ordinarily would have been produced that year, less the value of the crop actually raised.

Facts in the Case.

This suit was begun by Ford to recover damages for the breach of an alleged warranty made by defendant in the sale of watermelon seed.

It appears that plaintiff has for many years been engaged in raising melons for market. There was testimony tending to show that defendant had sold plaintiff his melon seed for several years, the variety being known as Klekley Sweets, and, knowing of the use intended to be made of it, guaranteed that the seeds sold on this particular occasion, which were to come from a new and untried producer, were of that variety.

Plaintiff made expenditures in renting land, preparing the soil and planting the seed, but on the crop coming to or nearing maturity it was discovered that the seeds were not as warranted, but of an inferior variety. An examination of the seeds would not disclose whether they were Klekley Sweets or not.

The vines produced small melons which were not readily sold on the market. In fact, plaintiff testified that he was able to obtain only about $100 for the crop, selling some of the melons at 50 cents a hundred.

There was also proof tending to show that, had the seed been true to kind, the crop would have been of a considerably greater value.

The Defense.

The defendant tendered $2 and the costs accrued in the case. The tender represented the difference between the market value of the amount of seed delivered to plaintiff by defendant and the same amount of Klekley Sweets. The defense was that the measure of damages was at most that sum.

The trial judge held with this insistence and gave peremptory instruction to the jury to find for defendant.

The Court of Civil Appeals, on appeal, held that this ruling was erroneous and remanded the cause to the lower court for retrial.

In modifying and affirming the judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals, the Supreme court says:

"We hold that this was a proper disposition of the case on the part of the appellate court, though we reach the result on a different theory of the law.

When the Crop Fails.

"There have been developed two rules in respect to damages growing out of the warranting of seed that proved not true to name. The first class of cases, dealing with seed, improperly delivered under the contract, that is of such quality that no crop is produced, announce the restrictive rule that there is no proper basis for the allowance of expected profits as damages. The rule in such case appears to be that the items of damages recoverable are those of actual outlay, such as the price paid for the seed, the expense of preparing the soil to receive the seed (less general benefit to the land therefrom), the expense of planting, and the loss sustained from having the land lie idle for such period of time as the use of it was lost. An Inferior Variety.

"The other and more liberal rule is applied in cases where the defective seed germinates and produces a crop that is inferior in quality and value to the one that would have been produced in the same circumstances had the seed been as warranted. In such case, by an almost unbroken line of authorities in England and America, there is held to be a reasonable basis on which to estimate the profit that would have been made had the seed been of contract quality. It is held that this basis is found in the certainly ascertainable value of the crop actually produced, the court having only to estimate the difference in value between that crop and the value of the crop that would ordinarily have been produced under the same circumstances if seed true to name had been supplied by the seller. The loss is held not to be conjectural and the damages not to be speculative or beyond the contemplation of the contracting parties.

A New Jersey Precedent.

"In Wolcott v. Mount, 36 N. J. Law, 262, 13 Am. Rep. 438, this basis for the allowance of expected profits is thus recognized:

"'The loss of the value of a crop for which the seed had not been sown, the yield from which, if planted, would depend upon the contingencies of weather and season, would be excluded as incapable of estimation, with that degree of certainty which the law exacts in the proof of damages. But * * * if a crop has been sowed on the ground prepared for cultivation, and the plaintiff's complaint is that, because of the inferior quality of the seed, a crop of less value is produced, by these circumstances the means would be furnished to enable the jury to make a proper estimation of the injury resulting from the loss of profits of this character. * * * The uncertainty of the quantity of the crop, dependent upon the weather and season, was removed by the yield of the ground under the precise circumstances to which the seed ordered would have been exposed.'

"See, also, White v. Miller, 71 N. Y. 118, 27 Am. Rep. 13; Vaughan's Seed Store v. Stringfellow, supra.

A Potato Case.

"In the case of Hurley v. Buchi, 10 Lea (78 Tenn.) 346, it appeared that Buchi, a market gardener, applied to Hurley to buy Early Rose potatoes, informing the latter that they were desired to plant for the early market; that that variety matured about the middle of June, and was worth on the market $3.50 per bushel. A different kind, actually furnished and planted, did not mature until August. The court disallowed the claim of the plaintiff that he was entitled to recover as damages the increased value of the potatoes he would have raised and sold if the seed potatoes delivered had been of the Early Rose variety; and this, on the ground that the claim was based on the assumption that, if the variety ordered had been delivered, they would have been planted, cultivated and matured at a given time (in June), and that therefore speculative profits would be involved. The speculative element, we conceive, was that the anticipated crop would have matured on a date that substantially differed from the date when the seed potatoes that were actually furnished would and did mature.

"In its particular ruling on the point of speculative damages, the case of Hurley v. Buchi may, and we think should, be treated as not out of harmony with the widely accepted general rule, but as announcing an exception to it, based on the fact above referred to. The uncertainty in the quantity of the crop, dependent on weather and season, under the facts of that case, was not removed by any aiding reference to the actual yield under precisely, or fairly similar circumstances. The weather at or near the date of the maturing of 'Early Rose' seed potatoes might have been such as to materially affect the quantity and quality of the production, while not having identical effect upon the later maturing variety.

The Measure of Damages.

"Broadly stated, the rule is that for the breach of an express warranty that seed is true to name, where the seller knows the use for which the same is bought and the purchaser sows in ignorance of the true character of the seed, the measure of recoverable damages is the value of a crop had the seed been as warranted, such as would ordinarily have been produced that year, less the value of the crop actually raised. Wolcott v. Mount, 38 N. J. Law, 496, 20 Am. Rep. 425; Van Wyck v. Allen, 69 N. Y. 61, 25 Am. Rep. 136; Fuhrman v. Interior Warehouse Co., 64 Wash. 159, 116 Pac. 666, 37 L. R. A. (N. S.) 89; Edgar v. Joseph Breck Corp., 172 Mass. 581, 52 N. E. 1083; 2 Sedg. Dam. (9th Ed.) 768.

"The judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is modified and affirmed. Remand for a trial of the cause in the Circuit court."

EUROPEAN MARKETS.

The U. S. Department of Commerce has the following to say on European markets for American seeds:

From Consul Frost, at Queenstown, Ireland:

Leading seedsmen agree that, except in the bulb trade, there has been no special difficulty in securing stocks of seeds. Vegetable seeds for this district are principally cabbage, turnip, and mangold. These, together with the ordinary garden seeds, such as beets, carrots, beans, peas, etc., are procured from England. The counties of Essex, Lincolnshire, and Bedfordshire furnish the bulk of them. Local dealers feel that these English growers are in such close touch with Irish needs that it would be difficult for American seedsmen to get a footing here. The only American seeds of this kind that reach Ireland are sweet peas.

The trade in grass seeds is much larger, but carload lots would be rather heavy for Cork dealers. The imports by water during the year ended July 31, 1916, were 1,075 tons, and to these should be added a good quantity brought down by rail from Dublin.

A certain proportion of the grass seed received before the war was from Germany. Standard meadow seeds are known locally as farm seeds, or agricultural seeds. Vegetable seeds are in a different category. Cowpeas, alfalfa and maize are not producible here by ordinary cultivation, and the only large trade is that in grass seeds. The seed industry is thoroughly developed and highly organized. The best opportunity for Americans would be to push the sales of some new and inexpensive clover or timothy seeds of a high quality.

The present average prices for various classes of farm seeds per hundredweight of 112 pounds are: Cocksfoot, $24.33; meadow fescue, $21.90; hard fescue, $18.25; dogstail, $30.41; timothy, $9.73; white clover, $48.67; alsike clover, $24.33; cowgrass, $24.33; red clover, $23.12; trefoil, $11.68.

[A list of wholesale buyers of seeds at Belfast and Dublin may be obtained at the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, its district or coöperative offices. Refer to file No. 82837.]

From Consul Young, at Carlsbad, Austria:

Far more forage seed than lawn seed is imported for the Carlsbad market, principally timothy, raygrass and meadow grass. Seed should be packed in 50-kilo (110-pound) or 100-kilo sacks. Under normal conditions the cheapest route for shipment from America would seem to be to Hamburg, thence up the Elbe by boat. Shipments to Eger, Komotau, and northwest Bohemia would go on the Elbe to Aussig and thence by train. In the near future it will be possible to ship to Prague from Hamburg entirely by water via the Elbe and the Moldau. Some shipments have come via Stettin, Germany.

Before the war, raygrass and timothy were delivered by English and Scotch firms at Hamburg, freight, insurance and duty to that point paid, at 20 to 35 shillings ($4.86 to $8.51) per 100 kilos (220 pounds), depending on quality. After the war started, seed was imported from Scandinavian countries in larger quantities than previously. Medium-grade raygrass cost 100 to 110 marks per 100 kilos (mark = $0.238.). It is estimated that such seed would now cost 150 marks or more.

Firms previously handling American seeds report different terms of sale, which seem to have ranged from three-fourths cash with order, balance on delivery, to payment in ninety days, one and one-half per cent off for cash.

Besides Bohemian firms, Hamburg houses are interested in this trade. Hamburg, for this country, seems to be the center, so far as foreign grass seeds are concerned.

[A list of wholesale seed dealers in Austria may be obtained from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, its district or coöperative offices. Refer to file No. 82772.]

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.—"Advance Wholesale Prices for Market Gardeners," an illustrated list of vegetable seeds, onion sets, seed potatoes, vegetable plants and roots, clover seeds and poultry foods; a rather comprehensive catalogue, though printed so closely as to be kept within the limit of sixteen pages.

Griffing Nurseries, Port Arthur, Tex.—A handsomely illustrated catalogue of general nursery stock, roses, greenhouse and bedding plants; forty-eight pages, including several pages of suggestions on planning and planting grounds. A number of the pictures are colored. Special prominence is given to pecan and other nut trees; fig, banana and guava trees; citrus fruits, eucalypti, magnolias, and other stock suitable for the southern climate.

Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.—Fourteenth annual catalogue of chrysanthemums, roses, carnations and perennials. The book contains eighty pages, or twelve pages more than its predecessor of last year, and ranks at least as high as any previous edition in carefulness of arrangement and in excellence of typography and illustrations. Of course the Totty specialty, the chrysanthemum, has first place in the book—first in order and in prominence. Among the most notable of the mums are a half dozen of the Wells-Pockett-Totty novelties and the Tuxedo collection of Japanese anemones.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.—Wholesale catalogue of roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, greenhouse flowering plants, palms and other ornamentals, bedding plants and perennials; forty pages, clearly printed, finely illustrated, and bound in a cover of particularly neat design. The greenhouse roses are listed and described in the first six pages; near the end of the book is a list of hardy garden roses. In the chrysanthemum list, large space is given to the pompon, single and hardy varieties.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston, Mass.—"Farquhar's Garden Annual," a comprehensive and carefully compiled catalogue of seeds, bulbs, miscellaneous plants, perennials, roses, general nursery stock, implements and supplies; 176 extra large pages, accurately and clearly printed and well illustrated. Contains some interesting lists of the newer and rarer plants, including many of those collected by E. H. Wilson in the wilds of China.

Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, O.—"The Holco Seed Book for 1917," an illustrated catalogue of "Holco quality" seeds, bulbs, plants, roses, ornamental nursery stock, fertilizers and sundries. The list of sundries is extensive, comprising lawn mowers, rollers, cultivators, sprinklers, shears, wire trellises, plant tubs, and other tools and requisites for the lawn, garden and greenhouse.

Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Wholesale catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants, fertilizers, garden tools, insect destroyers, poultry supplies, etc.; 108 large pages, illustrated, besides a colored insert which draws attention to the company's grass seed mixtures. At the beginning is a conspicuous "special announcement of discontinuance of consignment terms." A warning is given as to the shortage in the bean crop, and this statement is added: "On account of the fictitious values that some have placed on the stock, we have omitted from this catalogue prices on wax and green-podded beans, and we will undertake to give customers benefit of lowest prices."

Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.—"The Glory of the Garden," a catalogue of gladioli; sixteen pages, well illustrated. The first half of the book is occupied by cultural directions, and general information about the Cowee place and the Cowee specialty. In addition to the alphabetical list, comprising "the cream of the world's best varieties," many carefully assorted collections are offered.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.—Two of the annual series of Burpee seed books have been received this week—the general catalogue, entitled "Burpee's Annual for 1917," and "The Red List," intended "for seedsmen and dealers only, who buy to sell again." These books represent the forty-first year of the Burpee business, but the first year under the management of the new generation of Burpees, David and W. Atlee, Jr. Therefore the young men preface the Annual with these words: "For forty years W. Atlee Burpee used this page to convey his word of greeting to the thousands who stood so loyally with him in the development of the greatest mail order seed business in the world. He started as a boy of 18 and worked faithfully until the end, that he might serve the American people with the best seed it is possible to produce. He wrote last year's catalogue in his own hand, and it had gone to press when he died—November 26. W. Atlee Burpee grew seeds not only to sell, but to grow again. He never considered his work a business, but a vocation. He wanted no one to pay for his seeds unless they grew and then only what was just and fair. The following quotation is characteristic of the spirit so well implanted by our late founder—it is this splendid spirit of service that governs the Burpee business: 'The Burpee business is builded not for the present only, but with an outlook to the future. A business that has no vision of the future, or the object of which is mere money-making, would not be worthy a life's work.' During the last forty years the house of Burpee has introduced more varieties of flowers and vegetables that are now in general use than have any three other firms combined. As sons of the founder, we promise the same real service, the same standard of quality, the same careful attention to every detail—a continuance of the policy laid down by our father." The size of the Annual has been increased to 204 pages, as compared with last year's 182. Thirty Burpee varieties of stock are beautifully illustrated in colors.

D. Landreth Seed Co., Bristol, Pa.—A combination catalogue, or two catalogues bound in one. A 24-page wholesale list is followed by an 88-page illustrated retail list. This, says the company, forms a "convenient arrangement under one cover, as, by turning to the retail pages indicated in the wholesale list, the merchant can at once find a description of the variety in the retail list, with the indicated retail value at the date the catalogue was sent to the printer." Another notable feature of the book is that the prices in the wholesale list are all quoted according to the cental system, and the list is preceded by a table which "enables anyone to find a near equivalent of pound prices of beans, corn and peas by the bushel." The Landreths state their belief, however, that "it will be found better to disregard dry measure and reckon only in terms of weight on all seeds."

George L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.—Illustrated catalogue of dahlias; fifty-six pages, besides the cover, which is embellished with colored pictures of two new varieties. The introductory pages contain "pointers on growing dahlias" and an explanation of the rules for the classification of dahlias, as adopted by the American Dahlia Society. Mr. Stillman draws particular attention to a group of dahlias which he has named the "Loma Family"; it consists, he says, "of twenty entirely new and distinctive creations, among the newest varieties originated by me and announced here for the first time."

STORING BULBS.

Please tell me how to cure bulbs, such as freesias, Spanish iris and daffodils. I have been digging them after the leaves die and putting them loose in a dry shed, but they seem to shrivel.

Bulbs of Spanish iris, freesias and daffodils, if they do not keep successfully in a dry state in boxes, should be packed in sand. Treated thus, they should not lose any of their plumpness.

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

Everyone seems to have been well satisfied with the holiday business, it in many cases being double that of last year's.

Boyle & Darnaud, the largest growers, had all their choicest stock just right for the trade—fine cyclamens, valley, Beauties and orchids in plenty. Mr. Darnaud is responsible for the statement that the exposition is to go on for another three months and that already a great many social affairs are on the program.

George Otto reports excellent business and Miss A. M. Rainford says her orders were larger and better than last year's, especially in all classes of wreaths and evergreens. H. R. R.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The cold weather continued, and stock became scarcer after Christmas and up to New Year's day. As slightly better weather conditions obtained at the beginning of this week, the hopes of the growers were raised a little, and, while still cold at the time of writing, there is a prospect of better things to come. Outdoor carnations are still small, and owing to the check received do not open freely; but a few days of fine weather and an improvement doubtless will be seen. Indoor freesias appeared in the market the last week in the old year, nearly two weeks earlier than usual. They brought high prices on account of the scarcity of other stock and their own good quality. Good indoor carnations sell on sight at good prices, and the market for indoor roses is still firm. There are no outdoor-grown roses worth mentioning.

All small flowers suitable for corsage bouquets are scarce, and this has led to a big demand for orchids. Cattleyas have fallen far behind the demand, and phalænopsis and other small-flowering kinds are good property. Greens of all kinds are shortening in quantity, but the quality is good. Pot plants are scarce.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

Possibly the wholesalers never had a harder row to hoe than this Christmas holiday and the succeeding days. The demand led the supply so far that not half of the orders could be filled.

Various Notes.

The first freesias of the season appeared at the S. Murata & Co. store December 24, including some excellent Purity. This concern has not decided on a new location, it being rather hard to find a central location large enough for the increasing business.

J. Ginsburg, of Salt Lake City, Utah, has been visiting in the city, intending to put in about a month in all. His brother has charge during his absence.

By the time this appears in print, Rudolph Fischer, of Santa Anita, will be cutting heavily of his Purity and colored freesias, both of which are in grand shape; in fact, Mr. Fischer says he never had finer stock.

Louis F. Darnell, of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., is here on his silver wedding trip. Mr. Darnell has been with his present employers more than twenty-seven years.

As the building in which he is located has to be wrecked, O. W. Saakes will have to find temporary quarters while rebuilding goes on. It is understood he will return to one of the new stores in the theater building to be erected on the site. One of the best table decorations put up by Mr. Saakes this season called for about 200 cattleyas.

The Howard & Smith store looked more or less depleted after the holidays, but on account of its size and the fine plant stock always displayed it is attractive at all times. Manager Grover, of this department, says that the business was away beyond expectations, though these were high.

Norris & Son have decided to relinquish the store in the Rosslyn hotel, after running it about one year.

The Roserie showed a good window of plants and pink roses, some pretty stock of Cocos Weddelliana giving a light and graceful effect.

W. Armacost & Co. are sending in some well finished Lilium Harrisii, both plants and cuts. The roses coming from the Sawtelle range are the talk of the town and probably there has never been such excellent stock in quantity as this concern has grown this year.

Manager W. Wern, of Wright's Flower Shop, gives a glowing account of the after-Christmas business. Several good parties at the Country Club and a big debutante party at Pasadena were among the orders. The rose stock is arriving satisfactorily from the ranch.

At Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson's some pretty cineraria plants are shown.

F. Lichtenberg reports excellent business. That skilled decorator, Bert Bateman, has again been demonstrating his ability in working out novel ideas. A table of red roses covered with artificial snow does not seem particularly striking, but the way it was worked out brought out many "oh's" and "ah's" from guests present. Mr. Lichtenberg is well satisfied with business since the holidays.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society called for January 3 does not appear to have been a brilliant affair. Changes in officers and place of meeting have not panned out as well as the authors of these changes thought, which is much to be regretted.

C. Lewis, formerly with the Freeman-Lewis Co., now is connected with one of the biggest moving picture studios here. His well known artistic abilities will stand him in just as good stead in this line of endeavor as in the flower business, and he has the best wishes of everyone in the trade.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

All the florists in this vicinity are wearing smiles over the outcome of holiday business. Judging from the reports at the various downtown stores and from the nurseries round about, the season from every point of view was the most satisfactory one ever experienced here. Stock showed good average quality, was sufficiently plentiful to care for requirements fairly well and prices were well maintained. A gratifying feature was that business held up better than usual between Christmas and New Year's, and is keeping up well since the second holiday. Eastern business is curtailed somewhat by snow blocking the trains; still, a good deal of stock is being shipped.

Freesias are one of the important items at present. The violet situation has been rather peculiar this season, weather conditions having interfered with the violet's progress more than in former years. Early frosts, hail storms, heavy rains and extreme cold have taken turns in holding them back. Just as they would about recover from one setback, it seemed some other unfavorable condition would develop. At present the stems are rather short and the flowers poor, as a result of the hard rains and cold late in December, but a little sunshine will bring out a fine cut.

The supply of roses is about equal to the demand. There is a fine cut of Sunburst; Ward and Russell are strong; Ophelia holds up well and many are shipped. The carnation cut is increasing, but the demand is good and prices are fairly steady. In fact, the carnation market is in better shape than for several years. For a time more carnations were grown in this vicinity than the market could absorb, the quality was second rate and this flower was the cause of much dissatisfaction. Realizing the situation, many of the growers curtailed their output, so now the supply is about equal to the demand and the flowers are greatly improved.

Daffodils, narcissi and other bulbous stock are rapidly increasing in both supply and demand. Azaleas are the principal feature in potted plants, the reason being that they were not ready for Christmas. They bring from $2.50 to $4, the same as they brought during the holiday season, however.

Various Notes.

The Misses Hannon say that New Year's business was hampered considerably by shortage of stock, but that they are well pleased with holiday sales taken as a whole.

T. Mosco reports an exceptionally good New Year's business, cut flowers having sold better at his establishment at New Year's than they did at Christmas.

MacRorie & McLaren had several large decorations during the week, which, with brisk store trade, kept the force busy. New Year's eve they decorated the tables at a popular cafe and other places participating in the celebration on an extensive scale. At the Powell street store F. H. Forrest arranged a table in the window typical of the tables in the large cafes, and it attracted much attention. This concern made a pall for a prominent funeral a few days ago, using 125 cattleyas, twenty sprays of phalænopsis and about ten dozen white hyacinths.

The Fresno Seed Co. started in business at 2034 Fresno street, Fresno, Cal., the first of the year.

The January bulletin of the California Dahlia Growers' Association, containing several interesting items, will be ready for distribution in a few days.

A new store is being fitted up on Geary street, near Larkin, for occupancy by Miss Murray, who has been located at the Clift hotel, Geary and Taylor streets.

Sidney Beattie, well known in the local flower business, is being hailed as "Pop" since the birth of a daughter a few days ago.

The Pelicano, Rossi & Co. force prides itself on being able to supply any and all needs in the flower line, but one of the salesmen was nearly "stumped" a few days ago when a Chinaman came in and wanted to buy a "hole." After much time and effort had been expended, it developed that he wanted a wreath.

N. Peterson, one of the leading carnation growers of this section, now has many cuttings ready to ship. He is bringing in a fine cut of carnations, his Pink Sensation being especially good. Gorgeous and Benora also show excellent quality.

The California development board is preparing, by arrangement with the United States plant introduction station at Chico, for an exhibit of new fruits and plants to be shown in the exhibit rooms of the board in the Ferry building. Samples of Chinese and other plants rare on American soil will be shown.

F. J. Bertrand, manager for B. M. Joseph, says the store force could have sold three times as many orchids had the stock been available during the holiday season. He reports the biggest New Year's business he ever experienced. All the odds and ends left over from Christmas cleaned up at good prices. Heather plants were in especially heavy demand.

The committee, headed by F. J. Bertrand, which is working for the betterment of conditions in the local flower business, was forced to relinquish its activities during the holiday rush, but expects to get together again in a week or two.

Charles Stappenbeck, who operates a store on Polk street under the name of American Florist, is cutting blooms of the new rose, Old Gold, and reports them selling well. He also has a fine cut of Richmond.

Frank Shibeley, of the Shibeley-Mann Co., says the demand for both potted plants and cut flowers was heavier than ever before during the holiday season, but he is inclined to think prices were not so high as they should be for really fine stock. S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

With the exception of February, the volume of business done by Portland florists during each month of 1916 showed an increase over that of the same month in the years 1914 and 1915. This increase became more marked toward the last of the year, ending with a record-breaking December.

Every special flower day observed here brought a large amount of extra business, with prices profitable to both grower and retailer. A shortage of cut flowers and pot plants existed nearly throughout the year, so that the growers found a ready market for their products. This shortage was not acute enough to cause any noticeable loss to the retailers, and perhaps the condition of the market would best be described as being on the short side. One large retailer spoke of the condition as "healthy and satisfactory to all branches of the trade." This same retailer estimated that in the year 1916 the number of sales of both cut and potted stock had been at least double that of either 1912 or 1913. He explained that this did not mean that twice as much money had been taken in, but that people in moderate circumstances, the so-called middle classes, had learned that the flower stores were prepared to furnish a plant or bouquet, acceptable as table ornaments or gifts, at a cost from $1 up; and these classes have been buying generously, adding a substantial amount to the total business done. This sort of trade, once started, gives promise of permanence and is likely to improve, and, though the cost of handling it is somewhat greater than that of sales in larger units, it is welcomed by the florists. Throughout the Pacific northwest business conditions generally have improved and there is no cause to doubt that the improvement will last. Florists here consider the outlook for the new year highly satisfactory.

After New Year's day the market gradually returned to normal conditions, relieving the shortage of cut stock. Paper Whites, Romans and freesias were more plentiful, and these, with carnations, roses and a few late mums, composed the list of leading cut flowers. Cyclamens, begonias, Primula obconica and malacoides, and a few cinerarias, lead in the potted blooming plants. After the funeral work, which had accumulated during Sunday and New Year's day, had been taken care of, there was a day or two of comparatively quiet business, giving the florists a needed opportunity to catch their breaths.

Various Notes.

Several carnation growers have not brought their benches into producing condition yet. This accounts to some extent for the dearth of carnations.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade just after the holidays.

Carl Gardner, of Clarke Bros., was late in getting out his statements, about 1,000 of them, as his little girl was sick and he had to spend much of his time attending her. She is on the road to recovery. To add to his troubles, his office helper was sick and off duty two or three days just at the critical time.

Max Smith is handling some good Herald carnations grown by T. Weddell.

Clarke Bros showed some excellent Soleil d'Or narcissi and Golden Spur daffodils. S. W. W.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

BURLAP will be one of the items that add to the cost of the nursery business this year and if many more cargoes are submarined it may become difficult to procure at any price.

ONE of the most prosperous seasons in the history of the nursery business at Fresno, Cal., is reported to be at its height at present by three of the largest producers of ornamental shrubs and trees, as well as vineyard and orchard stock.

A RECENT issue of the Rural World, with 350,000 circulation, principally on the Pacific coast, recently devoted two pages in color to illustrations of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries at Eureka, with a page of general text largely based on the work undertaken there.

OUTBREAK OF POPLAR CANKER.

The Department of Agriculture says the poplars of this country are threatened by a dangerous fungous disease which has been imported from Europe. This disease attacks the twigs, limbs and trunks of the black and Lombardy poplars, Populus nigra, and of the Carolina poplars or cottonwoods, Populus deltoides, and may be expected to attack other species of poplars and cottonwoods, in regions not yet investigated.

The effect of the fungus is as follows: Cankers are formed at the point of attack, spread rapidly and often girdle the twig, limb or trunk at the point of attack, killing the part above the canker. Trees attacked on the trunk become "spike topped." The death of limbs and twigs gives the trees a ragged appearance, which spoils their beauty, and later kills them.

The European poplar-canker is most severe in its effect on stored and transplanted nursery stock. Trees when in transit, and when heeled in the ground, or freshly transplanted in the spring, are readily attacked by the fungus and ruined within a short time. This disease is spread by means of spores produced in fruiting bodies in the form of small pimples or pustules in the bark of the cankers.

The fungus causing European poplar-canker was first found in Troyes, France, and described in 1884. The disease was first reported in America in 1915. During 1916 the pathologist of the department found the disease prevalent in small areas in certain districts in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, Nebraska and New Mexico. The centers of infections appear to be in every case either certain nurseries now known to contain diseased trees, or points where poplars received from such nurseries have been planted.

WESTERNERS TO MEET.

The thirty-seventh annual meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen will be held at the Coates House, Kansas City, January 24 and 25. President L. C. Stark expects the largest gathering in the history of the organization, the meetings of which always are second only to the annual conventions of the A. A. N. itself. There will be no frills—no address of welcome—every minute being given to business. Notice has been given of a proposal to change the by-laws relative to the time of issuing the Pay and Liar reports.

The program as announced is as follows:

Is it the desire of the members to again employ a stenographer and print the proceedings as was done last year, the annual cost being about $250? And if so, will we not be forced to raise the dues to take care of this additional expense?

Three-minute talks by one representative wholesaler and one representative retailer as to conditions in each state represented. The chair will call for these reports—every member should be prepared to answer.

President's Address.

Appointment of Committee on Nominations for New Officers.

Appointment of Committee on Resolutions.

Report of Efficiency Committee—E. P. Bernardin, Chairman. Resolutions and discussion of their recommendations.

Report of Hail Insurance Committee—F. A. Weber, Chairman. Resolutions and discussion of their recommendations.

How does the new meeting date suit the members?

Is it time to restrict our membership along the lines of the national association?

What is the proper number of each grade of trees to tie in a bunch, and cannot the bunching be standardized?

Suggestions as to change in date of meeting of the American Association so that it does not conflict with the American Seed Trade Association.

Has any member used the new collection bureau of the American Association, and with what results?

Are the uniform trade terms adopted at our last meeting being generally used by the members?

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

During the first week of the new year business was good and, as stock shortened in supply, there was a clean-up every day, on everything except Beauties. Tulips, narcissi and freesias are more prominent, and these, with valley, mignonette, calendulas and stevias, constitute a variety that seems to stimulate trade to a certain extent. There are some fine sweet peas and snapdragons, which find a ready sale. After the holidays violets do not seem to be in much favor.

The retail stores which cater to the more exclusive trade seem to have been the busiest, as there has been much doing in a social way.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held a meeting January 2 to nominate officers for the ensuing year. There was a good crowd present. Among the exhibits was Merry Christmas, the new red carnation of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis. It has a splendid, large flower, good color and good stem. C. F. Guenther, of Hamburg, N. Y., sent Chrysanthemum Hamburg Late White. It is a good flower for this season of the year, but many think chrysanthemums should end with the season, about Thanksgiving. There were exhibits of pot-grown petunias and orchids from private growers.

Henry Meuschke read a paper on the faker problem at the last meeting, and this was brought up for discussion. E. McCallum read a paper in which he called attention to the fact that there were many grades of fakers in the flower business, and that the man who sold flowers more cheaply than another was a faker in the eyes of the one who did not sell flowers so cheaply. There was a place for each and a class for each to sell to, said Mr. McCallum, the same as in every other line of business. He believes that the low-price man does not hurt the high-class florist, for when a buyer wants a good thing he goes to a good store to get it.

One speaker thought that destroying the cheaper flowers, or the surpluses, would have a tendency to limit flower buying to the wealthy, and keep the people of the lower plane from enjoying a few flowers, such as they could buy from the street boys for a few pennies.

Of course, the commission men took the ground that their shippers expected them to realize every cent possible on shipments. They had no right to dispose of the flowers except to sell them, and the street venders are the only ones who could possibly dispose of the immense cuts which come in times of a glut. The street men can do this because they take the flowers to the people, while the storemen must wait until the people come to the stores.

Various Notes.

One of the principal topics among wholesalers and retailers is: What are we going to do about the express companies? Each year they seem to get worse and this Christmas was the limit, as one could neither get shipments in nor out, and never before were the companies known to absolutely refuse shipments. Perhaps the S. A. F. will take this matter up at the next convention.

J. Higgins, who has been on the sick list since Christmas day, is back on the job. He looks badly used up, but is glad to have escaped a case of pneumonia.

Fred Burki has gone to Florida to recuperate after the strenuous holidays.

William Loew, the green goods man, is another who went to the sick room after Christmas. He had a serious case of pneumonia several years ago and the extra work at Christmas seems to knock him out. Clarke.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

The January carnation glut is on in full blast. This year the situation is rather peculiar; the glut came earlier than usual; some carnations bring $4 on contract price, but the finest carnations can be bought for $2.50 per hundred. Poorer ones can be had as low as $7.50 per thousand. Roses, too, are somewhat abundant, but not to the degree of carnations, good stock making from $3 to $10. The supply of callas is ample and these are readily sold at 10 cents each. Easter lilies are not plentiful at $1.50 per dozen. A few poinsettias still linger, but there is no large demand for them.

Sweet peas are coming in more satisfactorily and are of exceptional quality. On account of the unseasonably bright, warm weather, the old complaint of dropping buds has not been heard this season. Violets, which are becoming more conspicuous, are in fine shape. Valley and orchids still are scarce. Narcissi, Paper Whites, are plentiful at $2.50 and $3. A few tulips have made their appearance, but as yet they receive little attention. Roman hyacinths are a fair substitute for valley. Buddleia Asiatica has made a place for itself and pussy willows are here and suggest the spring. Azaleas and good cyclamens are now in fine shape and are readily sold.

Chills and Fever.

SCENE I.

Time: Holiday week.
Place: City market.
Public pricing carnations at $1 and $1.50 per dozen. Cold chills run up and down the backs.

SCENE II.

Time: One week later.
Place: Same.
Public pricing carnations at 35 cents per dozen. Blood boils to fever heat when thinking of hold-up week before.

This shows that the florist is his own enemy—he cuts his own throat. The contrast between mediocre stock at Christmas time for $1.50 and best quality stock the following week for 35 cents is too great for the public to swallow. The people feel that the florists are taking advantage of them and are hold-up men. The January carnation glut is an annual occurrence, and, unfortunately, this year it was a little earlier. Would it not be much better to have held carnations from 60 to 75 cents per dozen, according to quality, than to have created this mistrust, even though one disposed of only half the stock?

Various Notes.

One would be well paid to spend a few hours at the establishment of Baur & Steinkamp; to see a range kept up to the notch; to examine a luxuriant mass of carnation blooms, including a fine lot of promising seedlings, on a bed given over to this class of plants only. An attractive sight is a bed of the new, wine-colored carnation, Rufus; another seedling, of a pleasing shade of salmon pink, at present is in heavy flower. Last and most important is a bed of Merry Christmas, a bright, gorgeous red. Another point of interest is the new propagating house. The benches are wholly of tile construction, with plenty of bottom heat, well shaded and well ventilated.

The Market.

New Year's business, while not to be complained about, was none too strenuous. The bulk of it was corsages. Evidently the same was experienced in many other markets, due to the fact that New Year's fell on Monday.

American Beauties now are extra good and these as well as other roses are maintaining the holiday prices. Killarney, Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia, Sunburst and Ward roses continue to sell well. Easter lilies have been in heavy demand, but as yet they are somewhat scarce. Carnations are not quite so plentiful as they have been, but the quality still remains, so there is little room for complaints. Stevia is more than sufficient for all present demands. The jonquils and pussy willows have come again and they make one think of spring. These serve excellently in basket arrangements. Roman hyacinths, too, have come to the front row. Both yellow and white narcissi are abundant.

Violets, single and double, have realized a great demand this season; also orchids, both cypripediums and cattleyas. Valley has been in heavy demand. Sweet peas are more or less erratic as to quality, some being exceedingly good and others rather poor. Freesia has resumed its former popularity. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. Blooming plants are more numerous, among them being hyacinths, azaleas, begonias and cyclamens. The first and last realize good sales.

Various Notes.

William Ehman, Sr., of Corfu, was visiting in Buffalo last week.

Barney Meyers is sending in good cuts of jonquils daily.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

Did you see that picture of "Merry Christmas" in The Review week before last? Did you notice the fine crop of buds the plants carried, and did you notice the fine stems that carried those buds high above the plants? The bed to the left is Champion, until this year our best red. Did you note the difference between that bed and the "Merry Christmas" bed? The contrast is even more noticeable when you actually have the plants before you. Come and have a look at them.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business last week was good, especially New Year's, and an increase over that of last year was reported. Decorations for dinner parties and weddings, and orders for corsage bouquets, were numerous. The market is well supplied with stock this week, except roses. Red roses are in heavy demand and the prices are high. Carnations are plentiful, if not a little too much so, and the prices are not so high as they were last year. Paper Whites, lilies and stevias are plentiful and good bulbous stock is arriving. Sweet peas are coming in strongly. These have good flowers and long stems. Plumosus and adiantum are plentiful, but greenhouse-grown smilax is scarce.

Various Notes.

The Rosery reports business good throughout the week. Bulbous stock is coming along in fine shape and it seems to have been the first to appear in the market.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports that business has increased seventeen and one-half per cent over last year's. Every month during the year showed an increase over the corresponding month of the year previous.

Arthur Newell says business has not let up since Christmas and that he has been busy with corsage, wedding and funeral orders.

Charles Biedermann is using one end of one of his greenhouses as a garage for his car. He considers it a good place for the car, as he then can load it easily and work on it when need be. He reports a big increase of business during the last year.

Miss Edith Roberts sold her store on East Eleventh street. The name of the new concern is Central Floral Co.

T. J. Noll & Co. received their first batch of Roman hyacinths last week. Some extra fine roses are being received.

W. J. Barnes had the order for decorating the store of Emory, Bird & Thayer for the white goods sales. A large supply of carnations, Paper Whites and the red begonias are going fast.

The George M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. is receiving large consignments of roses, carnations and sweet peas. The greenhouse department is sending in some fine potted plants of azaleas, cyclamens and begonias. Mr. Lamb, the new manager, looks forward to a larger business than last year.

Henry Kusik & Co. are receiving some fine home-grown carnations. Business in the wire department has increased wonderfully over last year's.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. now is sending in some fine Ophelia and Shawyer roses to its retail store. A large quantity of carnations and sweet peas is being cut. The Cincinnati begonias were the best this concern has ever had.

James B. Mason was sold out entirely New Year's day. Funeral work has been good. He is cutting some nice sweet peas and violets. The pot plants for Easter are looking fine.

John Stevens is cutting an unusually large number of carnations at his range, the largest he ever has had. W. J. B.

It is an excellent commercial variety, has good foliage and stiff stem. A good keeper and shipper. To get best blooms, leave terminal bud. February and later delivery at a popular price.

The Market.

Business since the holidays has been good. Roses are on the short side, but carnations are plentiful. Paper Whites, hyacinths, etc., are in good supply and help out in funeral work. The weather since Christmas has been favorable for plant and cut flower production.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons have been busy with funeral work. They continue to have good cuts of carnations; also a good supply of Paper Whites and Romans.

At the store of the Blackman Floral Co. all hands have been occupied. Funeral work is plentiful. At the greenhouses the carnations are doing finely and the roses soon will be in good crop again. Since the death of the grower, John Tate, Edward Blackman has had his hands full. He has large batches of rose and carnation cuttings in the sand.

Karl Zeidler has been having much funeral work. He has plenty of carnations and roses for his needs. A few benches containing lettuce, which is about ready to cut, will be filled with spring stock.

E. L. Fenton has launched a new business. He is making square, wood dirt bands and should be successful, as his new method seems to be a good one.

DETROIT, MICH.

B. Schroeter recently added a handsome car to his delivery system. Mr. Schroeter's Christmas and New Year's business was considerably in excess of last year's, despite the fact that he did not have his usual stock of azaleas.

To make up in a way for his lack of azaleas, Charles H. Plumb had for the holidays the most wonderful lot of begonias ever seen in these parts.

Hugo Schroeter is highly elated over business in general and especially his Christmas and New Year's business. As a fitting climax to his year's business, he had the decorations for a large New Year's dancing party.

John B. Dinser is already sending to the stores some well grown tulips, in pots and cut, in three colors. They find a ready sale.

Albert J. Stahelin is on the market again with some peas that sell at sight and at a fancy price.

Sullivan's new store is, without doubt, the most practical, if not the most elaborate, in this city. The front is so constructed as to give the passer-by a full view of the entire store clear into the icebox, which is set crosswise, about forty feet back from the front.

With paper, boxes, tape, etc., sky high, many retailers are keeping down expenses by not using quite so much fancy paper trimmings inside the boxes. The customers are really in sympathy with this movement, as they are all aware of the additional expense, and the writer has found that many boxes can be saved by asking a customer if he wishes his order done up in paper or if a box is preferred. Many say paper will do just as well. Of course, when an order is delivered, then boxes should be used, except where the order is unusually small. H. S.

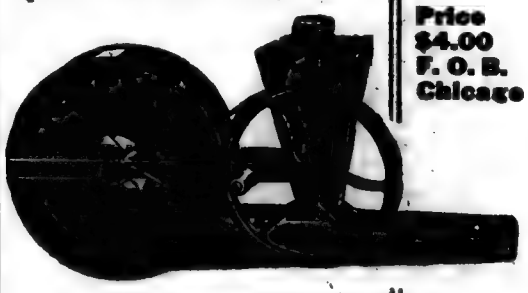
Beal, and "Diseases of Roses," by Dr. L. M. Massey. This will be followed at 4 p. m. by a business meeting of the federation.

February 15 at 11 a. m. Dr. A. C. Beal will speak on "Outdoor Sweet Pea Culture." The afternoon will be devoted to a lecture and demonstration of flower arrangement by Prof. E. A. White, followed by a round table on questions relating to flower growing.



In connection with the program there will be an exhibition of students' work in table decorations, plant baskets, bouquets and other cut flower arrangements in the Floricultural building. There also will be an exhibit of roses, carnations, violets, sweet peas and other florists' crops, which will be shown by various specialists in cut flower production in the eastern states.

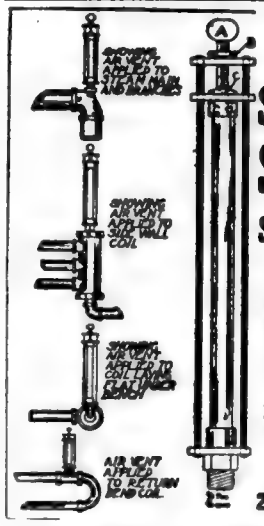
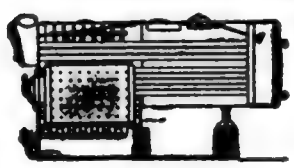
Greenhouse Heating.

RELATIVE HEIGHT OF PIPES.

I should like to get a little advice on heating. I have a hot water boiler, rated at 1,300 square feet. At present it is heating about 600 feet of 2-inch pipe. I wish to know whether the boiler would heat my new house satisfactorily if the flow pipe is about two feet lower than in the older house, where the pipes are on the posts. In the new house I wish to place all the pipes under the benches. This would cause the pipes to be about one foot lower than the lowest return in the old house and about two feet lower than the flow pipe. The boiler shed is between the two houses, which run east and west. As the flows are all tapped, could I place tees on them, so as to get more branches?



A. L.—Mo.



So many things have to be taken into account when considering a question like the foregoing, that it is not possible to give a definite answer. About the only fact relating to the heating system that is stated is the capacity of the boiler, which should readily handle three times the present radiating surface. While we are informed that the flow pipe in one house is two feet lower than in the other, and that there will be a difference of one foot or more in the height of the returns, nothing is said regarding the height of the different pipes above the boiler, upon which the whole matter largely depends.

In a general way, we will say that if the lowest part of the returns in the house to be heated is two feet above the top of the boiler, there will be no difficulty in securing a good circulation in all of the pipes, although it may be necessary to have a valve upon either the main flow or the main return pipe in the other house, in order to regulate the circulation of the water and secure a uniform temperature in the two houses. This will be more difficult if the returns in one house are one foot below the top of the boiler while they are one foot above the boiler in the other house, since the better circulation will be in the higher returns, especially when the lower ones are below the top of the boiler, but even then the circulation can be regulated to a large extent by means of valves on the higher pipes.

If the flows are sufficiently large, other pipes may be added if needed, but we would not care to furnish more than 200 square feet of radiation with a 2-inch flow, 400 square feet with a 2½-inch flow or 750 square feet with a 3-inch flow pipe, unless more than four feet above the boiler.

HOW ABOUT your condensation problem?
Does sluggish circulation make the temperature hard to control?
Then it's time to investigate the

A SASH HOUSE.

Would it be presuming too much to ask you to give me a detailed description and plan of a sash house in which to put geraniums a little later? I wish to build one about sixty feet long. What would be the best width for 3x6 sashes? What would be the proper height of the walls, without glass in the sides? Could the house be built and heated in such a way that there would be no need for benches, so that I could plant chrysanthemums to follow geraniums? Could the pipes be hung on the posts, with the mums in the beds, and a path excavated to any depth needed?

What would be the best way to pipe this sash house and how much 2-inch pipe would be needed for 50 degrees in zero weather? I have some 1¼-inch pipe; could it be used with success in a house of this size? I wish to do away with the benches if I can; if not, I will build them. The soil is a sandy loam, through which the water drains away readily. Any information will be greatly appreciated.

D. A. M.—Pa.

For such a house as the one described, we would set two rows of posts so that they can be used to support the walls of a house measuring ten and one-half feet wide outside, and would construct the walls of sheathing and siding, using building paper between. If the posts are set seven and one-half feet apart, a false post halfway between will be sufficient to stiffen the walls.

Our plan would be to use the soil to form the beds, and we would excavate a trench thirty inches deep and wide enough to give twenty inches in the clear for a walk. The sides of the walk may be lined by a concrete wall four inches thick at the bottom and tapering to two inches at the top. This should extend below the bottom of the excavation and should be anchored to the posts with No. 9 galvanized wire, six inches below the surface. If lumber is cheap a board wall might be built to line the walks, but if the house is intended for permanent use a concrete wall will be cheaper in the end.

Just how high the greenhouse walls should be made will depend upon the uses to which the house is to be put. For geraniums and ordinary bedding plants it need not be more than two feet, but for single-stem chrysanthemum plants, grown in the beds, it should not be less than four feet. Two to three feet would answer for ordinary mums in pots.

Cut off the plates at the same angle as the slope of the roof and use a plate 2x6 inches, with the outer edge one inch outside the siding. Use a strip 1x6 inches for the ridge and place 2x3-inch rafters so that they will come under the edges of the sashes. Every third sash should be hinged at the lower end and hand lifters should be provided. The cracks between the sashes should be battened to keep out the rain and prevent the loss of heat.

If possible, the hot water heater should be sunk below the bottom of the walk. For a temperature of 50 degrees we would run a 2-inch flow upon each plate and connect each flow with two 1¼-inch returns carried on the sides of the walks. If the walls are more than two feet in height, we would carry the returns on the wall posts and use an additional return upon each wall. Run all pipes downhill and connect the highest point in each flow pipe with the expansion tank.

The Nebraska State Florists' Society will hold its annual meeting in Lincoln, Tuesday, January 16, at the Lindell hotel.

President Ed Williams, of Grand Island, says to non-members: "We have started something out here that you are interested in, and we earnestly hope that you can coöperate with us. Following our regular program, in conjunction with the State Horticultural Society, we will have a tri-state session for Nebraska, Iowa and Missouri—a get-together meeting. We will have representatives from each state express views dealing with cost of production, credits, compensation, etc. We, as florists, have advanced along the line of producing, but we have failed in the getting of proper returns. Our discounts are larger than on any other legitimate business. Many subjects, too numerous to mention, will be discussed for the benefit of those present."

A banquet will follow the meeting.

The Market.

The market is heavily supplied with all kinds of stock. Receipts are so heavy that it is impossible to clean up anything readily, and prices have taken a decided drop. Roses are extremely plentiful and excellent blooms may be had in quantity, in all seasonable varieties. Carnations, too, are plentiful. Easter lilies are in heavy supply and sweet peas are becoming more abundant. The butterfly varieties have been selling well. Valley and orchid receipts are able to take care of present demands. Violets are in fair supply. Paper White narcissi are coming into the market in good quantities and their prices have dropped to the rock-bottom level. Other offerings are snapdragons, callas, rubrums, calendulas, primroses, wallflowers and forget-me-nots. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been finding a good market for his sweet peas.

Samuel Batson, of Kalamazoo, Mich., shipped the first of his primroses, wallflowers and forget-me-nots to L. H. Kyrk a fortnight ago.

David E. Wooley, who represents P. J. Olinger, left this week on an extended trip through Ohio and Indiana.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Markets.

Now that some of the figures are available, the holiday business is reported as being in excess of that of any former year.

Trade last week was good. Stock of all kinds is plentiful and prices are lower. Some fine Beauties and Russell roses are offered; Ophelia is a little on the short side, but other roses are in good supply. Carnations are in abundance, also lilies, sweet peas, Paper Whites, violets, etc. Cyclamen and primrose plants are plenteous.

Various Notes.

Miss Tearney, of the Bills Floral Co., had a fine window display of azaleas, cyclamens and ferns. She reports the sale of approximately 600 cyclamen plants at Christmas.

Forber & Bird say business is better than that of other years. They have added canary birds as a side line. Last week they offered Golden Spur narcissi, the first seen here so far.

Miss M. Woltman reports business good, with cyclamens the best sellers in potted plants.

Julius Staack & Sons had a big holiday trade, disposing of 2,800 roses and 8,000 carnations, in addition to a big sale of other items. W. G.

For Transplanting Carnations

The following is an extract from a letter from Mr. Arthur Taylor, of Boonton, N. J.

"The Skinner System is highly valuable in transplanting carnations from the field to the greenhouse. After watering them the night before, the soil was in ideal condition so that we could dig the plants up with every root intact. The plants were strong and started right off growing. They have done better than any lot of plants I have ever had."

FLOWER POTS.

A. H. Hews & Co., Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., the oldest and largest manufacturers of flower pots in the world, announce that for the year 1916 their product and sales have been the largest in the history of the company. Coincident with this condition, extraordinary increased costs of labor and material have been most discouraging and necessitated some increases in selling prices.

They have recently discontinued their jobbing business in glassware, woodenware, crockery and other householdware lines, to devote their entire interests to their flower pot manufacturing industry, and have taken steps to increase their capacity by adding new machines, kilns and drying rooms on the property that was devoted to storage for their jobbing business.

Several customers throughout the country have suffered by delays in shipments and transportation during recent months owing to phenomenal demands, but it is now believed the Hews company is sufficiently equipped to take care of all demands hereafter. Owing to congestion of requirements of commercial florists coming periodically twice a year, it is always urged to place orders for shipment far in advance to assure pots being on hand when wanted. Many florists overlook this and suffer delay because it is a physical impossibility for any factory to ship every order within a two months' period in spring and fall.

It is interesting to learn that the Hews company used 8,843 tons of clay, 1,653 tons of coal, and employed an average of ninety-five men for their sole industry of manufacturing flower pots during the last year.

The Hews company are members of the Association of Centenary Firms & Corporations of the United States and rank eleventh in list of fifty-eight members. J. B. Hall, Gen. Mgr.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business has quieted a little since the holidays, but prices still hold up and will continue to do so as long as the present dark weather lasts. During the last week it has been unusually dark for this time of year, and roses, carnations and violets are scarce and high.

Various Notes.

Frank L. Gray has left the employ of the Peckham Floral Co., of Fairhaven, to take a position in Providence, R. I.

William E. Mosher reports business good.

Edward M. Pierce is cutting some splendid flowers of Calendula Orange King. He also is picking pansies and sweet peas in quantity. Freesias will be ready in about a week or ten days.

The Peckham Floral Co., of Fairhaven, has about 17,000 geraniums potted and will have about as many more when rooted.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society held its regular meeting January 8, in the Public Library building. Election of officers for the ensuing year was held.

A recent visit to the establishment of S. E. Shaw found everything in first-class condition. The carnations and sweet peas look remarkably well. Mr. Shaw picked a heavy crop of violets for Christmas. A large new boiler has been added to the heating system.

CYPRESS SHINGLES BEST

If you would have the whole greenhouse job standard—uniform throughout—you must put cypress shingles on the boiler room. And for the barn and other buildings about the place, nothing else will do the business and continue to do it, year after year, like cypress shingles.

REMEMBER that every endurance record in the history of shingles was made by cypress shingles.

Read from the report of the U. S. Gov't, in Bulletin No. 95, Forest Service, Department of Agriculture:

A shingle roof on a house at Greenwich, Conn., was said to have lasted 250 years; another, in Brooklyn, N. Y., was reported to have lasted 228 years, and still another, at Clifton, Staten Island, was still doing business after 200 years of continuous service. Cypress shingle roofs at New Orleans, La., that are 100 years old are no curiosity—plenty of them.

There is no discount on a cypress shingle roof.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

The variety Prosperity is offered for registration by Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y. If no objections are filed with the committee, requiring the withdrawal of the name, the registration will become complete January 30, 1917. The following is a description:

The plant is tall, most striking and attractive. Its massive proportions, broad, heavy foliage of a rich green, erect and vigorous habit of growth, give evidence of a strong constitution. The shading to madder-lake except the last segment, flowers are large. The color is a bright rose, which has a chamois-yellow base. Anthers violet; styles white. Unsurpassed as a keeper.

A. C. Beal, Chairman.

WHITE FLY AND MEALY BUG.

What can we use to kill white fly in our plant house? On our coleus plants, also, there is an insect which looks like a large white aphis. What can we use to kill it? W. H. G.—O.

For the white fly use one pint of some reliable brand of forty per cent nicotine solution in seventy-five gallons of water, adding three or four pounds of fish oil or laundry soap. Apply this when the morning temperature has been allowed to drop to 50 degrees. Use a fine nozzle. After thoroughly spraying one of the beds, go over it again at once, thus reaching any of the insects which were not touched by the first application. The second spraying will generally be more effective than the first one, as the insects on the under side of the leaves will have been disturbed by the first spraying and many of them will now be found on the upper side of the leaves.

The insect on the coleus is most likely the mealy bug. For destroying this insect the same remedy should be used as for the white fly, but an angle nozzle will be desirable, since the insects are generally on the under side of the leaves or clustered at the nodes of the stems. When large plants are badly infested, it is a good plan to dip the tops of the plants in the solution, as it is difficult to reach the insects with a spray. T.

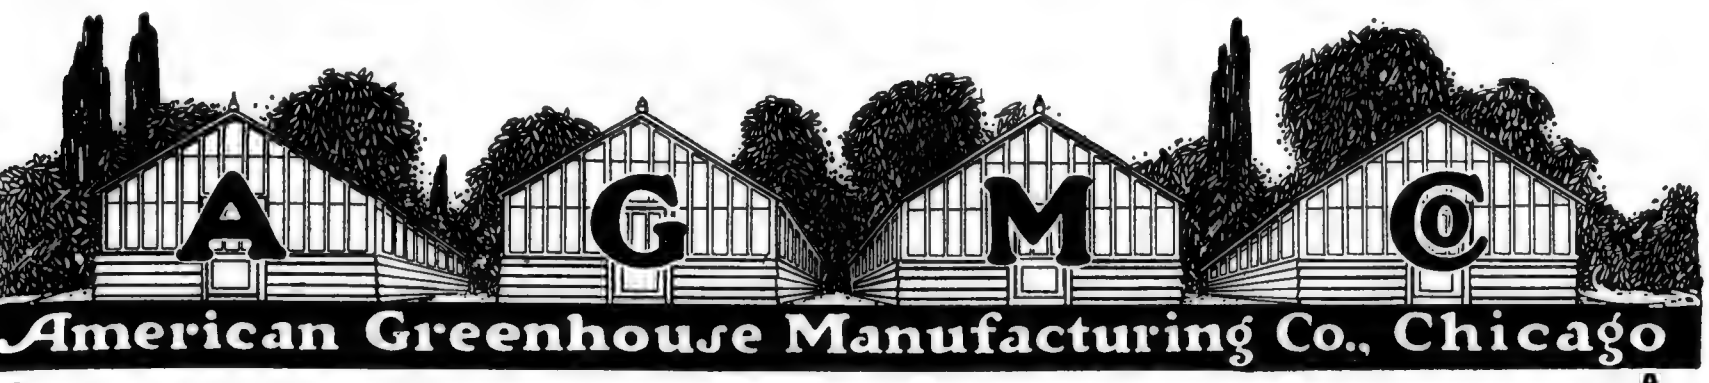
Jacobs Greenhouse Construction Endorsed by World-famous Architects

This range of Jacobs greenhouses is now in course of erection for Mr. J. Insley Blair at Tuxedo, N. Y. They are without a doubt the "last word" in greenhouse construction.

The plans, which contained all manner of modern improvements and scientific arrangements, were drawn by the internationally famous architects, Carrere & Hastings, who, after thoroughly examining practically every style of construction in their search for the absolute maximum of efficiency, placed their plans and construction contracts with us.

Is it not fair to assume that what we are doing for them we can do equally well for you?



WE KNOW WHAT TO DO AND WHAT NOT TO DO

What's more, we can save money for you.

Yes — your chimney is a big thing —

Chimney of Chas. Steidle, Olivette, Mo.

—it's so big and plays such an important part in your business that a mistake in its construction may turn the scale from success to failure.

—it's so big you can't build a new one with every change of the moon. What's more, it generally stands for many years as a monument to either your good judgment or your folly.

Don't forget that your chimney is just as great a factor as your boiler, and just as much a part of your heating system. You wouldn't think of building a garage too small for your automobile, would you? Well, it wouldn't be a bit more foolish than to build a chimney too small for your boiler. Remember, if your chimney is the right size, it makes your boiler do all the work it's intended to do. Then, and not till then, you get your money's worth. AGMCO chimney blocks are made of tested clays, properly burned. They are made to suit the circular and radial lines of each part of the chimney. This produces a regular, smooth surface, with even joints. Then, too, they are larger than common bricks, making the number of mortar joints in the AGMCO chimney one-third of those in a common brick chimney of the same size.

Every AGMCO chimney is built to resist the heat strains as well as the strains from weight and wind.
Every AGMCO chimney is guaranteed to stand against a wind pressure of 100 miles an hour.
Every AGMCO chimney is guaranteed against defects for a period of five years.
Every AGMCO chimney has a detached flue at the point of smoke entrance.
Every AGMCO chimney is re-enforced with steel.

Don't wait until you're dead. Build a monument to yourself and your good judgment while you are yet alive.

There is only one safe time to do anything— that's today.

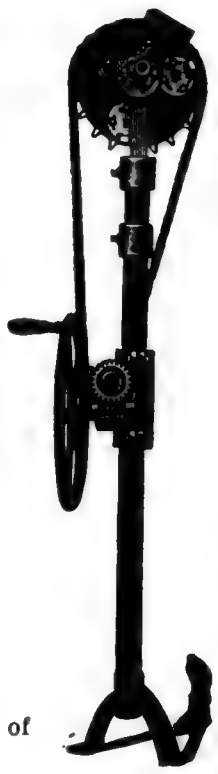
Why Is Evans' Line in Demand?



John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind. WACO, TEX., Dec. 11, 1916.

Dear Sirs: There is not a bit of use of your asking for a letter from me regarding your ventilating machines. I have used them now for twenty years. In no way could they be excelled, as otherwise I would not have given you an additional order. My only regret is that I am unable to enlarge my plant in order that you could furnish the machines. There is no appreciation necessary, and anything that I could do for the old Century, aside from the Double-acting Century, I am only too willing to do to reciprocate for its services.

Yours truly, WOLFE THE FLORIST (T. J. Wolfe).

P. S.—My kindest personal regards to Mr. John A. Evans.

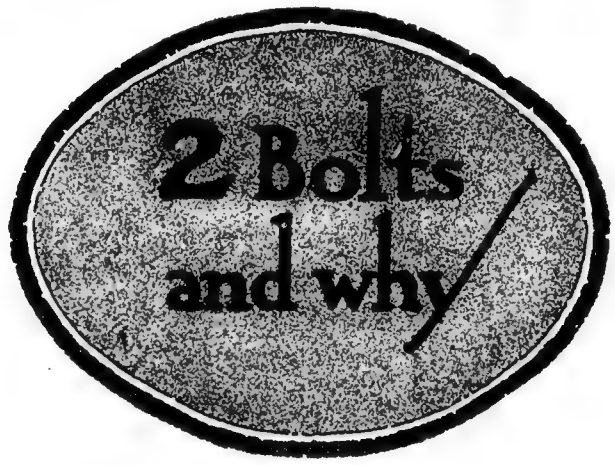
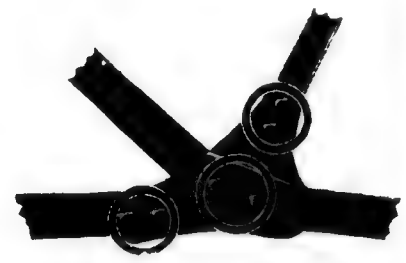
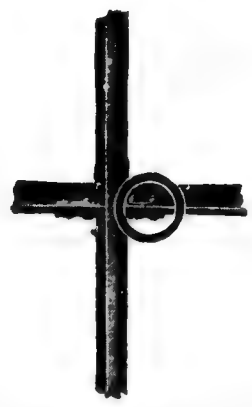
INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS—PAGES TWO AND THREE



The side truss member running between column and post is double bolted to the gusset plate.



The main center truss member is secured to the strut and tie fitting by two bolts.



The main truss is secured to the column cap by two bolts.

This truss joining plate holds the four truss members rigidly in exact place. The two bolts prevent any twisting or turning.

The gable purlins are fastened to the gable rafters by double angle knees with double purlin bolts.

"VIBRATION," "Give-and-take," "Come-and-go," call it what you will, it's the very thing you don't want in your greenhouse.

With it your glass loosens.

Without it, it doesn't.

We build the house that doesn't.

The 2-bolt method is one reason why. You can't make a framing joint of two or more members, and make that joint rigid by using only one bolt on each side of the joint. No matter how tight you screw it up, there will be some "give."

"Gives" never grow less.

We are dead against "Gives."

Every important framing joint or connection on our Iron Frame house has two bolts on at least one side—sometimes on both. Making twice the number of bolt holes costs money.

Using twice the number of bolts costs more money.

Which would you rather do, pay less money for less bolt holes and bolts and have loosened glass, or pay more and have your glass stay tight?

Our stay-tight way may cost a bit more to start with, but a lot less to end with.

The cost of a house is not just what it costs to buy. But what it costs to buy, in addition to what it costs to keep it bought.

Ever think of it just that way?

When you are ready to talk building, say when and where, and we'll be there.

ASTER PINK ENCHANTRESS

Upright in habit, as distinguished from the Branching form. The plant is very vigorous, and produces long, strong stems for the support of numerous large exhibition blooms. The flower is always full double; petals are of medium length and very broad; those toward the center fold in very regularly, while gradually, toward the outer edge, the petals stand out more and more until those on the outside recede from the center, thus increasing the diameter of the flower, which compares very favorably in size with the largest-flowering kinds on our farm. Color similar to that of the Enchantress carnation; flowers late. Pkt., 15c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., $1.00; oz., $3.00.

FOR YOUR PROTECTION, MR. FLORIST,

ACCEPT "SUPERIORA" MAGNOLIA LEAVES ONLY

EXTRACTS FROM OUR ENDORSEMENTS

C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "My customers insist on having the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolias, as they claim these are the best, and that they do not dry out or become moldy, and that every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest, besides being the best."

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "Other Magnolia preparers have tried to induce us to stock up their goods 'just as good as Dux's' at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us, and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business and will not take a chance of losing it; in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as 'Magnolia Kings.'"

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are the best leaves that we have ever handled, and we have had no complaint from any of our customers who bought these leaves from us. We have stored these leaves under all conditions and found that they will not mould; it is a very satisfactory leaf indeed."

Jos. G. Neidinger Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "We have tried all the Magnolia Leaves that are offered, but find your leaves to be far superior to all others, etc., etc."

The Montreal Floral Exchange, Montreal, Canada, writes: "Our business has increased with you this year over double of what we purchased last season, which is a good recommendation in itself that the trade in Canada appreciates the durability and keeping qualities of your leaf. We appreciate the integrity, promptness and good business methods that have characterized all your dealings with us."

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich., says: "We have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves for the past six years and find in all this time that we have had no complaints but many compliments on these goods., etc., etc."

Jos. E. Koppelman, of Providence, R. I., writes: "We feel that we can sell your leaves to people who have used them once without any trouble. They rather pay the difference than to buy other leaves elsewhere, etc., etc."

New England Florist Supply Co., of Boston, Mass., writes: "Have found 'Superiora' Magnolias the best leaves on the market. The sales on this leaf have been growing with the same rapidity as our business."

Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Have always found that the 'Superiora' brand gives our customers entire satisfaction; in fact, they are the best leaves we have been able to obtain in the last few years."

B. E. and J. T. Cokely, of Scranton, Penn., write: "We have always considered your Magnolia Leaves to be a standard for quality, etc."

The Baltimore Wholesale Florist and Supply Co., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "We are confident that any other manufactured Magnolia Leaves could not compete with yours, as other brands have been offered us, which, after we tried them, we refused to carry in stock."

N. F. McCarthy and Co., of Boston, Mass., write: ". . . It is the opinion of McCarthy and Co. that your good firm prepares the best leaf that has yet been offered in the United States. It is well worth the difference between the prices offered by inferior manufacturers and your agents."

Henry M. Robinson and Co., of Boston, Mass., write: "We are pleased to state that the quality of your leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale, etc."

Reed and Keller, of New York City, say: ". . . and we beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way. We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory; colors vary and leaves mould quickly, etc."

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange, Cleveland, O., says: ". . . never as yet have we had a complaint on the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolia Leaves, nor a carton returned."

Smith and Young, of Indianapolis, Ind., write: "We will continue to use 'Superiora' exclusively as we consider it superior to any other leaf in the market. Since we handle 'Superiora' we have not had one single complaint, etc., etc."

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, writes: ". . . that we have been sending you orders for 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves for several years should prove that we like your goods . . ."

Geo. H. Angermueller, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "It pleases me to say that I have worked up a splendid business on your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, and I credit my success to the fact that the quality of your leaves has always been entirely satisfactory to my customers, etc."

"SUPERIORA" BRAND MAGNOLIA LEAVES ARE SOLD BY EVERY WHOLESALE FLORIST IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

New Red Rose Donald MacDonald

A new HAWLMARK Red Rose sent out this year by Alex. Dickson & Sons

We have tested this rose for winter forcing for two years, and with us it produces more red roses during the winter than any rose we have ever grown. It is not a large rose, but has perfectly formed, medium-sized flowers that sell at sight. Color bright orange-carmine; will not turn blue, because the base of the petals is orange. It is not a summer rose, as it has the same substance as Killarney. We build the plants up until November, and from Thanksgiving until May it is a money-maker for the Rose Grower, as no pinching is necessary.

DICKSON'S HAWLMARK IRISH ROSES

Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., of Newtownards, County Down, Ireland, have been distributing their pedigreed roses in the United States under the name of Dickson's Irish Roses for the past thirty years.

They have given us for winter forcing Killarney, Liberty, Mrs. Jardine, Melody, Irish Fireflame and Killarney Brilliant.

In outdoor varieties, in addition to the above, they have sent out Duchess of Wellington, Mrs. Wemyss Quinn, Duchess of Westminster, Mrs. MacKellar, Lady Ashtown, Lady Grenell and a host of other sterling varieties.

Other firms by the name of Dickson are now advertising Dickson's Irish Roses, so that Alex. Dickson & Sons, for their own protection, have copyrighted the name HAWLMARK, which is the sterling stamp of the rose world.

Every HAWLMARK ROSE is genuine, and the best cultivated.

ROSALIA is a decided improvement on ROSETTE, having a better color and a better commercial habit.

OLD GOLD—We offer this as the earliest and most free flowering yellow carnation we have yet produced. A decided improvement over YELLOW PRINCE, being of a stronger growth, is perfectly clean and healthy, produces larger stems and more bloom. The color is a deep yellow with faint pink stripes.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

CAN AMERICA GROW ITS OWN AZALEAS?

This subject is of special interest to all florists who have suffered loss or inconvenience through the war's interference with the shipments of Belgian azaleas. Experience, in the grim form of Mars, has shown how dependent we are on Europe for many of our supplies. Is it necessary to continue importing azaleas?

By GUSTAVE VANDEN ABEELE

Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Cal.

THE florists of the world have so long looked to the justly celebrated azalea growers of Ghent, Belgium, as the exclusive source of the world's supply of that useful plant, that I hesitate to tell what I have learned of azalea culture since I began my work at this establishment in this most favorable locality, fearing my opinions may not meet with the most cordial reception from many old handlers of the Belgian-grown stock.

First let me say that the climatic conditions at Eureka are the same as at Ghent, so far as atmospheric moisture is concerned. The abundant rainfall occurs from December to July, and during the summer months heavy fogs sweep in nightly from the mild Japan current, only a mile distant from our azalea houses, bathing the foliage with cooling dews, conducive to vigorous growth of all evergreens, coniferous or broad-leaved.

But there is this difference, that in the Eureka climate dangerous frosts seldom occur. A recent temperature of 22 degrees, the lowest known in many years, endured only long enough to freeze the ground an inch and a few hours after sunrise this had entirely thawed out.

At Eden Nursery.

I find the culture of the Indian azalea at Eureka, and the great possibilities of its future commercial development, especially interesting to one who has had to do with azalea culture in all its phases for about twenty years, both at Ghent and at Robert Craig's establishment in Philadelphia, where I spent six years forcing Belgian-grown azaleas. To those who may doubt my statements it may be well to say: Azalea culture is now fully established on a commercial scale at Eureka; that may as well be accepted as a fact, established beyond question. Not less than 180,000 plants, many imported, but the greater percentage propagated on the place, are now growing in the Eden Nursery.

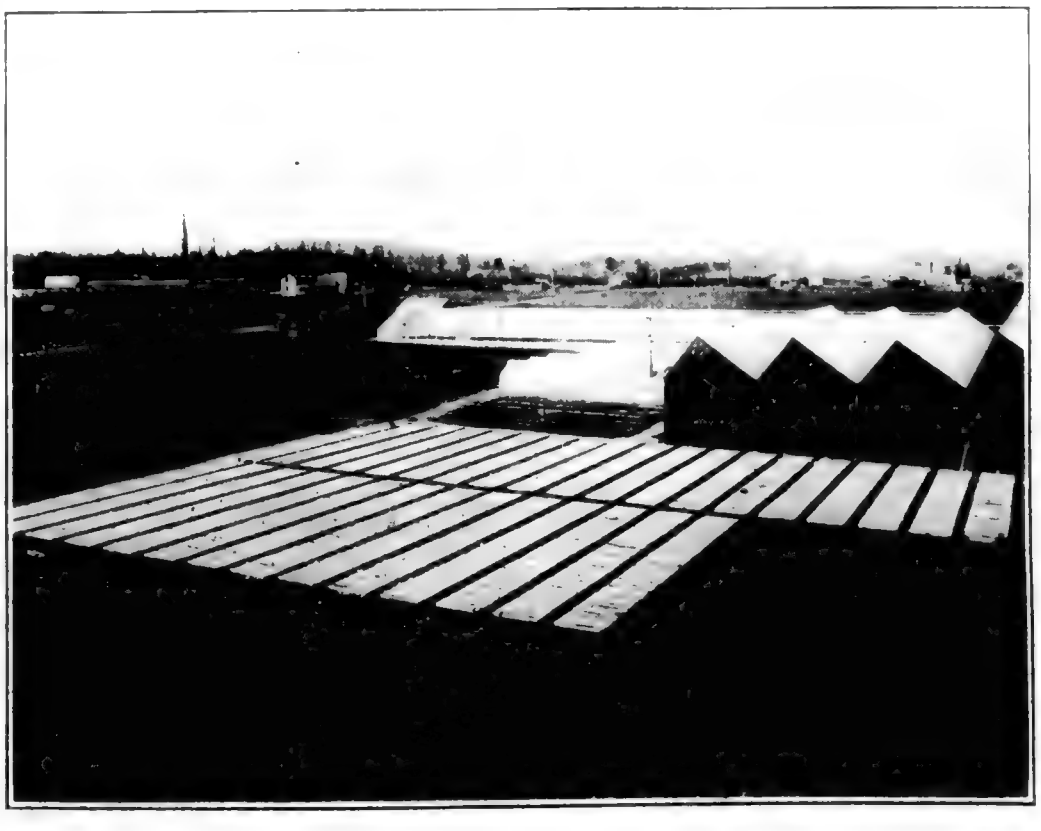
The decidedly moist atmosphere, which persists continuously; the plentiful supply of pure rain water; the inexhaustible quantities of cheap leaf-mold and peat; the cheap and easily obtained supplies of cow manure and pure, sharp sand, all combine to render possible the successful production of azaleas in a wholesale way at a cost that will not be considered a moment by the American azalea forcer, once he becomes familiar with the quality of the Eureka-grown stock, and the ease and certainty of its early forcing.

Advantage of Early Budding.

In the first place, the Eureka climate is conducive to early budding and early bud maturity. Under ordinary conditions in Belgium, azaleas commence budding about August 15; in Eureka the budding commences about July 1, or nearly six weeks earlier. This insures a long season for budding, and thorough, full development and maturity of the buds before shipment. In consequence of this early bud maturity, many late-flowering kinds, such as Chicago, De Schryveriana and others, are as easily forced for early Christmas blooming as Mme. Petrick, Simon Mardner or Vervæneana.

These facts are exceedingly valuable from a commercial standpoint, and will certainly cause a strong preference for Eureka-grown stock for early forcing.

While the Belgian shipping season starts about September 15, the Eureka season will start not later than September 1 and all stock will be in the hands of the forcers by October 1, at the most distant point from Eureka. As all azalea shipments across the continent will be made in refrigerator cars, holding the plants absolutely in a cool, even temperature, the uncertainty as to receiving the stock in proper condition will be entirely removed.



Owing to the full maturity and advanced condition of the Eureka-grown buds, little heat is required to bring the plants into full bloom for Christmas. They can be brought along slowly at a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, maximum, which means larger blooms, of great substance and endurance, and brighter colors.

A Successful Test.

Our present season's test consisted of putting 100 plants in 55 degrees of heat, November 1. By December 1 Mme. Romaine de Smet, Mme. Eckhaute, Mme. Petrick, Simon Mardner and the other, earlier sorts were in full bloom. Two weeks later Chicago, De Schryveriana and the later kinds were fully developed. This means a welcome increase in the list of varieties for Christmas forcing.

The acres of glass now under construction and the great blocks of slat houses now going up at the Eden Nursery, with the hundreds of thousands of stock cuttings now in full, healthful growth, seem to me to be an assurance of an immense increase in the demand for American-grown Indian azaleas in the near future.

The cultural methods at Eureka are practically the same as at Ghent. Leaf-mold and plenty of it; pure rain water in abundance; an even growing temperature; a rigid selection of grafting stocks and vigorous scions, and a steady, vigorous, healthful growth from graft to fully budded plant finished for shipment, are the essentials.

THE CHICAGO PLAN

FLOWERS FOR VALENTINES.

How All Florists Can Help.

The publicity plan of the Chicago Florists' Club, announced in these columns last week, has developed rapidly under the direction of Chairman F. Lautenschlager and has become national in its scope.

The Chicago Florists' Club now invites organizations of florists everywhere to join with it in its St. Valentine's day advertising. The plan of the Chicago committee is as follows:

A heart-shaped red stamp, 2x2⅛ inches, has been designed for the use of florists who can reach the public. The idea is to put one of these bright red stamps on everything that goes out of the store during the early days of February. The stamp should be on every statement that is mailed February 1. It should be on every parcel that is delivered. It should be on every piece of advertising matter. In addition, a large sized reproduction has been made, 7¼x 7¾ inches, to be used on store windows and in the store. Both the stamp and poster are gummed and ready for use.

The wording is, "Let Your Valentine Be Flowers; Leave Your Order Now."

The More the Merrier.

This plan of advertising could not by any possibility be otherwise than good. If one florist uses it, it will be good for that one florist. If ten florists use it, it will be ten times better, and the further the plan can be carried the better it will be for the trade as a whole. It is reaching the flower buyers in the right way. The suggestion "Let your valentine be flowers" is psychologically correct. It is a plan for increasing the use of flowers for a special purpose. It is an effort by the retail end of the business to help that end of the business, but it deserves the encouragement of all others in the trade for the reason that an increased demand at retail will be felt throughout trade channels.

Coöperation Desirable.

If only one florist in a community uses the Chicago stamps it will be good for that florist, but it will not make a ripple in the trade in a big city. To get good action a considerable number of florists should use them. It already is assured that several of Chicago's largest florists will help the work along and the committee in charge wants to put the thing through in a number of other cities. It is urged that where there is no florists' club to take action, or no time for action, individual florists get together, pool their orders and take advantage of the low prices that are to be obtained by ordering the stamps in quantity. As with everything else in the line, the greater the quantity produced, the cheaper it is possible to make the prices.

The Chicago Club's Valentine's Stamp.

The committee will deliver the stamps at these prices:

100 stamps	$ 0.75
500 stamps	3.00
1,000 stamps	5.00
2,000 stamps	9.00
5,000 stamps	20.00
10,000 stamps	35.00
15,000 stamps	50.00
25,000 stamps	70.00
50,000 stamps	125.00
100,000 stamps	200.00
500,000 stamps	500.00
1,000,000 stamps	800.00

The posters are 5 cents each, or 50 cents per dozen.

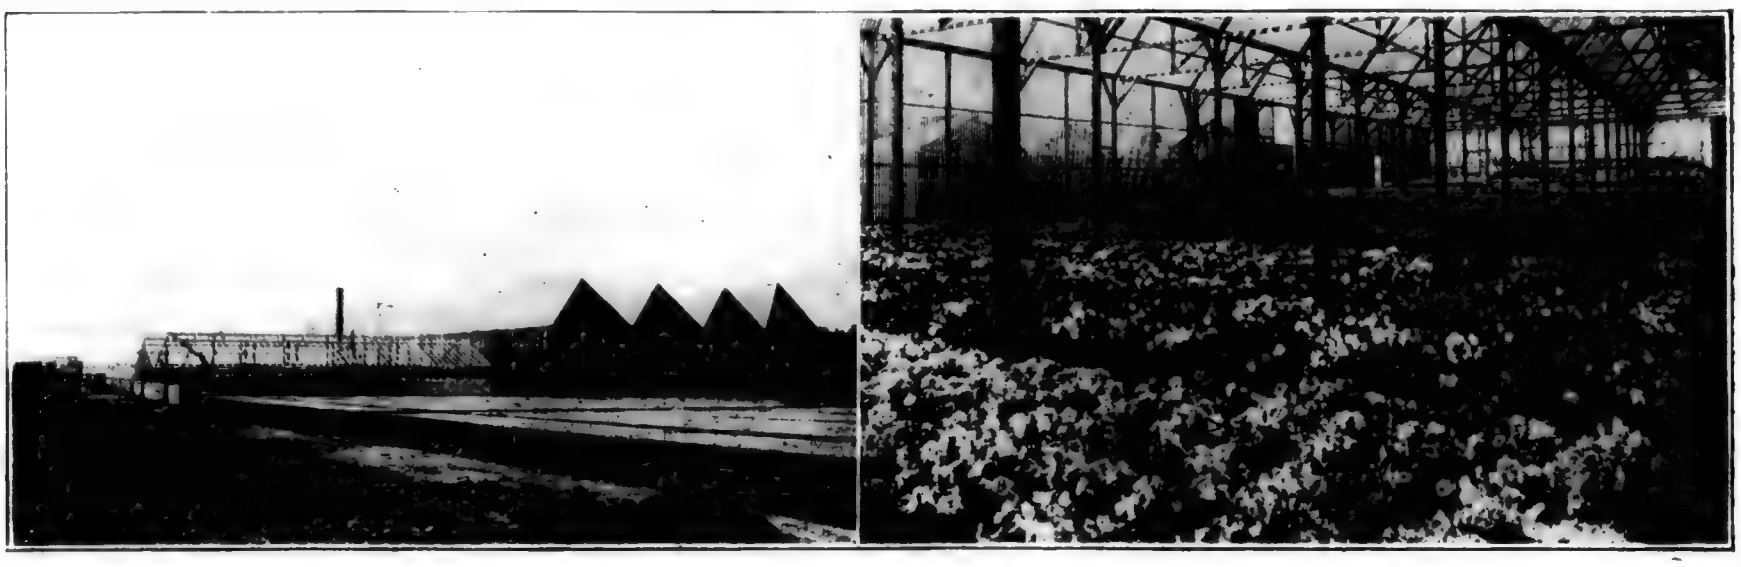
F. Lautenschlager, 444 West Erie street, Chicago, is in charge for the Florists' Club. He will fill orders or answer inquiries.

In the Future.

If it develops that sufficient quantities of the stamps can be sold to reimburse the club for the $100 appropriated for the use of the committee, a similar effort will be made for the next special flower day. Any profits which may result are to be used for future publicity work. No one is to get an individual profit except the profit which is to come from the increase in sales that will come with a first-class success.

COST ACCOUNTING IS VITAL.

[The following is an extract from an address by Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, at Chicago January 14, 1917.]



We are a new country and a few years ago we did not have the keen competition that we now have and the necessity for watching the new details of our business was not required. But, gentlemen, the days for "happy-go-lucky" business methods are past. We now have keen competition and we must realize that we are going to have even keener competition.

It is recognized that a business man must be concerned not only with the efficiency of his own business but with the efficiency of his competitor's business, and realize that unhealthiness anywhere in his industry will react seriously on him.

Ignorance a Menace to All.

It is a fact well understood among business men that the general demoralization in a large number of industries has been caused by firms who cut prices not knowing what their goods actually cost. The cost of selling, which is equally important, often is almost lost sight of.

Before After

Showing What G. E. M. Stumpp Did With an Old Long Island Residence When it Came into His Possession.

to themselves, their customers, or their competitors?

Quality and service are becoming greater factors in the field of merchandising. Long after the price of a product is forgotten the quality is remembered.

The man who does not know his true costs is the man who prices his goods foolishly and thereby impairs the business of his sound competitors at the same time that he ruins his own.

Please understand me, the menace is not in underselling, for a business concern must expect to face the low prices that are due to efficiency. But even the most efficient concern is not always able to meet cut-throat prices based on ignorance.

A Hint for the S. A. F.

The Federal Trade Commission has urged upon business men the importance of installing adequate cost accounting systems. We have sent out to the business men of the country, both manufacturers and retail merchants, approximately 350,000 cost accounting pamphlets, and thousands of letters have been received in reply commending the commission for this work. We have, through our expert accountants, cooperated with trade associations which are endeavoring to work out uniform and adequate cost accounting systems for their entire industry. Each particular industry must work out its own plan, and in its own way. When the men in a given industry, however, have found a system that is uniform and satisfactory to them, and this system is presented to the Federal Trade Commission, the commission will consider the plan carefully and if it is sound will approve it as the standard system for that particular industry.

Making a Statement.

Supplemental to our cost accounting work, we have asked the Institute of Public Accountants to draw up a set of rules which will govern the making out of certified statements as well as guide all accountants and auditors in the making up of balance sheets. Our hope is to reach some uniform basis for the handling of depreciation and other items so that balance sheets upon which bankers base their credit risks will be sound and reveal the true state of the business upon which they are based. It has developed that, even in the case of reports made by certified public accountants, the reported values of assets are frequently misleading, because depreciations have not been properly allowed for, and no statement made in the report from which the bank, using it as a basis of credit, can form any correct idea of the value of the plant as a going concern, or its value as an asset in case of the failure of the owner.

I predict that within five years there will be little money loaned by any banker in the United States to anyone who does not present a statement showing detailed information not only regarding his true assets and liabilities, but also indicating that he is conducting his business in an efficient manner and that he absolutely knows his true costs.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

The accompanying illustrations are interesting as affording two examples of the resourcefulness of certain of the younger men in the business. The scenes are on the property of George E. M. Stumpp, the New York retailer, at Southampton, L. I. When this old home, with its acre and more of ground, came into the possession of this energetic young man it showed the neglect it had received. Today it shows the care of one who knows how. The outdoors has been transformed, and no less has the mansion. The house is said to have been 115 years of age when Mr. Stumpp acquired it—you will admit it looked it. Today it looks like a modern residence in the colonial style. The window boxes are a feature. On the lawn there are many novelties in plant and aquatic life.

But the transformation of the residence and grounds is not all Mr. Stumpp has accomplished. Southampton is a community of the summer homes of prosperous city people; it afforded an opening for a business that would be best at the time the activity at the Fifth avenue store is at its lowest ebb. So Mr. Stumpp built a somewhat unusual structure, 50x75 feet, shown in another of the illustrations, where there now is a highly profitable summer business. The formal rose garden adjoining the store calls many visitors during the blooming season.

COTTAGE GARDENS CHANGES.

Charles Willis Ward, founder and majority owner of the Cottage Gardens Co., of Queens, Long Island, N. Y., has sold the majority of his holding of stock in that corporation to his son, David S. Ward, who will succeed his father as majority owner and president of the company.

The new president, David S. Ward, has for the last three years occupied the position of superintendent of the greenhouse department.

R. T. Brown, vice-president and general manager for the last fourteen years at Queens, will probably remove to California to assist Mr. Ward in completing the organization of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries at Eureka.

W. D. Fraser, formerly with the Lilly Co., of Seattle, Wash., and the Luther Burbank Co., of Santa Rosa, Cal., is slated to take Mr. Brown's place at Queens.

THE COAL CRISIS COMES

EMBARGO ON SMOKELESS COAL.

Railroad Stops Western Shipments.

This has been the coldest week of the winter in the central states and it has brought the crisis in coal, of which there have been so many forebodings.

The most serious event of the week has been the imposition of an embargo on coal shipments by the Norfolk & Western railroad. This is the road which brings out of West Virginia nearly all of the smokeless coal used in the greenhouse establishments in the cities of the central states. January 13 it imposed an embargo on shipments for points west of Columbus, O., the reason assigned being that the railroads connecting at that point were not able to move the freight west and that a congestion had occurred. It was stated that the embargo would be raised as soon as the congestion is relieved, but for several days no coal for growers west of Columbus has been accepted from the mines.

Coal Like Molasses in January.

The movement of coal cars always is slowest at this time of year. Snow and zero temperature present the worst possible conditions for railroading and growers are accustomed to irregularity in deliveries during such weather as has prevailed in the central states for the last few days. The great trouble this year is that with rare exceptions everyone is getting along on the hand-to-mouth basis. There are a few forehanded growers who had their bunkers full of fuel before the autumn squeeze, and who have been able to secure sufficient deliveries so that the reserve stock still is untouched, but in most cases suppliers have known which florists had reserve stock and have diverted deliveries to the point that reserve stocks necessarily have been consumed, so that nearly all growers are dependent on the more or less daily deliveries to keep from freezing up.

While no serious losses have been reported, every florist knows of a dozen others who do not have coal enough to run them another twenty-four hours unless they get deliveries.

Spot Prices.

During the mild weather of early January the spot market weakened a little; consumption was lighter and cars were moving at an unusual rate. But with the return of zero the spot market has taken another jump. Large numbers of buyers who heretofore have obtained deliveries on their contracts have been forced into the market during the last week and the result has been that prices this week are the highest yet known. They vary widely, in accordance with the estimated desirability of the prospective customer.

Passing the Buck.

While the situation is the most serious that ever confronted the greenhouse trade and the general public, there is time for acrimonious debate as to the responsibility for it. The coal man places it upon the railroads, but the railroads promptly pass it back to the coal trade, asserting that custom in the fuel business is responsible for the present burden on consumers. The railroads point out that their yards are congested with cars loaded with coal that are bandied back and forth among brokers under the reconsignment plan that has become custom in the coal trade. It is asserted that the reconsignment privilege has been employed all season to hold shipments off the market and thereby raise the price.

Growers Are Paying the Price.

A few of the large producers selling direct to consumers still are making deliveries at the contract figure. The writer of this article has within the last few days seen the invoices of two of the large West Virginia producers who are delivering coal to growers at $1.50 per ton f. o. b. the mines, although the same coal could be sold at considerably more than twice that figure on the open market. These producers assert that they are sending no coal to the open market, but are delivering their entire output to contract customers.

But in the majority of cases one reason or another has been found for raising the price to contract customers. In one case it was impossible to get cars for delivery of the contract coal, but another and inferior kind of coal could be delivered at a somewhat higher price. In another case the quality deteriorated until the buyer asked that deliveries be stopped. In some cases the seller has stated plainly that he would raise the price or quit. One way or another, nearly every florist now is paying hitherto unheard of prices for his coal. Those who pay promptly are being taken care of below market quotations, but they nevertheless fail to get fuel at contract rates.

Next Season's Prices.

Difficult as is the present situation, thought is turning to contracts for next season. The matter is up for attention earlier this year for two reasons. During the dull years just passed the practice of contracting was largely abandoned and reliance placed on the open market. The reaction naturally is toward greater numbers than ever before contracting for next season. Also, in other lines of business contracts are being made earlier than usual and growers fear that the output of mines may be placed under contract before their own greenhouse interests are taken care of. Inquiries as to contracts for next year indicate that the producers are not interested except at prices rather more than a dollar a ton higher than the contract prices for this season.

MOLES AND MEN

TO EXTERMINATE MOLES.

I read the letter of F. W. & C., in The Review of December 28, stating that they are troubled with moles in their sweet pea beds. Some years ago I was annoyed by moles just as F. W. & C. are and I tried almost every known remedy, but without avail. Then one of my employees, an old man from Holland, told me that if I would procure some salt fish he would rid the place of the moles. Surely enough, in less than two weeks not a trace of the pests could be seen. He dug holes in the runs, dropped into them pieces of the fish about the size of a walnut and then closed the holes. He told me to repeat the dose if any of the moles returned. I spread the good news to my neighbors and they also have freed their places of moles by following the same method. The old man explained the operation of the remedy by stating that the moles love fish and the salt kills them. Whether that is the right theory or not, the plan worked well for me and may do so for others.

W. M. Coleman.

MOSS'S MENAGERIE.

Recently I noticed several inquiries in The Review as to how to get rid of moles in the greenhouse. I have often wondered in what way moles are destructive.

I have been using solid beds for about five years and they have been and are full of moles. So far the moles have never injured anything, neither lettuce, sweet peas, carnations nor mums. The moles make the beds unsightly, perhaps, but the first time they come along after a bed has been spaded I turn the hose into their runways, and after that they go so deep that they are not noticed. These deep runways make good subirrigation ditches.

I am quite sure moles destroy enormous quantities of white grubs and wireworms, both of which are destructive in the beds. If I were not already plentifully supplied with moles, I certainly would advertise in the papers that I needed more of them. An interesting feature is that the moles have followed the same routes in the beds from year to year. No matter how often or how deep a bed is spaded, they will not miss the old track more than three inches in as many years. They have periods of activity and then seem to be dormant for weeks at a time.

Toads, I think, also are useful around a greenhouse. In the spring when sow bugs and slugs begin to get active, I announce to the boys in the neighborhood that I will pay 10 cents each for good, fat toads, and my houses soon are cleared of anything big enough for a toad to eat. I put them up in the benches, where they will remain for weeks at a time. One 3-legged fellow has been with me for three years.

Several years ago a bright boy went down to the creek and found a few toad nests. I almost fainted when he walked in with 600 or 700 baby toads and demanded the customary fee of 10 cents each. I cut the price then and there, and bought them by the pint. Since then I always specify "big, fat toads," although the little ones are just as ravenous as the big ones, and are on the job twenty-four hours per day.

R. E. Moss.

MOLES AND METHODS.

In The Review for December 28 I read with considerable interest, not to say amusement, the article on exterminating moles in benches. As one who has waged a lifetime battle with these small pests, I may be excused if I offer a word of incredulity as to the methods suggested in the article. Moles, scientists state, and I do not think it has ever been proved to the contrary, subsist exclusively on animal food. Their predilection for bran is a myth, and I have yet to find anyone who can satisfactorily prove that he has found the corpse of a poisoned mole.

The fact that tulip bulbs and other bulbs and roots are eaten does not disprove the mole's eating habits. The mischief in these cases is caused by field mice, which use the mole's runs as thoroughfares for their provender, and the poor old mole gets the blame. It is possible and sometimes practicable to drive moles from their haunts by putting moth balls, kerosene or other strong-smelling substances in their runs, but this is not of real benefit to the community, as in these cases the other fellow gets your share of moles. A good trap, used with considerable care, is, in my opinion, the only system. Moles have an extraordinary sense of smell, and the traps should in all cases be deodorized by rubbing them with earth, with gloves on the hands, or the moles will fill the trap with earth or push it out of the ground by burrowing below. You will find the "old-timers" wise to a trap if once they discover its whereabouts.

This business of covering the moles' feet with lye is a new one to me, but I "hae ma doots." I once knew a man who claimed that he poisoned moles by dropping live earthworms in the runs; he said the worms had previously been fed with arsenic or some other poison in minute doses. It is a fact that moles, some of them, anyhow, disappeared from localities so treated. There were always enough left for seed, future families, and as this man tried out the poison he used on himself, the process is hardly to be recommended, although in his case it may be presumed that moles did not further trouble him.

There is a mole exterminator on the market here, a smoke-producing kind of firework, which, placed in the runs, is supposed to kill them. Being "from Missouri," I tried a lot of these, and the moles seemed to think they were getting a Fourth of July celebration. They came in crowds from adjacent colonies and have been here ever since, so that I have come to the conclusion that they, like the poor, are ever with us.

Thomas Wylie.

Buffalo, N. Y.—W. H. Eiss, of the W. F. Kasting Co., says they are much pleased with the way the trade has received the offer of C. F. Guenther's sport of Maud Dean chrysanthemum, named Hamburg Late White. Mr. Eiss says Mr. Guenther already has orders for as much stock as he can deliver in March.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION OLD GOLD.

Probably no carnation breeder anywhere in the world has given as much attention to the development of varieties yellow in color as has F. Dorner & Sons Co., of La Fayette, Ind. In Europe yellow carnations are in strong demand and it is thought they will become popular here when a variety is evolved which will possess the qualities necessary to get the growers to plant it in quantity so that there will be a steady supply.

Old Gold is the latest Dorner yellow. It is claimed by the originator to be the best yellow thus far produced, coupling good growing qualities with the flowers of the character shown in the accompanying illustration.

OUTDOOR CARNATION CULTURE.

Would it be practical to grow carnations outdoors for summer blooming? If so, what size of plants should be put out in the spring? What varieties would be best and what kind of soil would be required? J. B. A.—N. C.

It is possible and practical to bloom carnations outdoors during the summer, providing proper preparations are made and suitable varieties are planted. Use such varieties as give you the best results during early fall and late spring. Any variety which does not do well during warm weather should not be used. Your experience with the several varieties you grow indoors will guide you in selecting those to be used.

The plants should be started early enough to be well branched before planting-out time, so that no more topping will be needed after they are set in their blooming position; otherwise their blooming period will be too short to be profitable. The same soil in which you grow your carnation plants for benching will be suitable for this purpose, but the plants will be benefited by a liberal mulch of stable manure after they have begun to make a little headway. The manure will help to hold the moisture and give a little extra fertility, which the plants will relish. They also will appreciate liberal watering.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS NEED MORE HEAT.

Kindly inform me why my carnation plants do not bloom as fast as they should, and how I should treat them to get the desired results. My house is 35x100 feet, up-to-date in every respect, and heated by a hot water system. My plants were housed during the latter part of July, in a compost consisting of four parts of loam and one part of cow manure. In November I noticed that the plants were not flowering rapidly, so I gave them a top-dressing of sheep manure. As that did not help the plants, I was advised to give them a dressing of cow manure. The manure now has been in two weeks, but it does not seem to have accelerated the flower development. The varieties are Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme, White Enchantress, White Wonder and Harlowarden. From about 4,000 plants I can cut only fifty blooms daily. I try to keep the house temperature at 52 degrees, but toward morning it will drop to 42 or 45 degrees. There are plenty of buds on the plants and the stems have a good color and are stiff. I also have given the plants two doses of lime. The house runs east and west and receives all the sunshine there is.

Carnation Old Gold.

J. H. S.—Conn.

As I see it, the only thing wrong with your carnation culture is the lack of uniformity in your house temperature. As long as you allow it to drop to 42 degrees, the flowers will come along slower than they should. This condition likely will continue until you have a mild, clear spell of weather toward spring, and then you will have a deluge of blooms. Make provisions for keeping your house temperature at 50 to 52 degrees during the entire night, and raise it to 60 degrees on cloudy days and 65 to 70 degrees at noon on bright days. You then will soon see an improvement in the size of your cut. A. F. J. B.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

The date of Easter, 1917, is April 8, and that is less than three months away. It may seem a long time just now, but remember that if lilies are to be on time for that great flower festival they must show their flower buds plainly not later than February 25. After that, given a minimum night temperature of 60 degrees, they should be along in season. Plants should now be six to nine inches high. If less than six inches high they are late and will need all the heat you can give them. Better do the forcing now rather than after the buds are showing. Probably you have potted in 6-inch pots and filled the pots about half full of earth. As soon as the shoots are nine inches long fill in this remaining space, leaving, of course, a good margin to hold water. Bulbs put in 4-inch pots must be shifted into 6-inch pots before they become matted. Spray the plants with nicotine or fumigate them to keep aphis in check. Throw away any diseased stock; move backward plants to a warmer location. Try to give all the plants a temperature of as near 60 degrees at night as possible.

Lilium Candidum.

The beautiful and popular Madonna lily will not stand hard forcing. Our plants intended for Easter blooming now are nine to twelve inches high and are growing in a minimum temperature of 50 degrees. Do not exceed this temperature if you want good flowers. You can force this lily into bloom as you would giganteum, Formosa or Harrisii, but the plants will produce flowers half their natural size and will be much lacking in substance.

Perennial Phloxes.

Propagation of perennial phloxes is comparatively simple at this season. If you remembered to lift a few clumps of such varieties as you wish to increase your stock from, you can now place these clumps in a temperature of 50 degrees. When the cuttings are three inches long take them off and root them as you would mums or carnations, later potting each singly. This stock can be gradually hardened and planted outdoors from the middle to the end of April. You cannot go far wrong in working up a good stock of the best varieties of phloxes. The demand for them remains constant and strong and a few clumps or a bed of them near your house should prove a splendid advertisement for you.

Late-Flowering Pansies.

Many florists either forget to sow pansies in the early fall or, fearing an inability to successfully winter them, depend on seeds sown during the winter to flower in early summer. Sow seeds now in flats, in a temperature of 55 degrees. Later transplant them to other flats and still later, if bench space permits, plant the young stock in a bench in a house kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night. Use a light, rich soil, one containing a good proportion of well decayed manure. Purchase good seeds, and if you use a portion in separate colors it should prove useful for bedding.

Candytuft.

Candytuft makes one of the best Memorial day crops. The giant white strain is the best to grow and seeds should be sown about the middle of January, so that plants may be benched early in March. I like to sow in flats and later pot the plants off singly, planting out before the little plants can become pot-bound. It is important to grow the best procurable strain of white candytuft and, if you specialize in it, I would strongly advise you to select some specially fine types and sow seeds from them. Only by doing this can you get a really superior strain.

Cinerarias.

Cinerarias like cool weather and now are making rapid growth. If they have not yet been placed in their flowering pots, they should be moved with as little delay as possible. Give them a compost containing one-third old cow manure passed through a coarse screen and a 4-inch potful of fine bone to each bushel of compost. A night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees is better in every way than 50 degrees; the warmer they are grown, the more spindly and unsatisfactory will the plants be, and the more effectively will green aphis get in its work. If leaf miners attack the foliage give the plants a spraying of Nico-Fume juice, properly diluted. As the plants progress, spread them out so that the foliage will not become attenuated and weakly. A weekly fumigation should be given to keep green aphis away.

Geraniums

GERANIUM FOLIAGE DISEASED.

About a month ago I found spotted leaves on two of my geranium plants; now I have six or more. One is Scarlet Bedder and the others are Poitevine. The trouble commences on the new leaves. Yellow spots come first, the discoloration spreading until the surface covered seems burned and dry. While the plants have not died, they are worthless to propagate from; in fact, they make little growth after attacked.

This is my first year in this work and I am having a bad time. I have only two houses, each 25x62, and want to add more eventually, but I must get started right. Will you kindly tell me if there are some kinds of plants that I can start from seed now in flats and, by transplanting to beds or pots, get marketable pot plants or cut flowers from them by spring? Owing to the high price of coal, I am not able to buy potted stock or bulbs. Could I do anything with calceolarias, cinerarias, snapdragons, salvias, cyclamens or primulas, or is there something better? I shall appreciate your advice.

A. R. H.—N. Y.

The best plan is to throw away the diseased geranium plants. If more trouble appears, give the plants a spraying with Fungine, as per the directions on the can. This is an excellent and safe antidote for fungoid diseases of all kinds. Geraniums want a light, sunny house which is well ventilated. They like a dry atmosphere and should not be sprayed overhead at all when watering. Let the plants dry out well between waterings.

The following are some of the annuals you can start from seeds for spring sales: Salvias, petunias, vincas, verbenas, salpiglossis, asters, stocks, marigolds, zinnias, snapdragons, lobelias and begonias of the Vernon type. Of these you can sow begonias, verbenas, vincas, snapdragons and petunias now; the other kinds a little later. Calceolarias and cinerarias you can sow in late July or early August to flower the following eason. Cyclamens should be sown in August to flower for Thanksgiving and Christmas of the following year. Primula Sinensis and P. obconica can be sown from now until April. For good holiday plants sow this month. P. malacoides you need not sow until July. If I were a beginner, I would let the cyclamens and primulas alone for at least one season. Special care is needed to germinate seeds of greenhouse annuals successfully.

C. W.

RAMBLER ROSES FOR EASTER.

Will you please tell me when to bring in baby rambler roses from the cold pit to have them right for Easter? I have been in the business only a short time and have heretofore bought plants which already were forced.

V. M.—Ont.

Give the plants a temperature of 50 degrees at once, spraying them freely until they break. After this give them more heat, 58 to 60 degrees at night if possible. Spray them more sparingly once growth has got a good start. Avoid cold drafts, which would start mildew. Feed the plants with liquid manure until the flowers start to open, then discontinue it. C. W.

TIME TO HOUSE RAMBLERS.

We have a nice lot of Tausendschon, Dorothy Perkins and other rose plants that were grown in 4-inch pots last summer and now are dormant in coldframes. When shall we start them and how shall we handle them to have them in bloom for Easter? How long does it take them to flower and what is the proper temperature? J. W. R. C.—Ill.

Shake the roses out of the 4-inch pots and give them a shift into 5-inch or 5½-inch pots, using a good, strong loam. House the plants at once, giving them a temperature of 50 degrees until they break. Later raise the temperature to 60 degrees. They will need all the time between now and Easter, which is April 8, to be in flower. It will be an advantage to have flowers opening a little in advance of Easter. The plants then can be placed where it is a little cooler. C. W.

RHEA REID ROSES DYING.

I am sending a Rhea Reid rose plant for your inspection. The plants have been in a bench for a year and a half. Last spring they did finely, but now many of them are suddenly dying. Can you give me any advice as to the treatment of them? R. A. W.—Mich.

The rose plant received had a large mass of roots, but the top was nearly dead. What leaves were left on the plant were small and were brown at the ends. The soil that came with the plant was a good clay loam, a fine soil for roses. Judging from the large mass of roots on the plant, it seems likely that water and feed have been applied too sparingly, forcing the plants to reach out and try to find enough nourishment to support the tops. It might be suspected, also, from the appearance of the foliage, that there is considerable alkali in the water, and, as the plants had been kept too much on the dry side, the roots took up part of this alkali with the water, and the alkali burned the tops.

The best treatment in such a case would be to give the soil a thorough washing out by watering heavily for two or three days in succession, flooding the benches each time. Then, in about a week, when the plants show new life, give them a feeding of half decayed manure, preferably cattle manure, dissolving it well with water so that the roots can take it up immediately. As the days are getting longer now, the plants will need considerable feed and water to keep them going.

W. J. K.

LATE SPRING STOCKS.

We would like to have some information as to the proper time to sow seeds of the following, so that the plants will be in bloom by the first week in May: Ageratum, 2, 3 and 4-inch pots; alyssum, 2 and 3-inch pots; bellis, 2-inch; forget-me-not, 2 and 3-inch; impatiens, 2 and 3-inch; heliotrope, 3 and 4-inch; petunia, 2 and 3-inch; salvia, 2, 3 and 4-inch; verbena, 2 and 3-inch. What is the proper temperature for each of these? G. L. C. & S.—Pa.

Ageratum, twelve weeks; alyssum, nine to ten weeks; heliotrope, twelve to fourteen weeks; single petunia, fourteen to fifteen weeks; salvia, ten to twelve weeks; verbena, twelve to fourteen weeks. Bellis perennis and forget-me-nots are better if treated as biennials. Seeds sown in August and wintered outdoors or in a coldframe bloom finely for Memorial day. Some of the bellis sown now might flower, but the forget-me-nots would be a doubtful proposition. It is hard to give precise periods, as much depends on the temperatures, the season the sowing is done and the care the seedlings get. A temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at sowing time, and 55 degrees at night when potted, will suit about all the plants named. Heliotropes and salvias prefer a little more heat than alyssums, ageratums, verbenas and petunias. Both bellis and myosotis need cooler treatment. I would suggest sowing these with pansies early in August another season. C. W.

TO LENGTHEN LILY STEMS.

Please let me know if I should shade my giganteum lilies to have longer stems on them. They are growing in pots and are on the middle bench in the greenhouse, where they receive the full sunlight. They are coming in unevenly, some being three or four inches tall and others eight inches. H. H.—Ill.

If you shade the glass it will lengthen the stems on your lilies materially. Run the plants warm and moist. C. W.

Norwich, England.—Robert Holmes is distributing a novelty which he calls the Tomtato. It produces tomatoes on the stem and potatoes at the root.

Orleans, France.—A notable feature of trade activities in this, the third, year of war, is the way in which French women who have been left without male help have kept their establishments going pending the return of the men. The French nurseryman's wife in nearly every case is a competent business person and a worker.

London, England.—A nurseryman told the Camberley Tribunal last week how British nurserymen are capturing the trade formerly carried on by Germany with America. One firm, he said, had received an order from America for 765,000 rose trees, an order that formerly went to Germany, and his own firm were exporting from $30,000 to $35,000 worth of rhododendrons to America in February and March. The German nursery trade with America was stopped by the blockade.

London, England.—The gardening press is having a serious time, worse now than during earlier stages of the war. There have been a number of suspensions, the most recent being that of the Gardeners' Magazine, which ranks second among the gardening journals. The Gardeners' Chronicle still appears regularly, but is greatly reduced in size, especially in its advertising section. The so-called trade journals are doing better than the gardening papers of general circulation.

Rotterdam, Holland.—The Netherlands government, under its recent order whereby Dutch ships trading with American ports were put under restrictions as to the class and quantity of merchandise they should carry, commandeered for wheat and flour the entire cargo space of the 17,149-ton steamship Nieuw Amsterdam, which left New York January 6 for Rotterdam, according to officials of the Holland-America line. Thus far no restrictions have been placed on the merchandise to be taken on westward trips and horticultural goods will move as usual.

POINTERS ON ORCHIDS.

Does it make any difference whether orchid houses are heated by steam or by hot water? I refer in particular to cattleya houses. What is the advantage of growing the plants close to the glass? Will they not do as well in a high house as in a low one? B. W. A.—Ky.

Orchid houses may be heated by either steam or hot water. I prefer hot water, as it is a softer heat and does not create so arid an atmosphere. Some large growers, however, use steam successfully. Cattleyas prefer a roomy house where they can have plenty of air. Cypripediums and other varieties do better in smaller houses where they can be kept more close and humid. Cattleyas, and in fact all orchids, to succeed well must be staged or hung as near the glass as possible. They will grow well if placed a long distance from the glass, but they will never flower satisfactorily. C. W.

BLIND SHEATHS ON CATTLEYAS.

I am sending you a bulb of Cattleya Trianæ. I have but recently taken charge of my present place and I find that many of the plants of C. Trianæ were affected in the same way last year. The sheaths turned yellow and never flowered. Some turned yellow before the flowers showed in the sheaths and some after the flowers were seen. Not all the flowers on a plant were so affected; some were all right. A few of the cattleya flowers dried up at the top of the sepal and at the edge of the petal also. The plants were not dry at the time.

F. F.—Cal.

There are one or two probable causes for blind sheaths on Cattleya Trianæ. The principal cause is too heavy shading on the plants. This keeps the plants of a fine, dark green color, such as your bulb has, but the growth is soft and a large part of the bulbs will throw blind sheaths, as yours have done. Too much water at the root when the growth is being completed will also help to cause this trouble. You will find that in a number of cases, even when the flower sheath dies in this way, the bulb flowers just the same.

To overcome the trouble another season, I would give the plants more light, especially when growth is well made up, and gradually reduce the water supply at that time. Be sure to air the plants freely. In your latitude it should be possible to air day and night the whole year around. Cattleyas abominate coddling, and resent it by making quantities of aërial roots and "petering out" much earlier than those grown cooler and aired freely. In winter 50 to 55 degrees at night is better than 60 to 65 degrees; in fact, I would rather have the temperature 45 degrees than 65 degrees, especially if much fire heat has to be used.

C. W.

NERINES AND BEGONIAS.

I have some clumps of coral-red nerines growing outdoors. These have not been disturbed for thirty years. When should they be divided and transplanted? Where can I get the white and pink sorts?

Where can I procure Begonia La Vesuve, as mentioned in The Review of August 10, and the large-flowered English hybrids, as referred to in The Review of December 7? S. B.—Ga.

Nerines start to grow in October and should be transplanted just before the growing season starts. When pot-grown they complete their growth about the end of May and are then kept absolutely dust-dry until flower spikes appear in early fall. I do not know of any American concern offering white varieties; they are, as yet, quite scarce. Pink is more abundant. Our American firms usually catalogue a couple of varieties only. Larger assortments may be purchased in England, the Channel islands and Holland.

Begonia La Vesuve, also called Vesuvius, is a fibrous-rooted variety, easily grown from seed procurable from a number of seedsmen. The large English hybrids can be had from John Scheepers & Co., Stone street, New York. C. W.

VINCA LEAF-SPOT.

I am sending some vincas under separate cover. They seem to be affected with some kind of leaf-spot. Can you tell me the cause of it and the remedy for it? R. M. G.—Mont.

This is not at all unusual during dark, cold weather. Cut back the affected plants close to the pots. They invariably break away again, perfectly healthy. During dark, cold weather avoid overhead spraying. If the trouble seems to spread, give the plants a spraying with a good fungicide, such as Fungine or Bordeaux mixture. C. W.

TOMATOES NEED POTASH.

We are growing a winter crop of tomatoes and commenced picking December 10. Can you tell us why many of the tomatoes have green spots when they begin to ripen and why they do not ripen with the skin red all over? Also, why do many of them fall off before they ripen? W. F.—N. Y.

Without understanding more about your cultural conditions, it is not easy to say just what is the trouble with your tomatoes. I think they undoubtedly are growing too rankly and that the soil has been kept too moist to suit them; also, that you have been giving them an excess of nitrogenous food and too little potash. Let your plants dry out well between waterings. Do not apply liquid manure at this season; if the plants are starved at all at the roots, rather give them a top-dressing of some old, well decayed manure. Add a little potash to this, even if merely a dusting of unleached wood ashes. Let the temperature average 60 to 62 degrees at night. Keep a dry, buoyant atmosphere and shorten back the leaves to let all possible light reach the fruit. Tomatoes in midwinter do much better with their roots in restricted borders. C. W.

Anderson, Ind.—A bad freeze last month, following a blow-out of two sections of the hot water boiler, brought ruin to several thousand plants at the D. W. Leatherman range. Among the ruined stock was a lot of new double Viaud geraniums. A fellow florist is taking care of some white carnations originated by Mr. Leatherman, who expects to exhibit them at the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Indianapolis January 31.

AMERICA'S NATIONAL FLOWER.

Why Not Choose the Gladiolus?

The article on a national flower, by C. S. Harrison, of Nebraska, in a recent issue of The Review, deserves more attention than it seems to have received. Sometime a national flower will be chosen, and when the decision is reached it will probably be reached in something of a hurry, as in all national matters when forced by the people. Why, then, may we not give the subject more attention as we go along, helping just a little every little while, and advancing toward the desirable object in an educational way? Anything that is bound to come some future day should not be lightly tossed aside, even if an immediate decision is impossible.

It might be asked, what is desired in a national flower? First, something with bright, clear and pleasing colors; second, a flower which is easily handled by the masses, including the children, and which will not be easily destroyed; third, one that can be procured cheaply, in quantity, and easily grown by everybody.

Objections to the Iris.

A number of years ago it was my privilege to publish a small floral paper. It was the time when the first furor regarding a national flower passed over the country. My preference was then for the goldenrod—so bright and golden in color, at home everywhere in the United States, and easily handled. Many others advocated it also, but the cry of "weed" rather hurt its good name and it was gradually dropped. The mountain laurel has been advocated, also the rose, and many other flowers of less known value.

Mr. Harrison has given us a good argument in favor of the iris. It certainly is a beautiful flower, and the new ones are most gorgeous. But I am led to ask, which one shall we choose? Our own dainty blue, or the German, or the English, or the Siberian, or some other? Ought we not to have as the national flower something that stands for one thing, or one type, all over this great country of ours? While the iris is a most beautiful flower when properly handled, how long would it last in a procession where enthusiasm runs rampant, as on holidays or gala days It seems to me something is needed that the children especially can carry and wave to their hearts' content, and that will stand some grief at such times. We want all the bright colors, as well as the old red, white and blue, and something that will be an inspiration to everyone that sees the emblem; something that will make a person hurrah for the stars and stripes and the country that stands behind them.

Every other nation of any prominence has its national flower, and America will have its in due time. In order not to be compelled to choose something of mediocre value, or not worthy the honor, let us discuss the subject in a fair, open manner. By so doing we shall obtain the best opinion of all, and secure what is really the best when the opportune time shall come to make the decision. And there is no class of men in the United States better able to handle such a discussion than the florists of America.

Suitability of the Gladiolus.

Seldom, if ever, is the first selection in any discussion given the honor of the field, but this one, that one, or the other one, after days and sometimes years of discussion, is chosen. All hail to the flower that finally secures the honor! All hail to the one flower capable of filling every niche and corner of our united country! All hail to the gladiolus, the only flower that meets every requirement! Men, women and children can wave it in triumph in city, town and country all over this broad land, and each answering wave will bring added enthusiasm, till procession and curbstone, hall and home, school and church will be ablaze with the flower for the millions, the one the millions love. All hail to the gladiolus, America's national flower!

The gladiolus is a showy flower. It can be seen and recognized farther than any other flower. When handled by everybody and in no careful way, the gladiolus will stand the strain better than any known flower in cultivation. A spike of flowers from one to two feet in length, carrying its own staff, or handle if you wish, so that it can be waved back and forth, as it surely will need to be, with colors that cannot be beaten in any other family of plants—such a combination of suitable qualities will not be downed. When the public fully recognizes the value of the gladiolus, I believe it will be chosen as the best representative in the floral kingdom to maintain the honor that surely will be ascribed to America's national flower.

Effect on Trade Interests.

Let the florists and growers of gladioli unite, and at home, in clubs, in conventions and everywhere boost the gladiolus to the head of the column of aspirants. Let this grand old flower, that cannot be beaten for beauty and grace, represent America on every banner that waves in procession, hall or public meeting associated with any patriotic purpose.

While the profitable end is not to be the first consideration, it would apply to any flower chosen. It is no small part of the program, for our particular trade and profession. The selection of the gladiolus would impart an impetus to the planting of the bulbs in quantity, so that flowers might be had for all purposes, and thousands would thus be used where now but tens or hundreds are planted.

We cannot find a better medium than The Review in which to commence the propaganda, and the call is made to all lovers of this grand old flower to put in their claims for consideration. Wake up, growers, and give the world your argument in favor of the gladiolus as America's national flower.

GRANT A. KIMMELL.

A CHARTER member of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, second vice-president during the society's first year and then vice-president for Hamilton county—in such unhesitating, whole-souled way did Grant A. Kimmell give himself to the support of the new organization. And in giving himself he gave to the society the benefit of the executive ability, enterprise and varied experience that are indicated in this summary of his career: Born in Noble county, Indiana, June 30, 1865; in 1898 started greenhouses at Albion, Ind.; sold these three years later and worked for the Johnson Floral Co., at Kendallville, Ind.; in 1904 removed to Chattanooga, Tenn., and took charge, for four years, of the W. F. Haeger business; entered the service of the city and constructed the new Warner park, completing it in two years; established the greenhouses at Forest Hills cemetery and conducted them for several years; returned to the W. F. Haeger place, where he now is manager.

CYCLAMEN MITE.

Under separate cover I am mailing a cyclamen plant. Please advise me what is wrong with it, the cause and the remedy. I have had quite a little trouble with my cyclamens in this way for the last two years.

P. L. W.—Mich.

The plant is affected with cyclamen mite, for which there is no real cure. The roots were rotted also, as if from an oversupply of water. I would advise you to drop cyclamen culture for a year. Nicotine sprayings have helped to fight mite in some cases, but they cannot be considered a complete remedy. Mite annually wipes out many plants. C. W.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

SCOPE OF COMPENSATION ACTS.

Courts Defining Limitations.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, recently obtained a ruling by the Illinois Supreme court to the effect that an Illinois employer who has not expressly elected to be bound by the provisions of the Illinois Workmen's Compensation Act is not liable under that act for injury sustained by an employee in a non-hazardous branch of the employer's operations. (114 Northeastern Reporter, 163.)

One Simonini had been employed on one of the seed company's farms in Cook county, doing ordinary farm work, teaming, caring for horses, etc. Having been injured by being kicked by a horse in the course of his employment, he brought proceedings against the company to recover an award under the Compensation Act. These proceedings have been dismissed by the Supreme court as being unauthorized by the law.

Not Extra-Hazardous.

Applying the provision of the Act, the court finds that the case could be brought within the provisions of the law only on a theory that the employee was engaged in an extra-hazardous employment, since the company had not signified its election to be bound by the law. The salient parts of the opinion read as follows:

"The injury sustained by the plaintiff in error was not one arising out of or in the course of any employment declared to be extra-hazardous. His employment was not different from that of the ordinary farm laborer. * * * Assuming, but not deciding or intimating, that maintaining and using the greenhouse, storehouse, and elevator was engaging in an extra-hazardous business, we shall consider the latter proposition only, whether the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act applied to all the business of the employer, without reference to its connection with the particular extra-hazardous business.

Lets Greenhousemen Out?

"The authority to elect given by the first section of the act extends to every employer in the state. This section refers to the person, and not to the business, and the election by the employer subjects him to the act together with all his employees. The third section refers primarily to the business, and not to the person of the employer. Its provisions expressly apply only to employers in the specified extra-hazardous occupations, and provide that in any action to recover damages against such an employer it shall not be a defense that the employee assumed the risk or that the injury was caused by the negligence of a fellow servant or by the contributory negligence of the employee. These provisions cannot be extended to apply to causes of action not having any connection with the extra-hazardous occupations mentioned. * * *

"The defendant in error was not an employer of the plaintiff in error in any of the extra-hazardous occupations mentioned in section 3, and plaintiff in error was not exposed to any of the dangers arising from such extra-hazardous occupations. Whether or not the defendant in error, as to any part of its business, was subject to the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, it was not subject to such provisions so far as the plaintiff in error was concerned."

THE NEW YORK SPRING SHOW.

All details as to arrangements for the spring flower show at New York, March 15 to 22, are reported complete by Secretary Young. The managing committee of florists holds a weekly meeting, Mondays. Among the features will be rose gardens and rock gardens like the excellent ones of last year, a display by the parks of New York and Brooklyn and the Red Cross tea room. Space, both in the competitive and trade sections, is causing the management much concern and it may yet be necessary to use the third floor of the Palace, if it will be available at the time of the show.

Charles H. Totty, chairman of the schedule committee, announces the scale of points adopted for rose gardens, the same to apply, as far as possible, on rock, bulb and spring gardens: Forty points to be considered for artistic design, general effect and accessories; twenty points for variety, twenty points for cultural perfection, and twenty points for practicability. The final schedule is now in course of preparation and will be distributed about March 1. About sixty pages of ads have been sold in the program.

The following trade firms have reserved space in the trade section and are arranging to make attractive exhibits:

Cromwell, Conn.—It is reported that A. N. Pierson, Inc., has acquired the new pink rose, Mrs. Charles G. Bell, raised at Twin Oaks, Washington, by George E. Anderson.

Medford, Mass.—Mrs. E. M. Gill, who has been in business here for many years, says she is tired and will retire from the profession at the close of this season.

Manchester, N. H.—J. W. Clark has taken over the business of George T. Davis, on Somerville street. He intends to grow a general line of spring plants, do some market gardening and try mums and bulbous stock in the fall.

Burlington, Vt.—Gove the Florist, with farm and greenhouses on Shelburne road and store and office at 184 Main street, says that at both places Mrs. E. A. Seidewitz has proved the most profitable chrysanthemum ever grown. There are photographs to prove it, snapshots taken a week before Christmas. Its merits are stated like this: "Blooms from Thanksgiving to January, being at its best about Christmas; a beautiful bright pink; large flower; nice stem and foliage; should be planted late and the latest bud taken."

Saxonville, Mass.—Raymond W. Swett says he has had a hard row to hoe, but that he is willing to scrape hard to find the wherewithal for five years' subscription to The Review.

Mt. Hope, Mass.—F. P. Falk recently has completed another large house at his range at 35 Berry street. He has an especially fine crop of ferns this season and says trade never was better.

New Bedford, Mass.—By one of those mischances that make editorial hairs gray, The Review recently made a Mr. Rex proprietor of a new store on Union street. This was all wrong; Harry Reck is the man who opened the store.

Westerly, R. I.—In a recent article dealing principally with George L. Stillman's 1917 novelty, the Millionaire dahlia, the Westerly Sun says: "The growth of Mr. Stillman's dahlia business has been rapid. Today he has the largest mail order business in Westerly. His present mailing list is over 19,000. This year he grew over 100,000 plants, which will make about 300,000 bulbs for planting in 1917. Mr. Stillman did a big cut flower business last summer from his new grounds on the Watch Hill road."

OBITUARY.

Charles Nearpass.

Charles Nearpass, of San Diego, Cal., one of the best known men in the seed trade on the south Pacific coast, died January 7 from heart failure caused by pneumonia. For twenty-seven years Mr. Nearpass had been in the seed business at 522 Sixth street, San Diego. He was 60 years old. He leaves a mother and wife, Mrs. Lola Nearpass, who will continue the business at the same stand. Mr. Nearpass was of a retiring disposition, but was a good business man and made many warm friends. There were numerous beautiful floral pieces at the funeral January 11, including several from members of the trade in Los Angeles and San Francisco. H. R. R.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business last week showed some improvement over that of the previous one. Stock in general has shortened in supply to some extent and an increase in the demand has taken up most of the available supply, leaving practically no surplus of any item.

Roses are of good quality, with the supply about large enough to meet the ordinary demand. Prices are fairly good and $5 for the shortest grades seems to be about the lowest quotation. Mrs. Russell roses are quite scarce and orders for this variety are being turned down daily. Prices are holding up well, and as the quality is fine there are no complaints on any of the stock disposed of. Carnations are in good supply and are moving readily. The quality is fine and there seems to be no need of selling in quantity lots at bargain prices to dispose of the cut. There was a large call last week for carnations at bargain prices, but there was none moved for less than $20.

Sweet peas are increasing in supply, but they are not as yet plentiful. The quality is good and the stock is being picked up as soon as it appears in the market. Violets, however, are quite plentiful and are in sufficient quantity to fill all orders. The supply, however, is not large enough to force the price down below $1, and fancy stock is selling readily at $1.50 per hundred. Orchids are not plentiful, but the demand is light, so that there is no surplus, and no orders are being turned down. Prices range from $6 to $7.50 per dozen.

Valley, of course, remains quite scarce, but the quality seems to be showing some improvement. Tulips are in the market now, but are short-stemmed and of only fair quality. They are selling well, however, and there is no surplus to speak of. There is plenty of stevia, good, bad and indifferent. The good stock is cleaning up well at fair prices, but the poorer stock brings next to nothing. A number of funerals and weddings last week helped general business greatly and cleaned up much stock.

Various Notes.

Rev. E. A. Cutler, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church, passed away last week. He was one of the most popular ministers in this city and the floral offerings were numerous. The church and residence were filled with designs and sprays, and late offerings were sent to the hospitals, as there was no more room at the home or church.

A. Schiller, who has been ill for some time and has undergone several operations, submitted to another operation Saturday, January 13. It was not deemed especially serious and, while his condition is critical, everyone hopes for his speedy recovery.

F. H. Holton, who has been confined to his home for almost a month, is greatly improved and will resume his duties in a short while.

The thief who got away with the Hudson car belonging to H. V. Hunkel was brought to Milwaukee a few days ago and was given three years by the judge. Maybe it will be safe to let theft policies lapse for a while now, as this should be a wholesome warning to those who have a penchant for other people's machines.

The marriage of Miss Irma Jens, formerly with the Holton & Hunkel Co., to Roy J. Currie, of the Currie Bros. Co., took place Thursday afternoon, January 11. The ceremony was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, and Rev. J. Oastler officiated. The bride carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas and valley, while the maid of honor, Miss Edith Currie, carried a bouquet of pink and lavender sweet peas. The happy pair left immediately for Wausau, Wis., where they will spend their honeymoon. They have taken an apartment at 356 Folsom place, where they will be at home after March 1. H. J. S.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

The market last week experienced a shortage of stock, except in freesias, Paper Whites and stevia. Beauties and other roses are few in number and Detroit retailers have to depend on out-of-town shippers. The cut of spring stock is now in full blast. Sweet peas are particularly fine in quality. Carnations are plentiful and rank high as to quality.

The valley supply is good; also that of violets. Orchids of best quality are coming from Canada and Fort Wayne, Ind.

Various Notes.

Frank Danzer, with John Breitmeyer's Sons, has been home sick of the grip, with R. M. Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, in the same boat.

Messrs. Foster and Shoemacher, with E. A. Fetters, made a few days' visit to Chicago last week.

Philip Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago, was a guest at the meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club.

The Detroit Florists' Club held its meeting January 11, at which Philip Breitmeyer gave a talk regarding local conditions, lack of growers, etc. J. F. Sullivan, A. Stahelin and Joseph Streit explained to the club members the purpose of the Flower Growers' Association—that of regulating the supply of stock.

Bowling Scores.

After the club meeting members of the Detroit Florists' Bowling Club adjourned to the alleys, the teams scoring as follows:

Brownies	771	712	840
M. C. F. E.	613	626	591
Bisons	839	783	876
American Beauties	722	681	738

Joseph Streit was high man of the evening with 170, 193, 204. H. T.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Alfred Goldring, of Cobleskill, N. Y., in commenting on holiday business, said he believes the wholesalers and commission houses will eventually learn it is to their interest to help the retailer, who has to rely on them for extra stock at holiday times. Speaking from his own experience of several years as a retailer with a limited glass area, in a country town, he is convinced his business could be doubled had he the support of the market, and feels positive many others are in the same boat. A new house, finished ere Jack Frost appeared, is stocked with bulbs for home trade. Tulip Vesuvius is preferred to Duc Van Thol, being earlier and a brighter scarlet. White Hawk is a fine companion. The Formosa lily is more valuable to small growers than giganteum for the Easter crop. Narcissus Paper White is grown on the bench as a rotation crop, and as soon as exhausted the space is filled with geraniums, which, by the way, are short in supply here, as elsewhere. Snapdragon follows mums and looks good for Memorial day. A big bush of Bougainvillea Sanderiana flourishing in a corner furnished a big supply of blooms, which come in handy. Sweet Pea Yarrawa has been in continuous crop since September and looks good for Easter. A healthy bed of callas, the small retailer's standby, was also noted.

"We certainly had a bright holiday trade," observed Frederick Goldring, of Slingerlands, N. Y. "Our stock was, if anything, ahead of our usual supply. And now for the spring business, which, judging from present indications, will tax the resources of the grower of plants."

Frank Baker, of Utica, N. Y., is down with the grip.

The United States Cut Flower Co., of Elmira, N. Y., reports a satisfactory season. Stock is in prime shape, especially roses, which are the pride of Richard King.

The annual banquet of the Albany Florists' Club took place on the evening of January 4, and, as usual, was a most enjoyable affair. The hall was decorated by F. A. Danker in his well known style. Frederick Goldring was toastmaster and made many ringing hits upon the various speakers. Walter E. Cook, of the Stumpp & Walter Co., New York; J. J. Karins, of H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; Joseph Traudt, of Canajoharie, N. Y.; Joseph Snyder, of Rhinebeck, N. Y.; Philip Ulrich, of Johnstown, N. Y., as guests sat down with the fifty or more members and spoke their little piece when called upon, winding up with the "Song of the Brook," slightly varied, thus: "Men may come and men may go, but let such affairs as this go on forever." Retiring President L. Tracey, of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, was presented with a silver toilet set and the newly elected president, the veteran W. Sanders, took his chair amid hearty cheers. W. FLORISTS must not stretch the truth too far, or the recoil may knock them out.

FULLY nine-tenths of the so-called tough luck in this trade is due to a combination of poor judgment and laziness.

ALTHOUGH some growers do not enthuse over Nebraska carnation, others, and in widely separated parts of the country, call it "the best red to date."

KILLARNEY'S days appear to be numbered. Although it is the most prolific of all roses in the hands of certain growers, there are many who can do little with it. And the buyers have come to prefer almost any other pink rose.

SOME of the wholesale plantsmen are so discouraged over the losses incurred in express shipments at Christmas that they have given up the attempt to do business for the present, although there no longer is a congestion of freight in express offices.

THE anemone-flowered chrysanthemums are like the so-called singles in that they are not well adapted to the rough handling of the wholesale markets and the shipping trade, but they are making a tremendous success with the man who grows for his home retail trade and can deliver without disarranging the outer petals of the flowers.

THE S. A. F. has made a number of attempts, through committees, to devise standard grades for pot plants, or young stock out of pots, but has given up in despair. But all will agree that "from" a certain size of pot does not mean a few days' residence there; the plant must be well rooted around, how "well" is left to agreement between seller and buyer.

HOW MANY?

The regular weekly press room order now is to print 12,500 copies of The Review. How many florists do you think there are in the United States who do not get it? And it is where a paper is read, not where it is printed, that counts. Like this:

Enclosed find check for December advertising in The Review. The ad brought fine results and I thank you.—A. R. Cluxton, Willis, Tex., January 5, 1917.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

PITY THE POOR PRINTER.

The Review has a great many friends—subscribers and advertisers who welcome an opportunity to do the paper a good turn. And here is a way they can help a lot:

The Review goes to press each Wednesday. It undertakes to attend to every advertising order that is received by 4 p. m. Tuesday, but it does not guarantee attention to orders received later than that. The result is, so many ads come in the last day (Tuesday) the office is swamped—the printers work long hours overtime Tuesday night in the effort to get the paper out on time Wednesday.

There is a specially friendly regard for the man who gets his copy in early.

ANOTHER BOOST IN GLASS.

Not yet, but soon another boost is due in the price of glass, so it will be in line to cover one's requirements now, if possible.

The glass factories have been moving prices up gradually, so that jobbers as a rule have been absorbing the small increases, but it has gone so far now that another general advance in jobbers' prices will be necessary or business will be conducted at a loss. As there seems no early prospect of improved conditions in the manufacturing end, where labor and fuel both are scarce, the rise is sure to come at no distant day.

The prices of window glass already are high, but not so high as in the case of many other commodities. For instance, steel is up 125 per cent, while the price of single thick A glass is increased only about forty-two per cent, although double thick A is up about sixty-two per cent from what might be called normal prices.

Incidentally, The Review is paying 125 per cent advance on the before-the-war price of the paper it uses.

CALL WARD PLANT WIZARD.

Not in years has anything happened in trade circles that has attracted the public attention that is being given to the work of Charles W. Ward. It may be that Mr. Ward is not so poor a publicity man as some, but the idea of developing a Pacific coast supply of such plants and bulbs as have been imported appeals strongly to those who believe in "home folks first." The San Francisco papers have devoted whole pages to Mr. Ward and his Eureka establishment. Some of these special feature pages have been syndicated to other newspapers throughout the country. Two such have come out in January. The reporters call Mr. Ward "the plant wizard" and try to make of him a second Burbank, much to Mr. Ward's discomfiture, for there is nothing of the "wizard" in his make-up. But the Eureka enterprise has gripped his interest as nothing else has done in years—he is in it heart and soul as well as money and those who know the man and his methods know that no effort will be spared to make a success of the undertaking, which, after all, is only a plain business enterprise.

WILL THE TRADE PAY?

The Review has received several requests that it gather and publish detailed information with regard to the losses which have occurred to express shipments this season. Some of the paper's subscribers believe that a compilation and publication of the complaints, losses and claims will have the effect of improving the service given by the express companies, just as the publication of lists of liabilities in failures had the effect of causing closer scrutiny of credit risks.

The columns of The Review are at the service of the trade, in this or any other matter of general benefit, but it seems almost certain that a compilation of losses accompanied by a demand for better service will be met, on the part of the express companies, by a proposal to give that better service if rates are increased to a sufficient degree.

Cut flowers pay only the first-class rate, the same as nonperishable articles, while plants, if properly packed, go as second class, at rates considerably cheaper than those applying to most nonperishable freight. But the demand is made for special service, for which the only special compensation is a considerable volume of business. The express companies, considering both the claims for losses and the special service demanded, find the florists' business unprofitable at certain times and a demand for still more costly attention to the shipments of this trade is almost sure to be met by a prompt counterproposal to raise rates. Without any question the trade would be willing that rates should be raised during holiday rush seasons, when most of the losses occur, but a raise in rates will apply the whole year around. How far is the trade willing to go in the matter?

CHICAGO.

The Market.

With the close of last week came a greatly improved condition in the wholesale cut flower market. The colder weather shortened the supply of all stock considerably and good prices were asked and received. The general business tone of the market seemed to have improved and January 15 the consensus was that business was good, although some complained because of the shortage of stock, which prevented them from meeting the demands made upon them. The usual January funeral demand has now set in and, although it is probably not so heavy as last year, it is quickly clearing all the short and medium length roses. In fact, it is often only possible to partly fill early orders for these grades, while late orders cannot be filled at all.

American Beauties are extremely scarce and are considered good property by those who are fortunate enough to be supplied. Prices hold up to quotations in every instance. Russells, Ophelias, Sunbursts and pink roses in short and medium lengths are decidedly scarce and, while there is a sufficient supply of the longer grades, no difficulty is found in clearing them. White roses are a little more plentiful than other varieties, but the funeral demand easily clears all the short and medium stock which arrives.

Carnations were in large supply last week and with a small demand wholesalers were willing to sell for almost any reasonable price. The end of the week the market cleared up fairly well, however, and this week finds a shortened supply, increased demand and better prices obtaining. Carnations have so far been far from satisfactory and wholesalers and growers are complaining loudly. The average price last week was not more than half of the price obtained in the same week last year, but as a compensation for the growers it should be said the production is much heavier than a year ago; perhaps the cut thus far in January has been nearly double that of a year ago.

Sweet peas are now more plentiful. The average quality is excellent and good prices are received. Violets, too, arrive in larger supply. The condition of lilies and valley remains about the same. The supply is not large, but sufficient to meet demands. Orchids are in fairly good supply and are clearing well at lower prices. Some high grade stevia still is arriving, but its season is practically over. The late stock of Paper Whites is now arriving, and the quality therefore is improved. Fair prices are being obtained. Calendulas and mignonette are not plentiful, but the demand just about balances the supply. Tulips are clearing fairly easily. Jonquils also clear readily. The supply still is limited.

Poehlmanns Win Case.

The Review's Washington correspondent reports that the United States Supreme court has affirmed the judgment of the Illinois Supreme court in favor of Poehlmann Bros. Co., who some years ago filed a petition with the Illinois Warehouse Commission attacking a rate of 40 cents per ton on coal and manure from Galewood, a station inside of Chicago, to Morton Grove. It appeared in the evidence that at that time the greenhouses were using about 30,000 tons of coal and 500 cars of manure every year. The Warehouse Commission, now known as the State Public Utilities Commission, after a hearing, found that 20 cents a ton on coal and 25 cents on manure were just and reasonable rates and should be put into force by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad. The order was confirmed by the lower courts and now by the United States Supreme court. The distance between Galewood and Morton Grove is twelve miles and no joint or other rates on the commodities in question were obtainable from points in Illinois where the shipments originated.

Various Notes.

Peter Reinberg will drop Beauties. Emil Reichling, who has charge of the houses, finds that although Beauties are the most profitable at the holidays, they do not bring the desired steady returns throughout the year.

On the way to the Pacific coast last week Mrs. Arnold Ringier was taken ill with pneumonia and now is in Clara Barton hospital in Los Angeles. Mr. Ringier is at the Hayward hotel in that city. It is understood that Mrs. Ringier is not in danger.

J. P. Risch, of Weiland & Risch, says that his firm expects to increase the plantings of Champ Weiland rose by 30,000 next season.

It has been the belief of Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, that it is more economical to buy young rose stock than to graft it for themselves. But because of the difficulty of getting just what is wanted it has been decided to do a little grafting this year. Accordingly, 15,000

English Manetti stocks were purchased. They were shipped from New York December 5, but the railroad company was not able to disgorge them from the congestion of freight in Chicago until January 13.

Meyer & Dramm Co., Elmhurst, Ill., are getting figures on another house 56x 400, which will increase their glass area twenty-five per cent and make full use of their present boiler capacity.

January 14 was the silver wedding anniversary of E. C. Amling and his wife. Lured away from home in the afternoon, they returned in the evening to find that about thirty relatives and close friends had taken possession of their residence in Oak Park, with caterers to serve an anniversary dinner. The guests had brought numerous silver mementos, among which was a large chest of silver from the employees of the E. C. Amling Co. There also was a big silver vase from the company's directors. Mr. and Mrs. Amling, accompanied by Harold Amling and Miss Gertrude Amling, leave January 25 for a visit of two months at Orange, Cal. The Packard was shipped last week.

Among the first in the trade this year to break his celibate vows is John Evert, 2059 Devon avenue, who was married January 10, his bride being Miss Barbara Thilmany.

While J. E. Yeats, of Champaign, was in town last week he made an arrangement with the A. L. Randall Co. to act as exclusive sales agent for the dissemination of his new red rose, the Mrs. Sarah Yeats. Mr. Yeats has stated that his output of plants this season will be 40,000.

The temporary store George Perdikas has operated for nearly a year, at the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Van Buren street, is to be closed, a permanent tenant having at last been found for the store, a room so large that the florist has used less than one-fourth of it. Mr. Perdikas, whose permanent store is less than half a block away, has merchandised large quantities of low-priced stock in the temporary store, dealing with transient trade.

The longer lengths of Killarney and White Killarney have been noticeably hard to move this season. According to A. T. Pyfer, of Pyfer & Co., this is due to the fact that when high-priced roses are desired the retailer offers the prospective customer one of the newer varieties, so it is only on the cheaper sales that Killarneys are put forward.

L. Hoeckner is greatly pleased with the store he recently took over at 408 West Division street. He says the cut flower business is a little slow at present, but that he finds a good demand for funeral work, which keeps things moving.

Eric Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., now makes his home on a 2-acre chicken farm at Elmhurst. Removal to the country was for the benefit of Mrs. Johnson's health and is proving all that was hoped.

Although a rapidly increasing supply business keeps Miss L. A. Tonner continually busy, she nevertheless finds time occasionally to sell pecan groves for the Jackson Pecan Groves Co., Baconton, Ga., for which she is an agent. The result of her efforts last week was the signing of five contracts.

The president of the Chicago Florists' Club, W. H. Amling, has been confined to his home in Maywood for several weeks, forbidden even to visit the green-

Matthias Mann and a party of growers visited the plant of the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., January 11, to inspect the company's new carnation, Superb.

Herman W. Rogers, for seventeen years in the employ of Weiland & Risch, left January 16 for Detroit, where he will make his home.

At the Rienzi Flower Shop, 2813 Broadway, G. C. Seffens has fitted up a special room called the Green Room for the display of ferns, etc. All the blooming stock is in the main salesroom.

The American Bulb Co. received a carload of 250,000 gladiolus bulbs January 15, which had been on the road during the recent zero weather. That the stock arrived in first-class condition shows that most of the losses which have occurred this season have been due to somebody's lack of caution.

C. Frauenfelder reports that the new year is starting quite satisfactorily, although funeral work at present is the heaviest item.

It is reported that Mrs. Albert F. Amling is quite ill at her Maywood home.

That business never was better with the downtown retailers in the first half of January than was the case this year is Fred Ronsley's opinion. He adds that with good business prices paid for stock have been lower than usual, roses not much lower, but carnations about half what they cost during the same time last year.

W. D. Desmond, formerly in business at Minneapolis, has joined the sales force of Poehlmann Bros. Co. He will travel the northwest.

A basket of Killarney roses, donated by John Mangel to the Allied Bazaar, brought $19 when raffled off at the Coliseum.

The supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co. boasts an electrically operated machine which turns out greening pins with great rapidity.

At Union Grove French & Salm did an unusual thing when they cut back in November the plants in half of one of the big houses. They were planning on a late-January crop. It is well known that the whole place is in Russell.

The considerable increase in business that usually follows marked improvement in facilities has come to W. J. Smyth. Last summer the store was remodeled and the boulevard side turned into possibly the largest show window in town. The business now is breaking records.

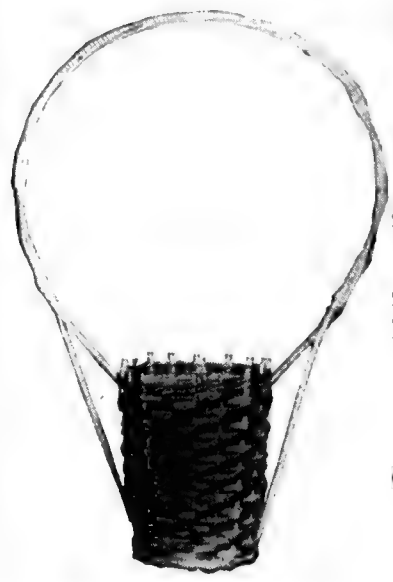
Winterson's Seed Store received a shipment of Belgian tuberous-rooted begonias January 12, having them come on from New York by express to avoid danger of freezing.

Cleaned out of every usable plant at Christmas, Frank Oechslin is bringing along a large quantity of azaleas that could not by any possibility have been got in for the holidays. Cyclamens, too, are abundant now and bulbs soon will be ready in quantity.

Visitors.

R. E. Jones, of the Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., was a visitor January 11 and 12.

J. L. Johnson, of De Kalb, Ill., was in town January 15, purchasing material for another greenhouse to go up in the spring.



F. H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, New York, has been in town this week.

Among the visitors in the city last week were James McLaughlin, of the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland, O., who paid his first visit to the Chicago wholesale market, and Peter Freeman, of Aurora, Ill.

The Market.

The market was in good condition last week. There was plenty of stock of everything seasonable, with the prices moderate. Business is reported good with retailers since the holidays. has the call and holds up much better than shipped-in consignments. American Beauties are in moderate supply and are meeting with a smaller demand, as might be expected, than during the holidays. The special grade blooms are selling at from 25 to 50 cents each, the latter price being for choice stock, and the other grades realize corresponding prices. The supply of hybrid tea roses is abundant and they meet with a fair demand. Top-grade blooms are selling at 10 to 30 cents per hundred, and the lowest grade blooms at $2 to $5 per hundred.

There is a considerable supply of carnations, and they appear to be moving rather slowly at $1 to $5 per hundred. The supply of cattleyas, cypripediums and Dendrobium formosum is sufficient to meet all demands easily, the cattleyas selling at 25 to 75 cents each, the cypripediums at $1.50 to $2 per dozen and the dendrobiums at 25 to 35 cents each. There are plenty of gardenias, the best blooms realizing $1.50 to $3 per dozen. They are moving slowly. White and pink lilies are exceedingly scarce. The former sell at $10 and the latter at $5 to $8 per hundred. Valley is plentiful and is moving well at $2 to $5 per hundred.

A great variety of bulbous stock is now arriving. This includes a scanty stock of callas, which bring about $2 per dozen for No. 1 grade. There is a moderate supply of freesias at 35 to 50 cents per bunch; Paper White narcissi at $3 per hundred; tulips at $2 to $3 per hundred. In other flowers I might mention a moderate supply of antirrhinums, calendulas, a few daisies, forget-me-nots, irises, mignonette in abundance, primulas, stevia, sweet peas and violets, most of which are moving moderately well. The market is well stocked with the customary indoor-grown greens, which are meeting with a fair demand.

The weather during the last week has been severe, with the temperature around the zero mark almost every morning. This proves hard on the night forces in charge of the boilers, but as yet no losses have been reported of frozen stock. With a shortage of coal in this vicinity many florists are almost ready to give up in despair, unless the local coal companies can come to the rescue quickly with a carload or so of coal, to tide the florists over the cold spell.

Various Notes.

On account of the shortage of coal and the possibility that some of the florists might be frozen out, J. Ludwig Schiller, the wide-awake secretary of the Florists' Club, has appealed to the coal men to use every effort to protect the florists from a shortage of coal, which might mean utter destruction to their stock.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman installed a new delivery car last week. Her store is noted for its exceptionally fine windows, the work of Robert Plaque, a decorator of note.

roses at present and, besides taking care of the needs of many local florists, they are shipping many to cities in Ohio and Michigan.

Henry Miller, the carnation specialist, is cutting some excellent carnations. The flowers are large and the stems long and heavy. Mr. Miller's average daily cut is 1,800 to 2,100 blooms.

T. Magee, of the Scottwood Greenhouses, was on the jump last week with several large decorations for the Toledo Club. Mr. Magee, who ranks as one of the best decorators in the city, has from two to five large decorations for this club every week.

Schramm Bros. have again been fortunate in securing the contract for the interior decorations at the two large Terminal Auditorium show rooms, for the annual automobile show to be held this month. The supplies for these decorations include over 100 cases of southern smilax, and thousands of yards of laurel roping, together with large groups of palms. The work of arranging this starts about ten days before the opening of the show and is mostly ceiling and festooning work.

Miss H. F. Patten reports business excellent since the holidays. Miss Patten is recognized as a specialist in table decorations and finds herself busy with calls for decorations at the Women's building. Miss Patten is a charter member of the women's association and has countless friends.

The management of the Helmer Flower Shop was rewarded for its untiring efforts to satisfactorily serve the public by an overwhelming holiday business and a continuous run of funeral work and transient business since the first of the year. Miss Helmer, the junior member of the firm, formerly was employed by Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, and Jack Helmer formerly was connected with the Patten Flower Store.

Friends of Mrs. Ernest Glauser will regret to hear that she will be unable to leave the hospital for several weeks. Mrs. Glauser is vice-president of the ladies' branch of the Toledo Florists' Club.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

During the latter part of the week business was good. A large quantity of funeral work cleaned up everything in cut flowers. The market was not overstocked, owing to the cold spell, and delayed trains held back shipments considerably. The daily shipments now arrive in fair condition, and the quality of the stock is good, considering the little sun we have had during the last two weeks. Locally-grown stock is of exceptionally good quality. The cut of carnations is not particularly large, but the blooms bring good prices. There is no special call for reds. The supply of roses is large and meets all present demands. Russell, Hoosier Beauty, Francis Scott Key, Sunburst and Ward sell well. Some fine American Beauties reach the market and move easily.

The demand for orchids has been good. Cypripediums also have cleared easily. The supply of gardenias is not extra large. Single violets are exceptionally fine and sell well, and the demand for double violets is good. Sweet peas, in white and pink, are arriving in good condition and sell easily. Pink and white double bouvardias move well. Jonquils, Paper Whites, yellow narcissi and cut tulips are easy sellers. Valley had a good call last week, but the quality of the stock varies considerably. Easter lilies and callas are arriving in larger consignments, but they clear rapidly. Many azaleas that did not arrive in time for Christmas have come in and move satisfactorily. The stores are well supplied with bulbous stock; many of the large pans are fitted with handles and colored mats, and these sell splendidly for funerals. Green stock is quite plentiful and sells well, especially asparagus.

Various Notes.

George T. Boucher has purchased a new 6-cylinder touring car, which he and his friends are testing severely.

William Pitkin, Jr., is in New York on a business trip.

Harry Brush, who formerly conducted a flower store on Clinton avenue, has sold his stock and discontinued business.

Several travelers called on the trade this week, including Louis Hanfling, of Russin & Hanfling, New York; F. W.

The officers elected for 1917 are: President, Mrs. Edwin P. Wilson; vice-president, Mrs. H. Wilson; secretary, Mrs. George B. Hart; treasurer, Mrs. W. Keller. The members afterward were entertained at lunch by the hostess. The February meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. D. Oviatt, on Monroe avenue.

John Dunbar made a hurried trip to Buffalo January 8.

Hugo Teute has a house of splendid Dutch bulbous stock. His hyacinths are extra fine and he finds ready sale for most of his cut and potted stock. His early azaleas, like those of the majority of growers, are not so good as those of former years, but the later varieties promise to be good.

Splendid roses are being grown this week by Frank Purcell, of Irondequoit. His cut is much larger than in previous years. George Rauchy is in charge of the houses. It generally was thought that roses could not be grown in this section with much success, but this grower is showing them how it is done.

Edwin C. Kaelber, Inc., reports business exceptionally good. There was a splendid holiday trade and business has kept up better than anticipated.

The greenhouses of Schlegel's Sons are in fine condition. The spring stock is coming along in good shape and the well grown bulbous stock is easily disposed of.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Every kind of weather—freezing, thawing, raining, snowing—has made difficult the production of flowers. Considering the season and the queer weather, the supply of flowers, broadly speaking, is excellent. There will be wholesalers who differ from this view; there will be growers who think this is all wrong; but a careful survey of the market was made before this conclusion was reached. The demand has absorbed nearly all the flowers and greens offered. The prices have been excellent; highest on the flowers in short supply, lowest on those that are in excess of urgent demand. The long flowers are valley, violets, gardenias and, at times, the whites —Paper Whites, white carnations and white roses. The shorts are colored roses, cattleyas and snapdragons.

Valley has been in oversupply, particularly in those grades that are not at the very top. The finest valley has been in fair demand, but the time has come when retailers can offer good grades of valley, with the certainty that good grades can be secured at moderate prices. Violets have not been plentiful; they can't be in such queer weather; but there has been little demand for them. This is not unusual, when they cannot be worn or sold on the streets. Gardenias are apt to sympathize with their bosom friends, in their sorrows as well as in their joys. White flowers have been heavily produced to guard against the January shortage; the guard has been effective.

Colored roses, while fairly plentiful, have been in exceedingly brisk demand, particularly in the short and medium grades. Cattleyas have fallen off in supply. Cattleya Percivaliana has about closed its season; so has Cypripedium insigne with some growers. Snapdragon is exceedingly fine for the season and rather scarce.

The other feature of the market is the heavy trading in carnations. Mrs. C. W. Ward, when well grown, commands the top price; so, too, does Gloriosa. Red carnations are not in demand. Daffodils are increasing in numbers. There is quite a little freesia about; some of it is unusually fine. Wallflowers have come. There is much more white lilac. Sweet peas are a little less abundant. Perhaps that term is a misnomer. Anyway, there are not so many peas and decidedly fewer of the gilt-edged sort. A few tulips, mostly Yellow Prince, have arrived. Calla lilies are active. Easter lilies are also selling well at excellent prices. Greens are in demand.

A Disastrous Fire.

A terrible fire destroyed the boiler shed, garage and car of Frank Birnbrauer, on North Fifteenth street, Oak Lane, Tuesday morning, January 9. The contents of the three greenhouses, consisting mainly of sweet peas, carnations, asparagus and snapdragons, were lost. The fire destroyed the ends of the greenhouses; then the contents were frozen. There was no insurance.

Mr. Birnbrauer stoked his fire about 10 p. m. January 8. His son saw that all was safe two hours later. About 4:30 a. m. Mrs. Birnbrauer awoke to find the shed in flames, which proved impossible to extinguish. Mr. Birnbrauer has taken a position with his neighbor, J. Stephenson's Son, for the present. He proposes rebuilding his shed and the ends of his greenhouses in the spring, when he will start afresh.

The Rose Festival.

The advance schedule of prizes has been issued by the American Rose Society for its rose show to be held in the First Regiment armory, Broad street, this city, from March 20 to 23, inclusive. It is a well gotten up list, containing the names of all the varieties of roses that are generally grown, either in private or commercial collections, and covering both plants and cut flowers. The prizes are most liberal, proving that the society is doing all in its power to bring together the finest exhibition possible. Anyone who has not received a schedule of these prizes can secure a copy from the Executive Office, National Rose Festival, 1614 Ludlow street, Philadelphia.

A Grave Matter.

The most serious obstacle that confronts the development of the florists' business today is the unreliable express service during the week before Christmas. The express companies have aided florists and themselves by making it possible to send plants and flowers a moderate distance in safety at ordinary seasons of the year. This service has so encouraged production that growers, wholesalers and buyers alike depend upon it for at least part of their livelihood.

The tremendous strain placed upon the express companies during the week before Christmas has been more than they can bear. Despite efforts, plants and flowers have been frozen, lost and delayed to an extent that seriously threatens the business relations between the shippers and the companies, if not the florists' industry itself. The arrangement between the shippers and the companies is so obviously advantageous to both that a solution of the trouble must be reached without further delay.

The preliminary steps are simple. The florists must combine to state their grievance to the companies. They must show their total claims from frost, loss and delay in plants and in flowers. The companies must be asked in a spirit of fairness first to settle these claims, then to prevent their recurrence. The solution that naturally suggests itself is that, in times of stress, perishable goods be given right of way over all other express matter. The details would require careful thought and it would take time to put the plan into successful, practical operation.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week was exceptionally good, but with it came a scarcity of flowers of all kinds. This shortening of stock was felt more in roses than in anything else, and the wholesalers and growers cleaned up every day. Aside from some of the short-stemmed roses, which brought $4 per hundred, there was a ready sale of other stock at from $6 to $15 per hundred. The supply of American Beauty roses dwindled, although the price remained at $6 per dozen. There were plenty of carnations until January 13. On that day carnations cleaned up more quickly than usual and the market was bare at noon. The prices remained at $4 and $5 per hundred, with only a few selling at $3.

Spring flowers made their appearance in the market last week, among these being tulips, daffodils, yellow narcissi and freesias. There were not enough of these to go around, and a number of orders had to go unfilled. The prices on these averaged about $4 per hundred. White narcissus has had its run and, while quite good as to quality and not overplentiful, its popularity has receded and the call is not heavy. Stevia still is to be had and it is selling fairly well because of the shortage of other flowers. Single violets, as fine as have ever been seen in this market, are proving popular, but, while much better than the doubles, they are bringing only 50 cents to $1 per hundred. The sweet peas that are being offered are also exceptionally fine. Valley has been moving slowly and last week $6 per hundred was the top price. The sprays for some weeks had been bringing $8 per hundred. The drop was occasioned by the slowing up of the demand and the bringing in of a considerable quantity by local growers.

There is plenty of mignonette to be had, but the sale of this flower at present is draggy. Snapdragon is quite good. The first Augusta gladioli came in last week, but not in any quantity to make

The Market.

"The dullest week of the winter to date," was the verdict of the veteran wholesalers, referring to the seven days preceding January 14, but light arrivals served to hold prices steady. The shortage in the lower grades of roses has been the most pronounced. Toward the end of the week there were no roses to be found in the market under $5 a hundred. However, the long-stemmed roses were abundant and barely steady at the market quotations. American Beauties are off crop and lacking in quality, not more than twenty per cent reaching a demand at 60 cents each, while a great many so-called specials have sold under

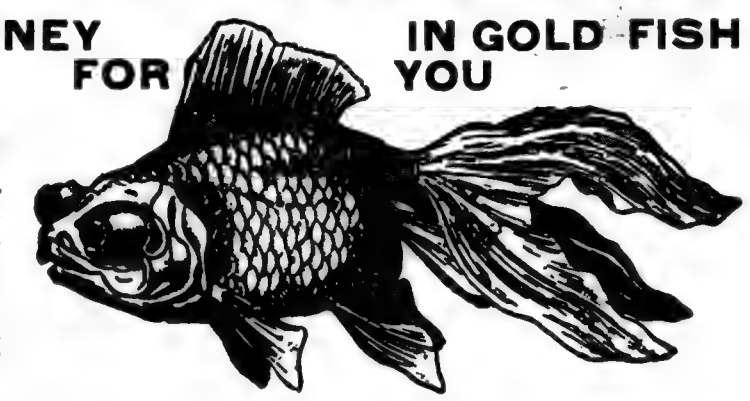
50 cents. The lowest grade of Beauties were in no demand. Of the novelties and specialties in roses the shipments were small and the big stores absorb these on arrival. Hadley and Ophelia are especially popular.

Carnations show a downward tendency. The best could be bought for $5 per hundred January 13. Matchless holds its place among the now few specialties. There never are too many of it, nor of Mrs. Ward and Enchantress. Shipments are increasing daily. Lilies do not sell above 10 cents each; some excellent flowers sold at the week's end at $8 per hundred and under. The shipments of rubrums continue large and prices are low. Valley has not advanced for weeks; a top of 5 cents per spike is general.

The orchid supply is evidently sufficient for all requirements, and 60 cents each seems to be top for cattleyas. Cypripediums are fine and steady at $12 to $15 per hundred. The best gardenias sell at $3 per dozen. There are too many of the low grade and these are hard to dispose of. Violets are down to 75 cents per hundred for the selected. There is a surplus at times, as the street merchants indicate on sunny days.

Sweet peas are improving and are more abundant. Narcissi sell as low as 25 cents a bunch, for Paper Whites, and up to 60 cents for Soleil d'Or. There seems already to be an overstock of tulips, but most of them are extremely short-stemmed and the flowers small. Everybody seems to have grown stevia this year; it sells slowly. Freesia is abundant and Purity is the favorite, as much of it is of splendid quality. Good callas still bring $2 a dozen. Daffodils sell at from 35 to 75 cents per bunch, Golden Spur being most popular.

There are azaleas, cyclamens, crotons and ferns in the wholesalers' windows, and flowering shrubs also.



Various Notes.

The annual banquet of the horticultural society attracted several New Yorkers to Tarrytown January 16, to meet gardener customers.

J. J. Fellouris says the Greek ball on the last night of February will distance all its predecessors, as every dollar received will be spent in behalf of the attendance. Over 3,000 will be provided for.

NEWPORT, R. I.

An exceedingly interesting and instructive lecture on the iris was delivered at Music hall last week under the auspices of the Newport Horticultural Society. The speaker was Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J. The speaker was introduced by President John B. Urquhart, and at the conclusion of the lecture, which was mostly in explanation of stereopticon slides, nearly 100 of which were used, numerous questions were answered. Mr. Herrington illustrated and described the different groups of irises and the best conditions for each, giving the scientific names of each and going from those blooming in January to those blooming in July. Most of the pictures were colored and beautiful, and the lecture was much enjoyed by all.

The Market.

The conditions in the wholesale market last week were excellent. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and of extra fine quality. The wholesale houses report splendid business daily, and the retailers had a big week in all kinds of work.

Roses have been off crop of late and the prices have advanced. Russell, Ophelia and Beauty had a big call during the week. Good red roses, such as Milady and Richmond, also were in demand. Killarney roses are plentiful, but this variety has seen its best days. Carnations are in heavy crop and prices are low. The best sellers are Enchantress and its varieties, with Beacon and Ward selling well. The prices last week ranged from $1 to $2 per hundred. A few dark days would shorten the crop and better prices would then prevail. Violets are cleaning up almost daily at 50 cents per hundred. The bright days brought on a heavy crop. Sweet peas, too, clean up daily. They are coming in finely and extra fancy stock brings $1.50 per hundred, while good stock makes 50 cents and $1 per hundred. Paper Whites are abundant and $2 per hundred is asked for them. Valley is scarce in this market, with a big demand. Orchids are fine and good blooms bring 50 cents each. Lilies and callas also are scarce. All greens are in good demand—smilax, asparagus, flat ferns and galax. Wild smilax, too, has a good call.

Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its monthly meeting January 11 in the building of the St. Louis Seed Co. The meeting was on the second floor, which was neatly arranged for the occasion. The members came early and inspected the up-to-date seed establishment before the meeting was called by President Bourdet. After disposing of the preliminaries, a report was called for from the committee of the flower show. Mr. Ohlweiler, the chairman of this committee, reported everything in working order and that the committees were striving hard for the success of the show.

The transportation committee for the trip to Indianapolis, for members who will attend the American Carnation Society exhibition, reported that it had arranged with the Pennsylvania railroad for a special car. This committee is headed by David Geddis.

Guy Reburn, of Chicago, and Martin Seeger made applications for membership. A committee of three was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of our late members, J. W. Garrett and Mrs. M. M. Ayres. On motion it was decided to hold a carnation exhibit at the next meeting of the club. This exhibition will be in the hands of the trustees and will be staged at one of the wholesale houses. Members attending the American Carnation Society exhibition at Indianapolis were requested to come prepared to make reports at the next meeting.

W. S. Wells, secretary of the Missouri State Florists' Association, was called upon for a few remarks. He said the association was in splendid shape and that a meeting of the members would be called during the spring flower show in St. Louis. President H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Horticultural Society, was next called upon for a talk, and he told the members of the recent meeting of the society held at Kansas City.

On motion it was decided to place in nomination the name of Jules Bourdet for vice-president of the S. A. F., at the New York convention in August. The question box brought out a good discussion. The next meeting of the club will be held February 8.

Various Notes.

A. G. Greiner, the cactus specialist, on Natural Bridge road, has just completed his new greenhouse. Mr. Greiner reports that his fast growing business demanded larger quarters.

W. J. Pilcher, chairman of the committee on trade exhibits for the spring flower show, reports that much space has already been contracted for and suggests that concerns contemplating making displays should hurry along for space.

Henry Ostertag, of Ostertag Bros., who returned from Jefferson City, Mo., last week after finishing the decorations for the inaugural ball for Governor Gardner, says now that Missouri has a "gardener" and Illinois a farmer for governor, the horticultural and agricultural interests will be well looked after.

Willie Dee, of C. Young & Sons Co., is back at his post in the cut flower department after an illness of six weeks. Walter Young says the absence of Mr. Dee has kept the force working overtime since the holidays.

Ivan Ericson, who operates the Blossom Shop, in the southwestern part of the city, reports that since his opening business has kept the force on the rush.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. last week made a large shipment of white wooden easels. Billy Vogel, who has this department in charge, has been working overtime to catch up on advance orders.

Martin Seeger, head of the Mullanphy Florists, at Eighth and Locust streets, and Nat Kingsley, head of the Grand avenue store of the same firm, now make regular visits each morning to the wholesale district.

The members of the Lady Florists' Home Circle last week met at the home of Mrs. F. C. Weber, Sr., and enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. Mrs. F. C. Weber, Jr., will entertain the circle next month.

Thomas Carr, the Union Market florist, has started plans for the enlargement of his place for the spring plant sale. Miss Marie Richardson, who is in charge of the cut flower department, put in a busy week with funeral work.

David Geddis, who has charge of the trip to the Indianapolis carnation meeting and exhibition, says that all who contemplate making the trip should send in their names. A special car has been engaged from the Pennsylvania railroad, the departure to be made January 31. This train will arrive in Indianapolis at 3 o'clock the same day. Mr. Geddis expects to have at least twenty-five in his party.

Visitors last week were Henry Baer, of Peoria, Ill.; Arthur Zirkman, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; H. W. Miller, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; E. W. Guy, Gust Grossart, W. E. Ogle, M. Schoenberger, all of Belleville; Charles Johann, of Collinsville, Ill.; Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo. J. J. B.

One night recently Arthur C. Wettig thought he heard burglars in his home. He investigated, failed to find the intruders, but stumbled against a radiator and bumped his head. Last week at a local hospital physicians told him that tetanus had developed. Anti-tetanus serum has been administered and Mr. Wettig is expected to survive the hard fight.

The Market.

The supply of flowers is not at all heavy. We have had our first zero weather of the season and arrivals have barely sufficed to meet the demands; in fact, it is seldom that so few flowers are seen unsold after the early morning rush hours in the wholesale markets. one and prices have advanced, especially on short-stemmed stock. On some days all short-stemmed flowers have made as much as $8 per hundred. Owing to some heavy funeral orders, the demand for Beauties was good last week. Hadley is the popular rose this season among the scarlets and is bringing fancy prices. Russell sells well, but is inadequate for the demand. Ophelia is in shorter supply. Even white roses, which have been dragging, clean up well. Carnations hold up well at $4 to $5 per hundred. Their quality now is top-notch. Violets are a little lower, varying from 75 cents to $1 per hundred.

Paper Whites are moving more easily. Freesias are a little lower in price. Golden Spurs still hold at $5 to $6 per hundred. Tulips are not yet abundant. Sweet peas have shortened up with the more wintry weather. Snapdragons are not at all plentiful, but supplies of marguerites, pansies and bachelor's buttons are about equal to the demand. Valley has been more in demand; so have cattleyas, which are coming in more freely. Lilies and callas each clean up better. There is an ample supply of stevia and smaller lots of wallflowers, irises, primroses, calendulas and myosotis. The pot plant trade has suffered a little from the cold weather. There is a fine variety of flowering plants, such as acacias, ericas, camellias, cyclamens, begonias, hyacinths, tulips, primulas and azaleas.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held January 13. President R. M. Saltonstall made an excellent and optimistic address. He said three notable shows would be held in 1917, one each in March, June and October, the last named to be for fruits only, and the June show, which would be in tents, would include special tents for orchids, rhododendrons, azaleas, etc. Receipts of the society had exceeded expenditures by about $1,000, receipts from exhibitions being $2,000 ahead of those of the preceding year.

A small prize exhibition was held in connection with the inaugural meeting. Duncan Finlayson was first with twelve spikes of calanthes and W. C. Rust with twelve spikes of antirrhinums, with Weld Pink. Alex. Matthews showed Moschosma riparium and narcissi. Henry Stewart showed a nice Cattleya Trianæ. S. J. Goddard secured a silver medal for a superb vase of his new crimson carnation, Doris. The F. "New England Gardens," filled the lecture hall, there being over 500 present. The lecturer showed sixty beautiful slides of old gardens and included a few of the more modern type, practically all being hardy flowers, no tender bedding stock being shown at all. The slides were in natural colors and the finest of their kind ever shown here.

Some of the more important committees appointed for 1917 are the following: Prizes and exhibitions, James Wheeler, chairman; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Duncan Finlayson, T. D. Hatfield and Thomas Roland; plants and flowers, William Anderson, chairman; A. H. Fewkes, S. J. Goddard, A. E. Griffin and Donald McKenzie; fruits, Edward B. Wilder, chairman; W. N. Craig, Isaac H. Locke and James Methven; vegetables, John L. Smith, chairman; Edward Parker and William C. Rust; gardens, R. M. Saltonstall, chairman; J. S. Ames, David R. Craig, William Nicholson, Charles Sander and C. H. Tenney.

Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club for the installation of officers, which for some years has been kept as ladies' night, attracted the usual big attendance January 16, the lecture hall being filled. Notice of the annual banquet to be held February 7 in Horticultural hall was given and many tickets were sold. The club has held two preceding banquets in hotels, but the desire to come back to the hall found almost unanimous favor. The work of installation was gracefully and tellingly performed by A. P. Calder, Sr., one of the club's silver-tongued orators, assisted by W. J. Kennedy. Each of the officers made short addresses. Peter Fisher read his annual financial report, which showed a substantial balance in the treasury. The secretary's report showed an addition of sixty-six new members during 1916, average attendance for the year 175 and an approximate membership of 460.

President Methven appointed the following committees for 1917: Exhibits, W. H. Judd, chairman; Robert Cameron, Duncan Finlayson, Kenneth Finlayson, W. G. Wyman, S. J. Goddard, Peter Fisher, Julius Heurlin, Charles Sander, Eber Holmes; entertainment, George W. Hamer, chairman; William Watson, Harold Edgar, James Donald, P. J. Thurley, John McIntyre, C. J. It was announced that February 20 would be carnation night and that there would be a notable display of flowers that evening. Following the business session there was a fine entertainment. The solos of Mrs. McKeon and James Singer and instrumental selections of Miss Eisenhardt were particularly well received. A collation followed, after which nearly all present tripped the light fantastic until the wee sma' hours.

Various Notes.

Penn, the Florist, has just acquired a 10-year lease of a store on Hamilton place, two doors from the Tremont street store. This will be used for garden furniture and other accessories. He had a lot of funeral work for the late R. H. White, one of Boston's big retail merchants, January 12. A plaque, eight feet high, of cattleyas, Hadley roses, valley and Farleyense ferns was made for 2,000 of the White employees. For the Boston Post he had an immense wreath of Hadley roses and valley, and for General Taylor, of the Boston Globe, a magnificent spray of Beauty roses, valley and Farleyense. The force is extremely busy with funeral and wedding orders and decorations.

S. J. Goddard requests that all those from Boston and vicinity planning to go to the Indianapolis carnation convention favor him with a check for their reservations not later than January 24. The fare one way will be $20.87. Lower berths, $5.50; upper berths, $4.40; drawing room, $20, for parties of ten. The train will leave South station at 4:30 p. m. the following evening, January 25. Among those who plan to attend are over 25,000 volumes, admittedly one of the most valuable horticultural libraries in the world.

I am sorry to report that William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, is in bed with sciatic rheumatism. Mr. Riggs has been laid up since Thanksgiving and has had a hard siege. We all hope to see him around again soon. He is sending in good-looking freesias and L'Innocence hyacinths in pans.

At Carbone's I noted some fine acacias, camellias, ericas, lilacs and other pot plants. The traces of the recent fire here now are obliterated and business is remarkably good.

At the store of T. F. Galvin, Inc., January 13, I noted some beautiful plants of camellias, acacias and ericas. Primula malacoides is used in fancy boxes, for which purpose it is easily the finest of all the primulas. In orchids there was a fine assortment, including phalænopsis, dendrobiums, vandas, white lælias and oncidiums. There have been numerous funeral orders of late.

There will be a large attendance at the club field day at Framingham January 20. Special cars will leave Park square promptly at 1 o'clock, returning from South Framingham as near 5 o'clock as possible.

Newman S. Wax celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday January 12 and felt sufficiently well after his late serious operation to make a speech to his many friends, who came to wish him many happy returns. John J. Fee, of Jamaica Plain, an intimate friend, was on hand and remembered Mr. Wax with a most acceptable gift.

I am glad to report that Robert Montgomery, of Natick, is able to sit up after his late accident. He fell down the stairs of the new store of the T. J. Grey Co., January 6, and was badly shaken up. As Mr. Montgomery has not been in robust health for some time, the fall gave him a bad shock.

Mrs. E. M. Gill, of Medford, celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday recently. Mrs. Gill is one of our oldest florists and was an exhibitor at the Boston shows as late as last year. I doubt if anyone else has exhibited constantly over so long a term of years. Mrs. Gill is somewhat improved from her late illness, but is still confined to her bed. W. N. C.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

Pittsburgh at the first of this week fell heir to a blizzard, with the temperature flirting with the zero mark. Business is fair, but stock is in short supply, especially roses, which have not recovered from the pinching for Christmas. There is the usual January shortage, and everyone wants roses. It is a case of the wholesaler dividing the receipts, giving everyone a little and satisfying no one; but it is always so, and the wholesaler has lived through it before.

Tulips are improving and some fine stock is coming in, but even this does not seem to help much. Clarke.

Youngstown, O.—The newest acquisition to Youngstown's florists' business is the Holtzman-Connors Co. Walter A. Holtzman and Garrett A. Connors, Jr., are the leading spirits in the new concern, which recently opened a store at 237 Wick avenue.

Seed Trade News

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE 1917 catalogue of the Aggeler & Musser Seed Co., Los Angeles, is one of the few thus far received that quotes all seeds by the pound.

THE death of Charles Nearpass, for twenty-seven years in the seed business at San Diego, Cal., is reported in this week's obituary column.

N. N. SHERWOOD, head of the firm of Hurst & Son, wholesale seed merchants, London, with which many American houses have been dealing, left an estate valued at £514,949.

IT will interest the seed trade in this country that in building their new premises in London, Watkins & Simpson, in seeking fireproofness, used teak for doors and other woodwork.

MRS. ARNOLD RINGIER, wife of the secretary of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is in Clara Barton hospital at Los Angeles, having been taken ill with pneumonia on the train on the way to the coast last week.

A NUMBER of seedsmen were negotiating, early in December, for paper for 1918 catalogues, but postponed action when the peace notes came out, believing that the market would fall. Attempting to reinstate the orders in January, it has been a general experience to find the market has made a further advance.

UNDER the firm name of Letton-De Foor Seed Co., W. H. Letton and J. C. De Foor will carry on the business formerly owned by the McMillan Seed Co., at Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Letton was associated with the Hastings Seed Co. for fifteen years. The McMillan Seed Co. went into bankruptcy and the stock was purchased by the new firm.

CONGRESSMAN BYRNES, of South Carolina, has introduced a bill "to regulate commerce in adulterated or misbranded seeds or bulbs, and to prevent the sale and transportation thereof." The dangerous part lies in the provision that a seller shall be immune from prosecution if he can produce a guarantee from the domestic dealer of whom purchased.

IT will not prove easy to make contracts for 1917 average except at a material advance in price and after the acreage basis is agreed upon, no one can say what nature will produce. As George Cobb said to the packers at Rochester, recently, "the two great problematical factors this year are Dame Nature in America and human nature in Europe."

THE order blanks enclosed with the seed catalogues grow yearly more elaborate. That of Farquhar & Co., Boston, this year, is a Baker-Vawter affair of eight pages 8½x11 inches, listing with blanks for quantity, price and amount

Burpee's Seeds Grow

BURPEE'S ANNUAL
The Leading American Seed Catalog

With the close of 1916 forty years of Burpee Effort have passed into Seed History. These were constructive years, years of careful, intensive, scientific investigation and experimenting. Starting in a very modest way, acre after acre, building after building, have been added until today we enjoy the distinction of being the World's Largest Mail Order Seed House.

The House of Burpee

in this forty years has introduced more distinct new varieties of Vegetable and Flower Seeds that are now in general cultivation, than have any three other American Seed Firms, but never have we cataloged any one of these varieties until it has passed all the exacting requirements of the Burpee Standard. This Burpee Standard is maintained by rigid tests at Fordhook Farms, America's largest and most complete Trial Grounds. These tests are made each year for the purpose of strengthening the bond of confidence between our customers and ourselves.

With the culmination of these forty years we enter the fifth decade of our active business life, with the firm intention of continuing to Better Serve.

Burpee Annual for 1917

The Leading American Seed Catalog is bigger, better and brighter than ever before. Twenty-two pages have been added, and best of all, you will find thirty Burpee Specialties illustrated in color. Never before have we issued a catalog with so many accurate color illustrations.

Florists and Market Gardeners, in addition to Burpee's Annual, should have Burpee's Blue List, the Market Growers' Handbook. This is a wholesale price list for commercial planters. Write for these catalogs today. A post card will bring them.

every variety of vegetable seeds in a 180-page book, with space also for ordering flower seeds and nursery stock. The idea is to use the original order for all purposes, without copying.

A BIT OF OLDS HISTORY.

It was thirty years ago that L. L. Olds started in the seed business. In 1888 he issued a 4-page catalogue devoted exclusively to seed potatoes. It contained the statement that he grew on his own farm every bushel offered. In 1895 field seeds and a small line of garden seeds were added, but business still was conducted on the farm at Clinton, Wis. In 1893 the Olds Seed Co. was incorporated. In 1898 the main warehouse burned and the company removed from Clinton to Madison, Wis. In 1913 a new fireproof special seed building was erected, 60x125, four floors and basement.

THE BIDS ON FREE SEEDS.

Tenders to the Government.

The customary procedure in the opening of the bids for vegetable and flower seeds intended for congressional free distribution was followed at Washington January 9, when officials of the Department of Agriculture waded through a mass of matter furnished by bidders for the contracts soon to be let.

The law requires that the bids be opened publicly, but the officials are desirous that they be given as little publicity as possible, because of the alleged possible effect on the market. The department does not desire to stir matters up to any extent.

The proposals were based on calls for:

Chris. Reuter, New Orleans, La.—"Reuter's Seeds for the South"; fifty-two pages, illustrated, and bound in a colored cover. Besides seeds and bulbs, it offers garden supplies, plants, fruit trees, pecan trees and other nursery stock. Cotton and other southern seeds are well represented.

Co., Montgomery, Ala.—Second annual illustrated catalogue of "Top Brand" farm and garden seeds, especially southern-grown seeds for southern use; forty-eight pages, in a neat colored cover. peas, beans and sweet corn are quoted both by the pound and the bushel.

Rocky Ford Cantaloupe Seed Growers' Co., Rocky Ford, Colo.—"Descriptive List of Cantaloupe and Other Vine Seeds," including watermelon and cucumber; twelve pages, illustrated.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.—Seeds, bulbs, plants, roots, plant boxes, tools and other requisites for farm, garden, orchard and lawn. This is an attractive, well illustrated catalogue, printed on an excellent quality of paper. The type is clear, and yet so compact that an amazing amount of matter is packed into the eighty-eight pages. The first few paragraphs of the text contain impressive words of encouragement and warning—an injunction to plant extensively, but to use the seed economically. "You will save the lives of your fellow men," says the book, "by planting carefully and liberally, but do not waste seed, for there is not enough seed in the world to meet present needs."

S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.—Thirty-eighth annual catalogue of "Bell Brand" seeds, with offerings, also, of vegetable plants, roses, flowering and decorative plants, shrubs and other nursery stock, tools, etc.; 128 pages, illustrated. Two full-page colored plates show some of the specialties in vegetables and flowers. Attention is drawn to the extreme shortage of some varieties of seeds.

R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.—A seed book of fifty-six pages, about 10¼x13½ inches, in an attractive colored cover. It is distinguished from other catalogues by its unusually large pages, almost solidly covered with woodcuts, though the little spaces between the pictures are as solidly packed with text and the cuts themselves are frequently mortised to secure space for the descriptions. The second cover page contains a list of "wholesale prices to large planters." The inside of the back cover is densely filled, except the narrowest possible margin, with instructions to vegetable growers.

book. The stock offered is comprehensive in variety and in age, ranging from large sizes down to 1-year plants, both seedling and grafted. "For many years," says the company, "we have led in introducing and testing, under California conditions, the most promising foreign and other new varieties of fruit."

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.—"Our Three Specialties, Roses, Carnations and Mums," a 28-page, illustrated catalogue, offering some of the best brand-new varieties and a discriminative selection of the well-tried standard sorts. Under the heading, "The Rose in 1917—the Outlook for the Year," an opinion is given as to which varieties are likely to be most profitable commercially. With reference to chrysanthemums the company says, "We are offering to the trade this year six seedlings which have been tested for three years, and which we feel sure will be found valuable additions to our commercial varieties." Half a dozen of the Wells-Pockett-Totty novelty mums also are listed.

Reichardt & Schulte Co., Inc., Houston, Tex.—"Eighteenth Farm and Garden Annual," an illustrated catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants, nursery stock, tools, poultry and goldfish supplies, insecticides, etc.; ninety-six pages and cover. Contains various tables for planters and sowers, stating quantities, distances, dates, etc.; also some spraying formulas and a table entitled "Spraying Guide for Insect Pests and Fungous Diseases." In the nursery stock, nut trees, fig trees and citrus fruits are prominent.

C. S. Quick, Berkeley, Cal.—A 20-page catalogue of dahlias, carefully classified, with pictures of four varieties, two of which are novelties of Mr. Quick's origination. "I grow eleven types and 650 varieties," he says, "more than 600 of which are listed in this catalogue." It is a neat booklet, printed in brown on cream-tinted paper.

J. J. Wilson Seed Co., Inc., Newark, N. J.—"Wilson's Seed Annual for 1917," an illustrated catalogue, with concise cultural directions at the head of each section; thirty-six pages and cover. The list of grass seeds is comprehensive and includes an unusually large number of mixtures for special purposes. An emphatic warning is given as to the scarcity of seed beans.

Wing Seed Co., Mechanicsburg, O.—An illustrated, 104-page catalogue, bound in a unique colored cover. Special attention is given to forage crops. The company expresses pride in its large and choice collections of gladioli, irises, dahlias and peonies. "Unquestionably all seedsmen," says the book, "will sell out on beans before the season is over, and if you want any of this seed at all we advise placing early orders." Several tables, indicating quantities, etc., are interspersed through the lists.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, January 10, with President McCarthy in the chair. E. J. Brown, chairman of the dinner committee, reported progress, and it is hoped that there will be a good turnout at our annual feast, which will be held January 23 at the Oriental hotel, Glen Cove, at 6:30 p. m. Andrew Kennedy, of New York, and Edward Harris, of Glen Cove, were elected members, and one petition was received.

The president appointed Robert Jones, James Gladstone and Samuel J. Trepess to act as judges for the exhibits, and their decisions were as follows: John F. Johnson, first for Primula malacoides; Harry Goodband, first for three poinsettias and first for twelve sprays of freesias; special mention to James Duthie for a pot of Primula malacoides Townsendii. Mr. Duthie, who is the originator of this valuable type of malacoides, upon the request of the judges gave an interesting talk on the history of this plant. Samuel J. Trepess read an instructive essay entitled "The Gardener and His Profession," by W. N. Craig, of Brookline, Mass. This essay was thoroughly enjoyed and a letter of thanks was ordered sent to the author.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held January 9 in the City hall, Northampton, through the invitation of C. E. Williams and G. W. Thormiley. There was a good attendance of members, over which presided George Strugnell, the newly elected president. Committees were appointed to look up lapsed members and to revise the by-laws of the club.

G. H. Sinclair spoke entertainingly of an auto trip he made through New York state last fall, making special mention of the parks of several cities and the noted nurseries at Rochester. Carnation exhibits were made by F. D. Keyes & Son, who showed a pleasing rose-colored sport of Enchantress. G. H. Sinclair & Son exhibited a promising seedling, the result of a cross between Harry Fenn and Princess Dagmar. Butler & Ullman showed Sweet Pea Yarrawa and Rainbow freesias of excellent quality. Coleus thyrsoideus and Erlangea tomentosa were shown by the Smith College botanic garden. H. E. D.

I THANK The Review for good results. —Charles Taynor, New Carlisle, O.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Pullman, Wash.—Thomas Neill & Son report that they experience no difficulty in getting advanced prices for their flowers.

Colfax, Wash.—Greenhouses here belonging to Roy Endsley collapsed under a heavy weight of snow a few days before Christmas.

Eugene, Ore.—L. W. Rae has succeeded the firm of Rae & McClain, and will carry on the seed and nursery departments as well as the flower business.

Walla Walla, Wash.—Herbert Brown, who recently terminated four years of service with James Wait, now is in charge of the penitentiary grounds here. Mr. Brown also operates a 5-acre market garden.

Spokane, Wash.—An organization recently was perfected here and incorporated at $100,000 under the name of Spokane Concrete Flower Pot Co., with officers as follows: H. E. Reimers, C. G. Bewley, W. F. Page, G. Pearson and W. E. Parmelee. It is understood that the company will manufacture a machine for making flower pots out of concrete. The machines presumably will be sold to florists and growers, who can make the pots in sizes and quantities as wanted.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

An almost universal satisfaction with this week's business is reported, everyone saying that it is far beyond expectations after such a good holiday. The few warm days have already made quite a big difference in stock, which is not only more plentiful but also better in every way than that of a week ago. Greenhouse roses are coming about as before, but the demand has fallen off some on account of the high prices charged at Christmas and New Year's. This is a condition that soon will right itself, and when the stock comes within a reasonable price wholesalers will be able to recommend it to their out-of-town trade.

Bulbous stock is improving in quality and increasing in quantity and variety. Carnations are daily improving, those from lath houses and outdoors, but greenhouse-grown stock is still a little scarce. At the time of writing small spring flowers are on the scarce side and clean up daily, but with the advent of freesias and daffodils in quantity and a general increase in stock of all kinds, prices should soon favor the buyer.

Regarding wild statements made as to northern shipments to this market, the writer hopes that the authors believe them; so far he has met no one else that does. News is always acceptable, whether favorable or otherwise, but wild prophecies are not news even where the wish is father to the thought. Azaleas that missed the holiday market are coming in freely now, but the demand is not here. Cyclamens are in fair demand only. Good plumosus is decidedly scarce, but there is a fair amount of the second-rate stock that is being shipped.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.

Los Angeles, By M. L. Germain, Pres.

Maidenhair ferns are not any too plentiful, but other greens are up to the average supply.

Various Notes.

G. W. Smith and Mrs. Smith left here January 5 for an auto trip to Santa Barbara, intending to stay in that delightful neighborhood for a few days. Business at the store is good.

Albert Goldenson, manager of Wolfskills' and Morris Goldenson's, is to be married February 25 to Miss Jennie Jacobs. A honeymoon trip to San Diego and other points in the neighborhood is the present plan.

George C. Roeding, of Fresno, is a visitor here this week.

John Brown, the well known head grower at the greenhouses of Wright's Flower Shop, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his wedding January 4. This was not the exact date of that happy event, but as the actual date came during the holiday rush, it was postponed to January 4. Quite a merry party attended the celebration and among the happy crowd, naturally, were Mr. and Mrs. Brown. Nothing unusual about that. No, Mr. Critic, but one unusual point was that the chief actors in that happy event twenty-five years ago at Reading, Pa., wore the same clothes they did January 4 of this, the best of all years. It is true that Mr. Brown's coat sleeves were a trifle short and his vest was hardly able to "make both ends meet," but if you could have seen how young it made him feel, you would have appreciated the fact that it was no time for anything but jollity. Even such a staid and worthy pillar of the trade as our old friend, Fred Hills, who, with his wife, was of the party, said that he had to drive home to Los Angeles carefully. Fred blamed it on the fog and it is only fair to say that the nights of late have not been particularly clear. All friends will be glad to hear that Mr. Brown has completely recovered from the burns sustained some time ago in the boiler room.

Following out their progressive ideas, S. Murata & Co., finding their quarters on Broadway too cramped, have obtained a long lease on a large 3-story building at 386 South Los Angeles street, where they will make their headquarters from now on. Not only the increased business in the wholesale cut flower end, but the addition of a seed and fertilizer department, made the move necessary.

Manager Fred Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., reports business continuing satisfactorily, with large shipments going out daily.

At J. W. Wolters' store some splendid Cypripedium insigne plants have been shown, including a beautiful albino type, which is a gem. Roy Barnhart, of the staff here, who was hurt in a street accident about Thanksgiving, is out of the hospital now, though still on crutches.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and Mrs. Ringier arrived here last week, on a trip to combine business and pleasure. Mrs. Ringier was taken ill on the train and is in Clara Barton hospital suffering with pneumonia, but her condition is reported as improving. Mr. Ringier is at the Hayward hotel.

Mrs. Rudolph Fischer, wife of the well known freesia grower at Santa Anita, and their son were badly hurt when an automobile skidded January 12. Young Mr. Fischer suffered a broken collar bone. Mr. Fischer now is cutting large quantities of freesias.

S. Murata & Co. started moving January 13 and will be located in the new store by January 20. It is the largest building ever taken for wholesale cut flower purposes in Los Angeles.

The Market.

Stock in general is more plentiful than it was a week ago. There is more outdoor bulbous stock and Formosa lilies are better. The China lily crop shows good quality and the demand cleans up the offerings readily. Paper Whites are plentiful and the heavy cut of freesias continues to hold a strong position. The supply of daffodils is increasing, but more could be used to advantage. Many forced tulips and hyacinths have appeared, but on account of their great popularity there have not been enough to go around. The carnation receipts have been greatly increased by days of warm weather and prices have dropped somewhat. Last week No. 1 carnations were selling at 75 cents to $1, and now they are quoted at 50 cents. Some of the growers who have extra fancy stock have not reduced their prices, however.

Limited quantities of good sweet peas are appearing and the supplies are snapped up at rather high prices. A few late chrysanthemums continue to arrive, but they are not good and receive little attention in the market.

Although the rose crop is going off with the smaller growers, there is no real shortage as yet, as the larger growers have enough to supply requirements fairly well. There is a fine cut of American Beauties, and Russell shows excellent quality. Violets now are fine and the shipping demand has improved. The market is well supplied with gardenias, and orchids are in better supply than for some time, many fine species being offered besides cattleyas. Many cut cyclamens are still being used. A few fruit blossoms have appeared, the offerings being unusually early this year. In potted stock small poinsettias are still shown at most of the downtown stores and many pink azaleas are being featured.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

There was a fair attendance at the monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held January 6. In the absence of President E. James and Vice-president T. Fenton, H. Plath presided. An application for membership was submitted by Fred Mueller, of Piedmont. For the S. A. F. convention program committee, Mr. Plath reported that there is still about $200 outstanding for advertising, and it was decided to turn the accounts over to a collector. On behalf of the picnic committee, D. Raymond suggested that preliminary plans for the annual picnic be taken under consideration at the next meeting. With regard to the exposition prizes, it was announced that J. A. Carbone received his at Christmas and that MacRorie & McLaren have received theirs. Mr. Plath made a final report on the returns of the dahlia show. The lecture committee provided for at the December meeting had not been appointed as yet. The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance in the bank on the first of the year.

The feature of the evening was the election of officers for the ensuing year. At the last meeting the same officers were nominated to serve for another year, but Mr. James sent word that he declined the presidency on account of illness, which made it impossible for him to attend regularly. John Gill, M. A. Poss and William Kittlewell were then nominated for president, and Mr. Poss was elected. The new officer is an energetic young man and the association's affairs no doubt will be well handled under his leadership. T. Fenton was re-elected vice-president; W. A. Hofinghoff, corresponding secretary; B. E. Meyer, financial secretary; J. A. Axell, treasurer; Mr. Kempf, librarian, and Daniel Raymond, assistant librarian. C. W. Ward was elected trustee. Ten of the most prominent and active members of the society were elected on the exhibition committee.

BABY DOLL

The most rapturously and strikingly beautiful little rose ever introduced. The color is absolutely new and startling in its brilliancy—golden yellow, tipped with clear cerise. The little buds and open flowers are elegantly finished and of most perfect form. Habit of the very best, strong and compact; freedom of bloom is remarkable and continuous throughout the entire season. We have given it a fair and thorough trial and have no hesitancy in offering it as the one best selling rose you ever handled. It is a money-maker.

Also special prices on all commerial varieties of Hybrid Teas.

The only exhibit was a vase of fourteen fine Russell roses, with stems four feet long, shown by the E. W. McLellan Co. Mr. Ward was one of the judges. The exhibit took ninety-five points. The question of a change in the meeting place to more desirable quarters was held over until the next meeting.

The business meeting was followed by a smoker. At 10:45 the crowd adjourned downstairs, where plenty of beverage, sandwiches, etc., were in readiness.

Various Notes.

E. Serveau, of Fillmore street, is bringing in a nice lot of prunus sprays.

The E. W. McLellan Co. has a fine crop of gardenias, and a good supply of bouvardias.

C. Kooyman is glad he moved recently, as business has shown a good increase in the new place. He promises to spring some surprises on the trade within the next two months.

ary member. After the business session the members adjourned to the Capitol hotel, where a banquet was served. There Mr. Reukauf was put through an impromptu initiation ceremony, which provided considerable amusement.

When visiting the local trade recently, Mark Ebel, of Sacramento, said business had been fine in that city this winter.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. is bringing in a fine cut of sweet peas, which sell well and bring a good price.

Mrs. David Lichtenstein, who assists her husband at 7 East street in catering to the wants of the large crowds of people daily passing to and from the Ferry building, says they have no complaints to make about business, as they are selling more cut flowers this season than ever before.

The Francis Floral Co. is making extensive improvements in its store at the

The Market.

The cut flower market has partially recovered from the strain of the holiday rush and the subsequent shortage of stock. Some locally-grown violets, and plenty of them from California, of good quality, are to be had. Carnations are more plentiful, but the supply is still short of the demand. A normal midwinter cut of roses is sufficient some days to fill all orders, but oftener some orders are refused, or only partly filled. More Golden Spur daffodils have appeared. Freesias, Paper Whites, Romans and cut Primula malacoides blooms are seen everywhere. There are good displays of orchids.

The supply of good pot plants is none too great. A few Cincinnati begonias, azaleas and ericas are shown. Primula malacoides plants in 4, 5 and 6-inch pots are so abundant that they can almost claim to be leaders. The lavender tints are the favorites. Good cyclamens are shown. Potted tulips in yellow and red shades have appeared. Some attractive potted freesias and Romans are good sellers.

Test Garden Body Formed.

The Portland Floral Society took part in the organization of a society to promote a rose test garden, which was proposed by the American Rose Society and which is to be handled by the bureau of public parks. This promoting society was required by the American Rose Society, to guard against abandonment or neglect of the test garden by future administrations. The meeting was held January 11 and was attended by delegates from nearly all the civic and commercial associations of the city. A unanimous desire was expressed to have the test garden located here, and it was evident that its interests will be guarded by a large number of citizens.

The offer of the American Rose Society to locate the garden at Portland is considered a fitting compliment to the "Rose City." F. A. Van Kirk, of the Portland Floral Society, was elected one of the trustees of the promoting society.

The Market.

The short supply of stock is the only complaint to be heard these days. The demand since the New Year has been exceptionally good and stock is cleaned up at the close of each day's business.

An attempt has been made to keep the prices of carnations up, proportionate to the small quantity cut, but it does not seem possible to do so; growers will complacently submit to a cut of prices almost any time. When the storekeepers rebel at any increase in price the growers seem to succumb without a protest, and the word goes, "Why can't we

We have selected seed from all our new varieties, as well as from our 50,000 1916 seedlings. All the seed is evenly mixed. The sizes of the flowers range from 4 to 9 inches in diameter, and the height of the stems is from 5 to 8 feet. The seedlings from this seed will flower in from 5 to 6 months after sowing, and many will have three or four side shoots, aside from the main shoot, in the first year. They will range in all colors imaginable, but salmon, white, lilac, pink and rose-pink are the leading colors. There is no other firm in the world that can put anything like these on the market.

Big Seed Company Is Distributing New Catalog

Aggeler & Musser Seed Company, of Los Angeles, Issue 24th Annual Book

One of the largest seed houses in the West, the Aggeler & Musser Seed Company, Sixth and Alameda streets, Los Angeles, have just received the first edition of their new 1917 catalog and are giving it broadcast distribution. This is their 24th annual catalog and it certainly surpasses any previous edition.

It contains many new features such as hints to the home vegetable gardener, how gardening may be made easy, etc. In fact, the supplementary booklet called the "Garden Manual," which heretofore has been printed separately, is this year incorporated in the big annual, and is claimed to be one of the most complete seed books published. It contains answers to more than 1,000 questions and gives information regarding all varieties of plants listed and is fully illustrated. Not only does it tell all about seeds, but gives full data concerning the correct tools and implements agriculturists should use to obtain the best results. Valuable hints on poultry, spraying, fertilizing and the use of insecticides are also given.

The Aggeler & Musser Seed Company will gladly send this descriptive, illustrated and interesting catalog free and postpaid to anyone writing and requesting it.—Advertisement.

get better prices?" Some growers are now selling their carnations at $2 per hundred, while some stores are retailing them at $1 per dozen. Some wise chaps talk about the "survival of the fittest;" maybe the stores can survive at these prices, but the grower will have some trouble to meet his liabilities, and never mind the gasoline. Roses are scarce. The few that come in are of fine quality and are quickly disposed of. Chrysanthemums are still helping the appearance of the stores, but the sale for them is not brisk. Bulbous stock is now arriving in increasing quantities and is meeting a brisk demand. Good cyclamens are offered. These and primulas constitute the principal pot plants now available.

Various Notes.

There has been a shake-up in the personnel of the Orpheum Floral Co. Felix Rosaia has withdrawn from the business and the company has been disincorporated. The new owners are Allan Beall, of the Woodlawn Flower Store, and S. Poolman, of the Woodland Floral Co., who took possession the first of the year. They have appointed George D. Bates manager, who has a reputation for efficiency and who no doubt will prove it in conducting this high-class business, with fine premises and an excellent location.

Silvio Rosaia, of Colma, Cal., was here last week visiting his brothers in the trade.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

THERE will be a big gathering of nurserymen at Kansas City next week. The Western Association of Nurserymen runs the A. A. N. a close second in the matter of general interest for the trade.

ONE of the things the nursery trade most fears for 1917 is the shortage of labor. It will be bad enough in the west, where agricultural operations will be on a more extensive scale than usual, but it will be worse in the east, where munitions factories are paying unheard-of wages to unskilled labor.

THE sixty-second annual meeting of the Western New York Horticultural Society will occupy the attention of Rochester and other nearby nurserymen January 24 to 26. This is the organization of which William C. Barry was president at the time of his death and for twenty-seven years preceding. The organization has nearly 1,500 members. John Hall, formerly secretary of the A. A. N., is secretary-treasurer.

THE ORNAMENTAL GROWERS.

It is probable that none of the special trade organizations is doing more good work for the general interest of the trade than is the one known as the Ornamental Growers' Association. These are nurserymen who specialize in ornamentals and the reason for their organization was that their interests are somewhat different from the interests of those who devote most of their energies to the production of fruit trees. The present officers of the Ornamental Growers' Association are: President, William Flemer, Springfield, N. J.; vice-president, Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; secretary and treasurer, C. J. Maloy, Rochester, N. Y. The executive committee is composed of three members in addition to the president and secretary, the term of one member expiring each year. The present members are Harlan P. Kelsey, Salem, Mass., one year, chairman; Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., two years; Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., three years.

NATIVE BERRIED SPECIES.

"Colored plates in natural colors almost absolutely govern propagation and sale by nurserymen of every species and variety of tree, shrub, vine and plant," assert A. H. & N. M. Lake, of Marshfield, Wis. "Natural colored plates exhibit the nurseryman's art to the buying public and are the educating factor that induces the buying of the nurseryman's stocks.

"We have no natural colored plates showing to both nurserymen and the public the wonderfully decorative and ornamental value of the berries, fruits and foliage of our wild cherries, grapes, currants, gooseberries, actæas, amelanchiers, aralias, aronias, dogwoods and viburnums, including over 100 species and varieties of berried trees, shrubs, vines and plants.

"Nurserymen are supplied with excellent colored plates of fine and highly popular flowering and foliage trees, shrubs, vines and plants, and keep the mind of the buying public confined to and buying from this list of nursery stock, which holds almost entirely the buying public's attention, thereby overplanting private and public grounds in numbers of each of the popular flowering varieties, making them appear common and cheap, depressing the prices and cheapening the industry.

"The lack of colored plates designed to merchandise the stock will disclose to the keen merchandising nurseryman why many highly ornamental decorative berried trees, shrubs and vines have not yet become popular with buyers of nursery stock.

"With millions of dollars' worth of absolutely free advertising of the highest class being given ornamental berried trees, shrubs and vines of over 100 species and varieties, only the natural colored plates and the nursery-grown stocks separate the American nurserymen from the greatest era of prosperity known to the industry.

"The natural colored plates can be quickly produced. The growing of the stock requires time. Learning the species and how to successfully propagate them requires time. Are American nurserymen prepared for a rapid expansion of the industry by adding in a large measure over 100 species and varieties?

Native-berried species will be in greater demand than nurserymen can supply before the stocks can be grown."

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

The market conditions are somewhat improved this week. The carnation supply is normal, the glut being of short duration, and good stock is to be had at $3 per hundred, with poorer stock bringing as low as $10 per thousand. Roses are cleaning up well in most varieties at $3 to 10 per hundred, with the shorts scarce. Callas are becoming more abundant, but the supply of Easter lilies is still limited. Narcissi, yellow and Paper White, are equal to the demand, making $2.50 and $3, the white ones receiving the best call on account of the large quantity of funeral work. Golden Spur narcissi and Roman hyacinths have been in good favor.

Many sweet peas of excellent quality are on hand, but, notwithstanding the supply, the prices continue extremely good. An ample supply of violets is in evidence, the California and eastern stock not depreciating the value of home stock in the least, the home stock being preferable. Orchids and valley are still scarce. Lilacs, snapdragons, freesias, bouvardias and pansies are beginning to make their appearance in limited supplies. Southern greens have been equal to the demand and an improvement has been noted in fern leaves.

Various Notes.

Paul Janisch and Herbert Weiss have leased the property of the Reinken Floral Co. and will take charge about February 1. Business will be conducted under the name of Broad-Ripple Floral Co. Mr. Janisch was born in Germany and came to this country twelve years ago, at which time he became foreman for H. Scholzel, who originated the Nephrolepis Scholzeli. He also worked for well known concerns at Boston, Charlotte, N. C., and Clay Center, Kan. For the last three years Mr. Janisch has had charge of the greenhouses of the Missoula Nursery Co., of Missoula, Mont. Mr. Weiss is not a florist, but was in the catering business at Indianapolis for seven years and the last three years at Missoula, Mont., where he made the acquaintance of Mr. Janisch. Mr. Weiss has been successful as a business man, and with the partnership of Mr. Janisch the Broad-Ripple Floral Co. should meet with success.

The E. G. Hill Co. exhibited at the annual meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association a beautiful new rose named Primrose, of the type of Ophelia. The foliage is a lovely deep bronze-maroon, finishing bronze-green. The bud is long and pointed, of a saffron and cream color, with apricot shadings and a deep gold at the base of the petals.

F. G. Nelson, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, of Burlington, Ia., was a visitor this week. A. F. J. Baur, Irwin Bertermann and Herman Young, the committee appointed to act with Mr. Wallace, state entomologist, had the first meeting January 13. Their purpose was to determine the simplest method of issuing a health certificate shipping tag for greenhouse-grown stock, thus aiding interstate commerce between the shippers of such plants and giving the recipient a guarantee. It is rumored that the new governor desires to do away with the state entomologist's office, so this committee has been authorized to see the governor and set forth reasons why the office should be retained. As it is of vital importance to the florist that this office should continue, it was the desire of those present at the meeting for every member to do all in his power to preserve this office.

A. Steddum, of Knightstown, Ind., was a recent visitor.

Claude Griffith, of the Hensley Flower Shop, has been ill from an attack of the grip.

Walter Hanson, with the E. A. Nelson Co., has been suffering from ptomaine poisoning.

Entomologist Wallace urges all florists and nurserymen who are having trouble with pests to get in touch with him, as his office is now starting to compile bulletins listing pests and preventive measures. It is well to take advantage of this offer and to make arrangements to obtain one of these bulletins.

The strawberry beetle, a pest new to florists but old to the strawberry grower, has been doing a great deal of damage at the Gardener establishment at Richmond and at the Smith & Young Co. range at Cumberland, Ind. This beetle is known to the berry grower as the strawberry root worm and is the larva form of the beetle. It hides in the earth and comes up on the foliage of the rose, eating little round holes in the leaves until a perfect network is made, thus ruining the stock for salable purposes. The Smith & Young Co. has been spraying the plants with arsenate of lead, but with little harm to the pests. E. E. T.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

A number of social functions last week helped to accelerate the demand for cut flowers, but even this work failed to bring the week's business up to normal. A severe drop in temperature gave the greenhousemen considerable concern in keeping their houses warm. Prices have made a slight advance, with little prospect of any immediate decrease.

Various Notes.

The annual meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held January 17.

Charles H. Hunt has been confined to his home during the last week by a severe attack of the grip.

George W. Fraser has given up his retail store at 384 Elmwood avenue.

P. W. S. Brownell is erecting a small addition, 6x14, to his range of houses on Forbes street, East Providence.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island has voted not to disband, notwithstanding the small number who attend the monthly meetings. A membership committee has been appointed to endeavor to recruit members.

IMMEDIATE DELIVERY

¶ We are now booking orders for our new seedling Superb, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

Superb is a seedling of Gloriosa and Enchantress. It has the good stem of Gloriosa and the fine growing habit of Enchantress. The color is a flesh pink and it keeps its color at all seasons. The flowers average about three inches, are very full and generally receive full score on substance. The flowers are all perfect and do not split. In the four years we have grown it, it has proved the best commercial variety, barring none.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Markets.

Trade last week was quiet. Killarney roses, both pink and white, are plentiful; all other roses are in short supply. Carnations are abundant and cheap. Paper Whites and Romans are more conspicuous. Lilies, sweet peas, violets, etc., are plentiful enough to meet the demands. A few tulips are seen, but they have short stems as yet.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Club was held at the residence of Ludwig Stapp. The attendance was good.

The flower show committee reported the Masonic hall at Rock Island had been rented for November 2 to 4. The members subscribed to a guarantee fund to be placed in the hands of the treasurer by June 1, to meet the necessary expenses. It was decided to have competitive exhibits and an admission fee of 25 cents was decided on. A committee composed of C. O. E. Boehm, C. J. Reardon and A. Anderson was appointed to draft rules by which exhibitors will be governed, the committee to report at or before the regular meeting in March.

H. G. Pauli invited the club to hold its February meeting at his residence, when the nomination of officers for the ensuing year takes place. W. G.

AMHERST, MASS.

The enrollment of students of floriculture in the winter short course of the Massachusetts Agricultural College is twenty-one. Many of these men come to the college from practical work and commercial establishments. The short course is divided into two sections. Prof. A. H. Nehrling is giving the work in commercial floriculture, while C. E. Wildon is handling the work in garden flowers.

A total of twenty students are enrolled in the regular major courses in floriculture. Three courses are to be given this term. Course 51 treats of greenhouse management; Course 77 of decorative plants and conservatory work; Course 80 is a continuation of the work in commercial floriculture.

The publication of the annual, which the M. A. C. Florists' and Gardeners' Club has determined to get out, is being pushed energetically. Already over forty per cent of the advertising space has been subscribed to and the remainder is rapidly being filled out. Over 1,000 copies of the annual are to be distributed free to persons in the horticultural trades.

NEWPORT, R. I.

John T. Allan has been appointed license commissioner for three years.

J. C. Haas had the decorations for the Johnson-Hamilton wedding last week.

Carl Jurgens has been harvesting 10-inch ice at Greene End pond for his summer supply. W. H. M.

Lynchburg, Va.—Miss Annie McCarron, whom the papers call "Lynchburg's pioneer florist," now is comfortably settled in her new "Home of Flowers," on Main street. The new stand certainly is a smart one; the architects let loose some original ideas in designing the interior of Miss McCarron's domain.

The Market.

Real winter weather prevailed last week, but business was as good as could be expected. Funeral work was more abundant than during the previous week. There was a large supply of some cut flowers; other items were scarce. There was a shortage of roses of all colors, but especially reds. The roses obtainable, however, were of fine quality. More bulbous stock is arriving. Lilies are short of the demand. Carnations of good quality are a strong factor in the market. Sweet peas and California violets are plentiful, and if the bright weather continues for another week, they will be too plentiful, as more are being grown this year than in previous years. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray had many decorations for the implement houses, which put on their exhibit this week.

W. J. Barnes executed a large decoration for the International Harvester Co. for its implement display. Mr. Barnes last week received a large shipment of rhododendrons, lilacs and other flowering shrubs, which were badly frozen in transit.

Fred Fromholdt was busy during the week with funeral work, turning out some of the largest pieces he has worked on since starting the business.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. reports its rose crop as being short of the demand, but that there are plenty of other flowers to help out. This concern is selling extra fine cyclamens and ferns in all sizes.

Adolph Mohr will have about 750 rose plants and 2,000 Easter lily plants in pots for Easter. His bedding stock is looking well. He has about 25,000 geraniums of good size for the spring trade.

The management of the Forest Hill cemetery is going to build another house in the near future, larger than any of the other houses. It will be devoted to carnations and the older houses will be planted to chrysanthemums and bedding stock.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports that stock has shortened in supply, but that this will not last long, as a large crop is coming on.

T. J. Noll & Co. say that roses are not coming in fast enough, but that there is plenty of other stock. W. J. B.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

While there has been a drop in prices of flowers since the holidays, it has not been much. The prices of carnations and sweet peas are about the same as during the holidays. Roses are fairly plentiful and of good quality. More sweet peas are coming in and carnations are more abundant. Ferns continue to sell well and there is a demand for potted plants. Baskets of small potted plants sell readily.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros. report business good, with considerable funeral work at present.

The January number of the house journal issued by Henry A. Strobell is off the press. R. B. M.

Do It Now!

Go over your Rose Houses carefully and estimate the plants you need for replanting this Spring, and place your order. Roses are going to be scarce. The Manetti situation is such that those who get it are fortunate, and the demand is far greater than the limited supply. We have sold over 100,000 grafted Roses in the last two weeks. We have 200,000 more to sell. There is considerable building contemplated. "Changing from Carnations to Roses" is a frequent explanation made when placing an order. If you are short at planting time it will be your fault and not ours. The growing of grafted Roses is an industry in itself. At Cromwell the large quantity of Roses grown for cut flowers makes it possible to get scions that are first-class. We want your Rose Plant order, and we want to be able to say "yes" to your inquiry. Estimate your requirements and write us.

GREENWICH, CONN.

The monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Hubbard hall, Greenwich, January 12. James Stuart, in a most able manner, installed the new officers for 1917. William Whitton, the new president, then took charge of the meeting. There was a good attendance and members were well repaid for coming out on such a cold night—there was the finest display of flowers and pot plants ever staged at a meeting.

A cultural certificate was awarded to William Graham for carnations, Good Cheer and Pink Sensation. William Whitton was awarded a cultural certificate for White Killarney roses; also a cultural certificate for six plants of Primula malacoides. These plants were in 10-inch pots. For a vase of Calanthe Veitchii, James Stuart was awarded a cultural certificate. This flower showed up splendidly mixed with Buddleia Asiatica. John Forbes was awarded a cultural certificate for Lælia anceps. Robert Grunart was highly commended for his vases of sweet peas and Matchless carnations. John Harper had a new seedling carnation; the judges would like to see the growing plants of this seedling before passing judgment. The thanks of the society were extended to John Andrews for a plant of Begonia Cincinnati; William Graham for three heads of cauliflower; Robert Grunart for two vases of carnations; P. W. Popp for freesias.

After a discussion it was decided to hold a smoker instead of the annual concert and dance, so the executive committee was instructed to arrange for a smoker, to be held after the business session of the February meeting.

J. Sealey read an interesting essay on bush and standard mums. He was accorded a hearty vote of thanks. Three new members were elected and two applications filed.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

HEIGHT OF SMOKESTACK.

I wish to get some information from your heating department. I have a greenhouse 20x100, heated by a No. 518 Lord & Burnham boiler, which does the work quite satisfactorily. However, my smokestack is only nine inches in diameter and twelve feet high. At all the other places that I have visited, the chimneys are from twenty to thirty feet high. If I had a taller stack, would any less coal be needed to heat the place?

G. S.—N. J.

In order to secure the highest economy of fuel, perfect combustion must be obtained and this cannot be expected unless the smokestack is more than twelve feet in height, especially if it is only nine inches in diameter.

We do not remember the exact rating of a No. 518 Lord & Burnham boiler, but, for a house 20x100, the rating should be about 1,000 square feet, if a temperature of 60 degrees is desired, and the grate should be about twenty-five inches in diameter, or two feet square. While a chimney nine inches in diameter would answer for a heater of this size, we should prefer to have a stack ten inches in diameter, and if it is thirty feet high above the entrance of the smoke pipe from the boiler, a more perfect combustion and greater economy in the use of fuel will be secured. The actual height of the chimney should depend somewhat on the kind of coal used. A height of twenty to twenty-five feet would answer for egg anthracite, while even more than thirty feet would be desirable for the finer grades of soft coal.

ONE FLOW IS NOT ENOUGH.

We wish to get a little advice on our heating system. Our greenhouse is 21x31. There are eighteen inches of glass in each side and in one end; the other end adjoins the boiler room. The rafters are about fourteen feet long and one gable is all glass. In other words, there are about 1,066 square feet of glass. We have a Wilks hot water boiler, 24x36. One 2-inch main flow pipe runs along the purlin, about halfway up the rafters, to the front of the house. There three 2-inch ells branch to three manifolds, each connected with six 1½-inch returns, which run to the rear of the house and empty into a 2-inch return main leading to the boiler. There are two globe valves, one of them on the flow line, the other on the main return, close to the boiler. There is an air outlet at the high point in the flow pipe.

The coils are arranged as follows: Six 1½-inch pipes under the entire length of a bench twenty-eight feet long; six 1½-inch pipes under the center bench, twenty-three feet long; six 1½-inch pipes under the end bench, twelve feet long, and continued under the side bench, twenty-eight feet long.

The draft is good and we can fire till the boiler is white-hot; yet we cannot keep up the needed temperature. We require a temperature of about 65 degrees when the outside temperature is 20 degrees below zero. Would you advise us to add a 2-inch flow, attaching it to the large coil, or is the boiler too small? Or would you suggest the use of air valves in the manifolds? The main return is about two feet above the top of the boiler. The flow pipe is nine feet above the boiler. The expansion tank is three feet above the flow pipe. The house is in good condition.

W. M. H.—Pa.

The boiler is amply large to supply three times the present radiation, but although the amount of radiation in the house might be supplied by means of one 2-inch flow pipe, were the returns composed of 2-inch pipes, it is altogether too much to expect that eighteen returns can be supplied by one 2-inch flow pipe, when they are only two feet above the boiler. We advise the installation of two more 2-inch flows, one of them to be located three feet below the ridge and the other on the purlin, opposite to where the present flow pipe is located. Connect the pipes so there will be one flow for each coil, and arrange the return main in the same way. Or, leaving the present return to serve for one coil, connect the other returns to a 2½-inch pipe leading to the boiler.

Another reason why the house cannot be heated to 65 degrees in zero weather is that there are at present in the house less than 300 square feet of radiating surface, while 400 square feet should be provided in order to maintain 65 degrees, without forcing the fire. Although the addition of the two flow pipes will still leave the amount of radiation under what it should be, we believe that it will be sufficient to keep up the desired temperature except in a few extremely cold nights during the winter, and then a little extra attention is all that will be needed after the changes suggested in the flows and returns are made.

If the flows run downhill and the highest point in each flow pipe is connected with a pipe leading to the expansion tank, there will be no occasion for adding air valves.

FOUR CONNECTED HOUSES.

Please state the number and size of hot water pipes that will be required to heat four houses, each 16x60, to a temperature of 60 degrees when the outside temperature is 15 degrees below zero. The houses are connected and run north and south, with the boiler shed at the north end. They have 4-foot side walls, with eighteen inches of glass in the east wall; the west wall is solid. The boiler is in an 8-foot cellar.

F. W.—Ind.

If the houses have a center bench, under which bottom heat is desired, we would use three 2½-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns in all except the east house, in which we would use seven returns. Carry one of the flows upon each of the plates and the other two feet under the ridge. There should be two returns upon each wall, or under the side benches, with three returns on the east side of the east house, and two other returns under the center bench.

If solid beds are used, the two middle returns may be in the walks. Or, if for any reason heating pipes are not desired in the middle of the houses, we would use only two 2½-inch flows on the walls, with seven or eight 2-inch returns. Good results could also be obtained with 1½-inch returns, using eight or nine in each house.

The Market.

Trade is heavy and has been during the last two weeks, with stock scarce in all lines. Lilies are scarce at this writing and the outlook is that they will be shy for some days.

corner of Sutter and Powell streets. The general appearance of the place will be greatly improved by the remodeling and refinishing of the salesroom. The ceiling is being painted a celestial blue, which the painter says is a perfect replica of a section of sky. The other woodwork will be a verdi green, the color scheme being entirely different from the other stores of its kind in San Francisco.

At the annual meeting of the Downtown Association, A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., was elected first vice-president.

Cohen & Figore say business has been fine at their stand in the Ferry building. They are glad to see violets improving, as this stock is one of the principal items in their transient trade.

Miss Recardie Lee Murray opened her new store on Geary street, near Larkin street, January 10. The place was thoroughly renovated to suit the needs of her business and is nicely fitted up to show the stock to advantage. This establishment will be conducted as a branch of the stand in the Clift hotel.

Among the notable holiday events for which A. O. Stein handled the decorations was an affair given in the St. Francis hotel. Two rooms on the mezzanine floor and the Colonial ballroom were used, all three rooms being done in black and white, in futuristic design. White carnations and freesias were used on the tables and black and white streamers shrouded the potted trees which outlined the central dancing space. A pall of orchids and violets was made at the Stein establishment for the funeral of a prominent attorney.

According to T. C. Holmes, manager of the C. C. Morse & Co. retail store, shipments of seeds from England, France, Belgium and Italy have arrived the same as under normal conditions, and this firm, he says, is preparing for an unusually good spring season. The company has just issued the 1917 seed guide, which is larger and more comprehensive than any of the previous catalogues.

The Richard Diener Co., of Kentfield, has issued a new catalogue. It is well illustrated, showing a great variety of gladioli, new carnations, pansies, petunias, etc. S. H. G.

Tekamah, Neb.—A Fremont newspaper says that Walter Beum and H. V. Chase are going to erect greenhouses here to raise posies for the people and vegetable plants for gardens.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business has been quiet since the holidays, but prices continue high. Stock of all kinds is scarce, a condition attributed to the dark weather of the last week. Carnations and roses sell well and fine snapdragons and sweet peas find a ready sale. Violets are plentiful, but they have not been moving fast since the holidays. Easter lilies, daffodils and tulips are offered in several of the stores. Valley is still scarce, but Roman hyacinths serve as a substitute. Greens of all kinds are plentiful. Azaleas, cyclamens and primulas are in good form and find a ready call.

Various Notes.

Schultheis had the decorations for a large social event last week. The different rooms were decorated with green roping, wild smilax and miniature electric lights. The tables had centerpieces of Sunburst roses.

A fire supposed to have originated in the boiler room did considerable damage to the greenhouses of Thomas Arner, on Grand View avenue, recently. The fire was soon extinguished, but much injury was done to the stock and greenhouses.

Muir & Co. had the decorations for a dinner dance at the Country Club last week. The rooms were lavishly decorated with hemlock, green roping, wild smilax and poinsettias. The tables had centerpieces of poinsettias. Mrs. M. Muir has returned from a visit to friends at Hazleton, Pa.

A. L. Besancon & Co. report business good in all lines. The entire staff has been working overtime.

John W. Beagle reports business good. He is cutting some fine pansies.

William MacDonald, of Moosic, is cutting some excellent carnations, for which he finds a ready sale. He also is sending in some fine azaleas, primulas and cyclamens.

The regular meeting of the Scranton Florists' Club was held at the store of C. W. Baldwin January 8. There was a large attendance and much business was transacted. The meeting was called to order by Vice-president J. W. Beagle. The coming spring flower show was the chief topic of the evening. The committees are working hard and it seems that this year's show is bound to surpass any other in the state. The advertising committee has some novel ideas for boosting the show. F. J. Moran was appointed a committee of one for the out-of-town exhibits. John M. Rovatsos was elected to membership. F. J. M.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

January 10 cold weather set in, the coldest Buffalo has experienced this winter. This may have had a tendency to retard business to some extent, for it certainly has slackened up. There has been a good run of funeral work, but aside from that business might be termed rather dull.

Beauties are good, but demand for them is somewhat erratic. Other varieties of roses are not any too abundant. Ophelia and Aaron Ward have had an unusual run recently. The supply of carnations is much like that of the roses, quite abundant one day and running short the next. Violets continue to sell readily. Orchids and gardenias are sufficient for all present demand. Freesias and Roman hyacinths add variety to the list of miscellaneous stock. Snapdragons are few. The supply of jonquils and tulips is increasing daily, adding much to the spring effect, pussy willows also being essential in this line.

Taking the Buffalo market in cut flowers as a whole, stock is rather scarce, consequently adding to the sales of plants, primroses and hyacinths, among these, being the most popular.

Various Notes.

The Felton Flower Shop has moved from 1375 Main street, across the way, to the Utica Court, where the store will be more adequate for the business.

The Wm. Scott Co. has been cutting a large number of early yellow tulips, for which there is a good demand.

It is evident the public is getting better acquainted with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and are making good use of it.

L. H. Neubeck has a nice batch of freesia pot plants, which always meet with good demand.

Benson Stafford reports a satisfactory business since the holiday season, as he has been on a continual rush with funeral work.

While with W. J. Palmer & Son, Prof. D. Lumsden, of the department of floriculture at Cornell University, will give a series of lectures with colored slides.

At the store of W. J. Palmer & Son they have on exhibition a Vanda Sanderiana, bearing two large sprays of flowers. The plant is valued at $250. Mr. Palmer, who has been suffering from a severe cold, has been confined to his home for several days.

Here At Last Is a Serviceable Hose

Fortunately for the florist, all lawn hose is not alike.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose, for instance, is different from most kinds.

For here is a hose that cannot kink—it has six heavy rubber ribs that run its full length. This prevents the kinking that makes the use of the ordinary hose a real punishment.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose will not burst. It is made in one solid, molded unit. It is made of rubber—which will not become hard or brittle no matter how much you may leave it lying around the greenhouse or in the sun.

Goodyear Wingfoot Lawn Hose is weather-proof and wear-proof. It is a fine, serviceable hose for the everyday use of the florist.

And it is guaranteed not to burst at any time within two whole lawn hose seasons.

The Market.

Market conditions remain unchanged since the first of the year. A few early tulips and Golden Spur narcissi are in the market, but as yet spring flowers are not a factor, as they will be in two weeks. Roses are scarce. As usual, they are off crop; the buds open slowly during January. Carnations are becoming better each day. The price continues at $5 to $6, however, which shows that the demand is strong.

Various Notes.

There is not much change in the local coal situation. Slack, or run of mine, bought in a small way from dealers, sells for $8 to $8.50 per ton. Carload lots are $5.50 to $6 per ton at the mine, plus a 90-cent freight rate.

W. S. Chaffee, proprietor of the Clifton Floral Co., of West Seventy-Fifth street and Lake avenue, left for parts unknown soon after Christmas and has not been seen since. Several wholesale florists would be glad to hear of his whereabouts. Besides his activities in the florists' business, Mr. Chaffee made a business of supplying flags, bunting, etc., to civic bodies in large cities.

A 10-man bowling team representing the Cleveland Florists' Club left for Detroit January 16, to bowl a team representative of the Detroit Florists' Club. Those making the trip were: George Bate, S. K. Gartman, Charles E. Russell, Herbert Bate, Fred Steinbrenner, W. A. Calhoon, C. J. Graham, Walter E. Cook, Frank A. Friedley, Charles Gibson, Frank J. Ritzenthaler, Joseph Stujcek.

Visitors last week included J. J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, and George Hampton, of the Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia.

Laurel, Del.—The L. M. Smith Floral Co., believing that good things are in store for its yellow sport of Mistletoe chrysanthemum, has adopted the name January Gold for the variety. It blooms in the last ten days of December, but the blooms are of such lasting quality that it may easily be kept well into January. With the Elmer D. Smith varieties to start the mum season in August and this L. M. Smith sport to end it in January, mums will be available six months of the year.

An Open Letter ON Jacobs' Greenhouses

S. JACOBS & SONS,

Gentlemen:—I am pleased to state that the greenhouse which you erected on the roof of the Beth Israel Hospital has proven very satisfactory indeed.

We are utilizing the same as a laboratory, and, although we thought it would be too hot in summer, have managed by painting the top of the glass with two coats of white paint, to keep out the intense heat of the sun and yet at the same time preserve the light. We also find that we can heat up the house very nicely in cold weather, and, as far as ventilation is concerned, it is excellently adapted. The house has withstood severe storms and proved to be a very substantial structure.

Visitors to the laboratory speak in high terms of its beauty and substantiality.

I am very glad to recommend the house and your workmanship.

Very truly yours,

L. J. FRANK, Supt. Beth Israel Hosp.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business has been unusually quiet during the last week. Dark weather has made flowers of all kinds scarce and, consequently, high-grade carnations are bringing $6 and $8 per hundred, which is unusual for this time of year. Roses are high; few violets are seen. There are a few marguerites and snapdragons. Tulips have made their appearance, but are short-stemmed, as the early ones always are.

Various Notes.

Robert H. Woodhouse has had a good batch of funeral work lately.

Edward M. Pierce has begun to cut good sweet peas. Carnations are doing well, considering the weather. He has his propagating bench filled with cuttings.

Richard E. Nofftz has shut down the larger part of his range for the remainder of the winter. Trouble in procuring coal he gives as his reason.

William M. Post spent a few days in New York recently. While there he visited the Cottage Gardens Co. establishment at Queens. W. M. P.

WESTERLY, R. I.

Lewis P. Rankin, who suddenly disappeared last September, has been located in Memphis, Tenn., according to a letter received by Mrs. Rankin a few days ago. Mr. Rankin had been suffering from neurasthenia for some time and is said to have regained his mental equilibrium in a fall which he sustained when about ten miles outside of New Orleans.

Mr. Rankin left Westerly Tuesday, September 12, for New York city on a business trip, and was last seen by P. B. Rigby, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., 117 West Twenty-eighth street. His disappearance occasioned considerable alarm, as it was feared that he had met with foul play. In his letter to his wife, Mr. Rankin states that the last he remembered of his visit to New York was his walk of four blocks from the Pennock-Meehan Co. store, after leaving Mr. Rigby. His mind was a blank from that time until he found himself in a strange room ten miles from New Orleans.

The Ideal Dirt Band

is made of strips of wood, thin as cardboard, cut to lock together, making a stronger and more economical dirt band than those made of paper. Try them and be convinced. We cut them to fit any bench or flat. Thousands can be set up in a few minutes. Better give us a sample order, NOW.

The Market.

The zero weather of the last week or ten days has had no bad effect on the flower market. The demand is exceedingly active, while the January sunshine has helped considerably to bring the supply of cut flowers and plants up to the desired quantity. There is an abundance of funeral work at present and the demand for cut flowers for decorative work is large; corsage work also is heavy. The supply of roses is good, with the exception of American Beauty. Prices have dropped since New Year's. The receipts of carnations are larger than they have been since the holidays. A great many of the blooms are used in funeral work. The prices have lowered considerably.

The supply of cattleyas is good. This also is true of cypripediums, vandas and oncidiums. The local demand for orchids has increased substantially this season. Longiflorum and rubrum lilies are in good supply and meet with a good call for funeral work. Valley is on the scarce side. Other offerings are snapdragons, which are in moderate supply, sweet peas, violets, Paper White narcissi, callas and tulips.

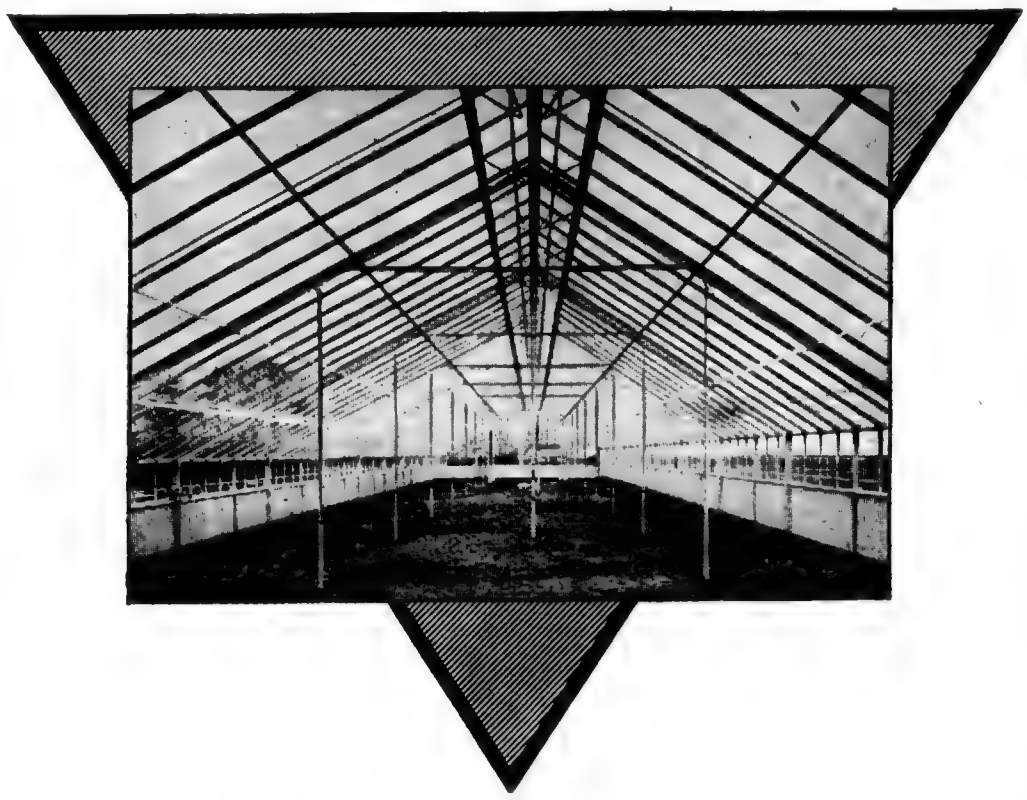
Various Notes.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are expecting a shipment of 5,000 orchid plants of various species from South America. This shipment will arrive within a few weeks and, with the six houses of orchids now owned by the firm, will make this establishment's collection one of the foremost in the middle western states. Will J. Vesey, Jr., will be among the local florists to attend the American Carnation Society meeting and exhibition at Indianapolis, January 31 and February 1.

James Schols, violet specialist of Grand Rapids, Mich., is shipping single violets to this market that are unusually fragrant.

F. J. Knecht & Co. recently bought a Ford delivery car, to serve as an assistant to their Overland.

The coal problem is no nearer solution than it was several months ago. The price of coal is not only advancing, but deliveries are almost impossible to obtain. One grower says that he lacks thirty cars to bring his contract up to date.



Miss Rhoda A. Doswell, of the Doswell Floral Co., president of the Fort Wayne Florists' Association, was united in marriage to Henry J. Wickman, of St. Louis, Mo., January 10. The home of the bride was elaborately decorated with Shawyer and Ophelia roses, snapdragons and sweet peas. After a western trip they will reside at St. Louis. R. F.

Lake Linden, Mich.—A greenhouse business has been started here by Joseph Bosch.

CALDWELL TANKS of Galvanized Steel are used everywhere. Sizes up to 1200 gallons can be shipped set up at small cost for freight. These tanks are strong, tight and durable. Cost less than wood tanks. Ask for illustrated catalogue and delivered prices.

How We Put It In Our Ridges

IN our new Reconstructed Construction, with its wide spacing between rafters, the ridge would be apt to sag were it not for the truss stiffener we use.

This stiffener extends from one rafter ridge splice plate to the other, with struts between.

Strong as it is, still it casts practically no shade. This is a superior point, far from the case with the use of heavy angle iron or I-beam shapes.

It's no trick to make a house strong enough.

But it is a considerable one to make it that strong, and still keep the shade down as we have.

You know we go anywhere for business, or to talk business.

CYPRESS BY TEST
SUBSTITUTES BY TALK

Is there value to you in an endurance test of 49 years in greenhouse sash? It is reported to us that sash made of heart Cypress by a prominent greenhouse contractor in Chicago and placed in position in a greenhouse at Des Plaines, Ill., in 1868, are still doing service.

Jacob Fries, Bethlehem, Pa., has Cypress sash that have stood the racket for 30 years and are still on the job. And these are not isolated cases—they represent no more than a fair test of "The Wood Eternal" for greenhouse use.

It will serve you as well and save you the nuisance and expense of repairs and replacements.

The argument backed by such facts cannot be answered by mere talk. Ask the manufacturer or contractor who wants to give you a "substitute" for Cypress to cite you to an endurance test of 30 or 49 years to the credit of the so-called "substitute."

That is no more than a fair precaution on your part—good ordinary business sense.

If he would meet the Cypress record with more talk, and no test, then there's a "nigger in that wood-pile." You know you would better pass up the "substitute" and stick to the real article, which is Cypress.

"PECKY" CYPRESS. You greenhouse men know how common it looks and how uncommon it lasts. The U. S. Govt. Rept. (Forest Service Bul. 95) says—"That the disease (which produces the 'peck') has been a long time preying upon Cypress timber is apparent from an examination of Cypress logs dug from alluvial deposits many feet below the present level of the Gulf of Mexico. Some of that prehistoric timber is pecky, though it has been buried during a period estimated at no less than 30,000 years. . . . The effect of the disease (known as 'Pecky') . . . is believed to act as a preservative . . . and to hinder decay."

Is 30,000 years "hindering of decay" long enough for YOUR greenhouse?

There is no known record of rotten "Pecky." Use nothing else for benches and bench standards. It is cheap, too.

A postal will do, a letter is better—either brings a booklet or two from the famous CYPRESS Pocket Library (a strictly authoritative reference work). VOL. 3 is all about "GREENHOUSES." It is FREE. Send for it. Also ask for Vol. 2, on "Pecky"—a money-saver. Take no hearsay. GET THE FACTS. Then ACT.

The Market.

The cold weather last week caused the supply of stock to shorten considerably. The demand, too, has fallen off somewhat, but even at that most of the receipts are taken up quickly. The rose supply has diminished greatly, so that all roses that come in prove to be good property. Carnation receipts, too, have decreased. Enough Easter lilies are coming in to take care of all demands. Paper White narcissi are plentiful; the same is true of sweet peas. Valley, orchids and violets may be had. Other offerings are callas, rubrum lilies, snapdragons, Roman hyacinths, forget-me-nots, wallflowers and primroses. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Among recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs G. Knoch, of Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. G. A. Beckman, of Middletown, O.; Fred Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Karl Keiser, of Hamilton, O.; J. T. Herdegen, of Aurora, Ind.; S. A. Gregg, of Charleston, W. Va. C. H. H.

Washington, Ill.—W. J. Harms has announced his intention of starting a greenhouse business near here.

Helena, Mont.—As an unusual side line for a florist, the State Nursery & Seed Co. fills two large storage houses with ice each winter. During Christmas week the ice at that cutting was twenty-two inches thick. Notwithstanding the severe early winter in this section, the greenhouses produced a fine lot of Christmas plants, poinsettias, Lorraine and Chatelaine begonias and cyclamens. A heavy cut of roses, carnations, violets, sweet peas, narcissi and cattleyas has been well kept cleaned out, as this has been the most prosperous and rushing business in the history of the concern.

The After-Cost—

—that's the rock that wrecks many a greenhouse man.

One of Our Ways of Cutting Out After-Cost.

This is the AGMCO cement column protector. Made of a fine mixture of cement this insulates the steel from moisture and prevents corrosion.

Like plated ware, the cheap greenhouse doesn't look so bad when it's new, but later.....! Surely the cheap house costs less.....in the beginning; but it costs more.....in the end!

Not so with the AGMCO.

It has a lower after-cost than any greenhouse on the market. It has a longer life. When the greenhouse doctor is making regular visits to the cheap greenhouse, your AGMCO will be just as good as it was the day you first benched stock in it. That's why many a grower who expected to buy an ordinary greenhouse has bought an AGMCO, the supergreenhouse.

Study after-costs.....figure with an eye on the years to come. You are not, like the Arab, pitching a tent for a one night's stay. YOU are building to house one of the greatest things in the world to you—the source of your daily bread, your and your wife's old age insurance, and the inheritance of your children. Could anything be worthy a more serious consideration—a more royal home? That's why you'll want an AGMCO.....a lesser house will mean years of regret to you.

Investigate the AGMCO thoroughly—
Compare it with others—and—
It Will Sell Itself to You.

The highest priced and the cheapest greenhouse.

John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:—Some eighteen years ago this summer I bought my first greenhouse material from your house. I have gradually added thereto every year or so until today we have twenty-two houses furnished by your firm. The first house furnished by you seems to be in perfect condition today. Four of these houses are of iron span construction and the last one, which we are just putting up. We are very much pleased in the construction of your house, and the blue prints and helps received along with them.

Thanking you for your kindness, I am Yours truly,

Gentlemen: We have just received the forty 20th Century Double-acting Arms ordered from you a few days ago. Our putting the vents closer together than was called for in specifications accounts for requiring this additional material.

Our houses are nearly all equipped with your ventilating machinery, and we find same very satisfactory in every respect. Your Double-acting 20th Century Arm is more serviceable than the others we have in use, and if properly installed needs no more attention at all. We consider your Arm the perfect one.

We wish to thank you for your promptness in filling this order and for the courteous treatment extended in the past. Yours very truly, Davis & Steiner.

INDEX TO ADVERTISEMENTS AND TABLE OF CONTENTS - PAGES TWO AND THREE

From the giant arch around the outside of this cut you can see exactly the parts that go to make it such a strong framing feature. The V-shaped bracing is clamped to the cross tie pipe and the ridge sag rod is bolted through it.

Grant Whiffin, of Des Plaines, Builds a Lord & Burnham Semi-iron House

MR. WHIFFIN'S range is, as they say down in the mountains of Virginia, "two whoops and a holler" from our Des Plaines factory, near Chicago.

To a house he had, we joined this one, 28 feet wide by 210 feet long.

If you look carefully at the framing, you will see it has the Giant Arch with the V-shaped bracing and ridge sag rod.

Malleable clamp column fitting with the tapered faces. When the bolts are pulled up tight, the edges dig into the pipe with a bulldog grip.

Those V braces are of pipe that extend to a pipe purlin.

With this bracing and the sag rod pulled up snug and tight, you have, when combined with the Giant Arch, a frame that, next to our iron frame house, is as rigid and enduring a house as money will buy.

When you want to talk building, say when and where and we'll be there.

ASTER PINK ENCHANTRESS

Upright in habit, as distinguished from the Branching form. The plant is very vigorous, and produces long, strong stems for the support of numerous large exhibition blooms. The flower is always full double; petals are of medium length and very broad; those toward the center fold in very regularly, while gradually, toward the outer edge, the petals stand out more and more until those on the outside recede from the center, thus increasing the diameter of the flower, which compares very favorably in size with the largest-flowering kinds on our farm. Color similar to that of the Enchantress carnation; flowers late. Pkt., 15c; ⅛ oz., 50c; ¼ oz., $1.00; oz., $3.00.

FOR YOUR PROTECTION, MR. FLORIST,

ACCEPT "SUPERIORA" MAGNOLIA LEAVES ONLY

EXTRACTS FROM OUR ENDORSEMENTS

C. E. Critchell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "My customers insist on having the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolias, as they claim these are the best, and that they do not dry out or become moldy, and that every leaf can be used, and when this is taken into consideration, they are also the cheapest, besides being the best."

The McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., says: "Other Magnolia preparers have tried to induce us to stock up their goods 'just as good as Dux's' at a cheaper price, but we have in each instance told them frankly that it was a case of quality with us, and that we did not think their leaf would give the satisfaction yours did. We consider our Magnolia trade one of the best assets of our business and will not take a chance of losing it; in fact, our traveling men are often greeted as 'Magnolia Kings.'"

Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., writes: "Your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves are the best leaves that we have ever handled, and we have had no complaint from any of our customers who bought these leaves from us. We have stored these leaves under all conditions and found that they will not mould; it is a very satisfactory leaf indeed."

Jos. G. Neidinger Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "We have tried all the Magnolia Leaves that are offered, but find your leaves to be far superior to all others, etc., etc."

The Montreal Floral Exchange, Montreal, Canada, writes: "Our business has increased with you this year over double of what we purchased last season, which is a good recommendation in itself that the trade in Canada appreciates the durability and keeping qualities of your leaf. We appreciate the integrity, promptness and good business methods that have characterized all your dealings with us."

Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit, Mich., says: "We have been handling your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves for the past six years and find in all this time that we have had no complaints but many compliments on these goods., etc., etc."

Jos. E. Koppelman, of Providence, R. I., writes: "We feel that we can sell your leaves to people who have used them once without any trouble. They rather pay the difference than to buy other leaves elsewhere, etc., etc."

New England Florist Supply Co., of Boston, Mass., writes: "Have found 'Superiora' Magnolias the best leaves on the market. The sales on this leaf have been growing with the same rapidity as our business."

Wm. F. Kasting Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "Have always found that the 'Superiora' brand gives our customers entire satisfaction; in fact, they are the best leaves we have been able to obtain in the last few years."

B. E. and J. T. Cokely, of Scranton, Penn., write: "We have always considered your Magnolia Leaves to be a standard for quality, etc."

The Baltimore Wholesale Florist and Supply Co., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "We are confident that any other manufactured Magnolia Leaves could not compete with yours, as other brands have been offered us, which, after we tried them, we refused to carry in stock."

N. F. McCarthy and Co., of Boston, Mass., write: ". . . It is the opinion of McCarthy and Co. that your good firm prepares the best leaf that has yet been offered in the United States. It is well worth the difference between the prices offered by inferior manufacturers and your agents."

Henry M. Robinson and Co., of Boston, Mass., write: "We are pleased to state that the quality of your leaves is certainly the best ever manufactured in this country, and it is a pleasure to offer such stock for sale, etc."

Reed and Keller, of New York City, say: ". . . and we beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your last shipment of Magnolias, and we are indeed pleased to say that they are superior in every way. We further state that our experience in leaves from other dealers has been very unsatisfactory; colors vary and leaves mould quickly, etc."

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange, Cleveland, O., says: ". . . never as yet have we had a complaint on the 'Superiora' brand of Magnolia Leaves, nor a carton returned."

Smith and Young, of Indianapolis, Ind., write: "We will continue to use 'Superiora' exclusively as we consider it superior to any other leaf in the market. Since we handle 'Superiora' we have not had one single complaint, etc., etc."

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, writes: ". . . that we have been sending you orders for 'Superiora' brand Magnolia Leaves for several years should prove that we like your goods . . ."

Geo. H. Angermueller, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "It pleases me to say that I have worked up a splendid business on your 'Superiora' Magnolia Leaves, and I credit my success to the fact that the quality of your leaves has always been entirely satisfactory to my customers, etc."

"SUPERIORA" BRAND MAGNOLIA LEAVES ARE SOLD BY EVERY WHOLESALE FLORIST IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

NEW CARNATIONS

ROSALIA—Cerise pink, large three and one-half inch flower of a true cerise pink color. Form is perfect. Calyx strong, never bursting. Stem is at all times strong and wiry. The growth is far above the average when we consider vigor, health and early and free flowering qualities.
ROSALIA is a decided improvement on ROSETTE, having a better color and a better commercial habit.

OLD GOLD—We offer this as the earliest and most free flowering yellow carnation we have yet produced. A decided improvement over YELLOW PRINCE, being of a stronger growth, is perfectly clean and healthy, produces larger stems and more bloom. The color is a deep yellow with faint pink stripes.

The above two varieties, Price: $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

NEW LATE CHRYSANTHEMUM

FALL BEAUTY—A large Japanese reflex of a pleasing pink color with a shading of deep cream to the base of the petals and center of the flower. Has an extra strong stem, is especially fine for Thanksgiving, maturing November 25th to December 10th. The color, combined with its being so late and its extra keeping qualities, makes it of especial commercial value.

The White Co.,

Gentlemen:-

I take pleasure in informing you that the White three-quarter ton truck which I purchased from you last September is meeting with my entire satisfaction. I have used it constantly from morning until night and I find that it is of high economy and absolute dependability.

Previous to last fall I was always obliged to keep a third truck as an extra to be used as necessity dictated, as I could not with certainty depend upon my regular trucks being fit for service. My White has enabled me to dispense with this extra car.

As I consider the White without a peer, I gladly recommend it to anyone contemplating the purchase of a delivery truck.

Very truly yours,

C. Frauenfelder

2 Beautiful Novelty Roses

PRIMEROSE

It's like Sunburst and it's like Ophelia.

Better and more even color all winter than Sunburst and grows and produces better.

Deeper in color and stronger, darker foliage than Ophelia.

A money maker for the grower and a fine new color for the store man that wants novelties.

Come here and see it growing.

ROSALIE

(Baby Chatenay)

A beautiful small rose. Probably best described as junior in size, as it's somewhat larger than Brunner and the other small roses.

A long pointed bud of beautiful clear pink, similar to the parent —Abel Chatenay. The foliage and habit are also similar.

Profitable for the grower because so free, and a splendid corsage rose and make-up rose for the store man.

Come here and see it growing.

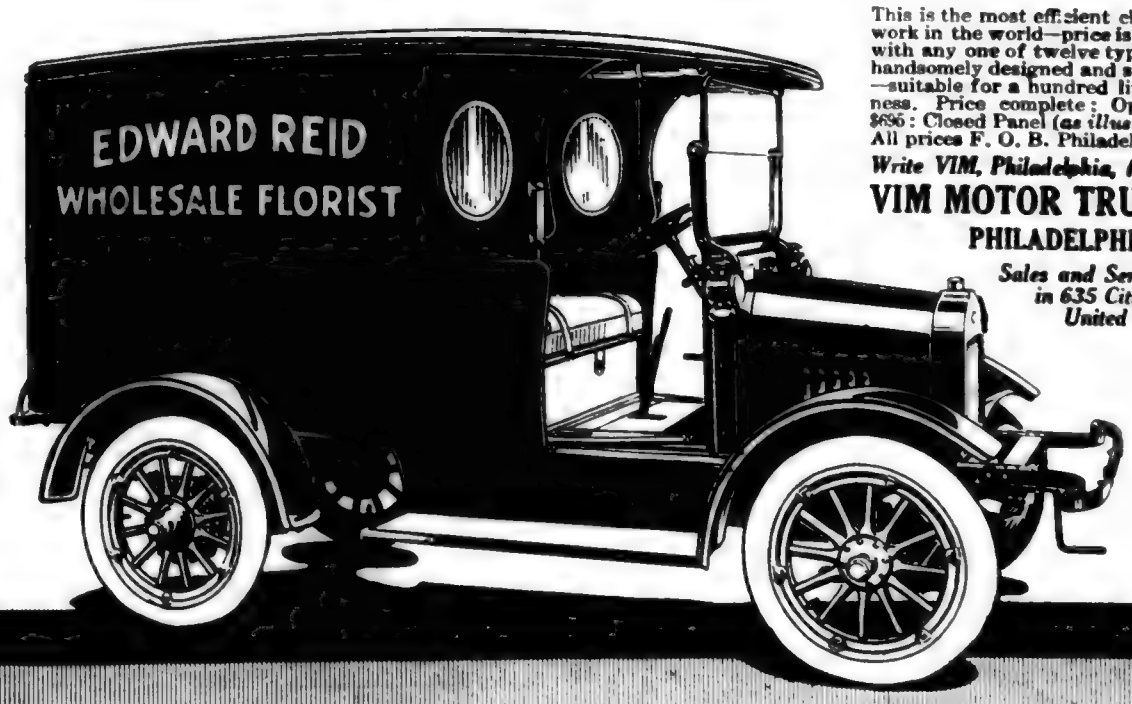
WANTED—BENCH PLANTS RUSSELL ROSES

Who are you trying to satisfy—the Auto Repairman or your customers?

EVERY florist knows that his business demands motor delivery — the usual order is the rush order, and quick delivery is an important factor in keeping old customers satisfied and increasing your business.



Delivery with a converted pleasure car is the first costly mistake that a good many florists have made—and their delivery service instead of being an asset to their business begins to support the automobile repairman.

The VIM Motor Truck Company of Philadelphia were the first delivery car manufacturers to go into the truck business in the right way. They investigated the delivery problem in every line of trade. The result of their investigation proved that the most economic delivery was based on the radius of 15 to 25 miles and handling of loads up to half a ton.

The VIM half-ton Delivery Car is built to meet these requirements, and today it is giving the most efficient and economical delivery to thousands of merchants all over the country. The VIM is a substantial truck built to stay on the job, delivering every working hour of the day and keep out of the repair shop.

The VIM Truck is your opportunity to put your delivery on a practical and economical basis — whether trucking a half-ton of potted plants for a reception, funeral, or wedding—or getting out rush orders for cut flowers.

Over 20,000 merchants have paid for their VIMS out of the savings the cars have effected. You can also buy your VIM on the same terms—the VIM Deferred Payment Plan.

This is the most efficient chassis for its work in the world—price is $645. Fitted with any one of twelve types of body—handsomely designed and strongly built—suitable for a hundred lines of business. Price complete: Open Express, $695: Closed Panel (as illustrated), $725. All prices F. O. B. Philadelphia.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

"A FRIEND IN NEED IS A FRIEND INDEED"

At Washington, D. C., a custom has grown up in the trade, of helping out the man who is in need, even if he be a competitor. The theory is that it tends to increase the consumption of flowers—the fact that a Washington florist takes orders with the backing of all the stock in the city.

DO you ever find yourself absolutely at the end of your rope, with an order from a good customer and positively no means of filling it? In such a case there is only one thing to do, which is to seek such relief as comes from a frank expression of one's feelings—but stop! How about the fellow around the corner? Perhaps he can help us out—only we haven't the "face" to ask him after the way we chuckled at his discomfiture that day his shipment failed to get in on time and he fell down on the wedding order he took away from us.

To the florist in one of the big cities, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia or Boston, it is unbelievable that there ever should come a time when flowers of some sort would not be obtainable, when it would be impossible to substitute and fill an order after a fashion, at the cost of no greater effort than a visit to the wholesale markets.

A Tight Place.

But many a florist in a small city and, indeed, in some of the important ones, knows from bitter experience what it means to be caught in a position where the florist's reputation suffers through a guiltless inability to come up to what is expected of him.

It is, perhaps, more likely to happen during the dark, cold days of January than at any other time.

Even in as large a market as that at Washington, D. C., there are times when the retailer is "up against it"—when he can not make a creditable showing on his own resources. These times are less frequent now than in years gone by, because wholesale houses and automobiles are more numerous now than they used to be—but still it happens. And this is what has come to pass:

The man who is stuck wastes no time in blasphemy or vain regrets; he simply runs around the corner to a competitor or resorts to the telephone until he finds, if not the precise stock he needs, something that will make it possible for him to fill the order in some sort of satisfactory fashion—to save his face and his customer, as it were.

Splitting the Difference.

The price to be paid for accommodation is thoroughly established—it is a custom, not a courtesy. If valley is 4 cents wholesale and $1 per dozen retail, then the accommodation price is 6 cents, halfway between.

It was W. F. Gude, of Gude Bros. Co., who first applied the practice of lending the helping hand and charging enough for it so the applicant could retain his self-respect and at the same time not feel that his necessities were taken advantage of, but now the custom is so well established that any florist can get any unsold flower in any other florist's icebox any time he needs it—and he knows just what it will cost him to get it, the accommodation price, with no obligation except to treat with equal fairness the next man who comes. He is in duty bound to make the same price under the same circumstances.

The accommodation custom, where all the stock in town practically is pooled and at the command of all who abide by the rules of gentlemanly conduct, makes it possible to increase the sales of flowers in cities where there are several florists; it gives both parties a profit on the sales in which "accommodation" figures and it keeps the customers coming.

The Magnolia Leaf Is an Ever-present Friend in the Hour of Need.

Can Order Be Filled?

But out in the country what is one to do when the train is late, when the messenger fails to put the box off, when the stock is frozen or asleep or when the call is at such short notice that there is no time to send to the city and nothing to cut in the local greenhouses?

The times of actual scarcity of stock now are few and far between. In the cut flower markets of the large cities there are only a few days in the year when it is difficult to find just the seasonable flowers one wants, and even when short roses for work are scarce and high in price there likely are plenty of carnations, Paper Whites or other substitutes. Even the traditional shortage of roses in January is more or less a thing of the past, as growers no longer crop all their houses for Christmas.

Consequently the florist who is in need usually is one who has been called on for quick service, who has such short notice that he has no time to obtain flowers from his usual source of supply. If he has neighbors to whom he can go in an emergency, all well and good; otherwise, is the order to be lost?

With such resourcefulness as a florist ordinarily possesses, or he would not be a florist, it usually is possible to meet almost any demand after a fashion. But the sudden demands nearly always are for funeral work—the wedding flowers almost always are ordered ahead, as are the flowers for other social uses. With such orders the florist in the country does not get into trouble unless the shipment misses a connection; it is with the order for the funeral to be held within a few hours that he gets his grief.

A Florists' Life Saver.

Perhaps it was not for such a perplexed florist that prepared magnolia leaves were invented, but certainly they have been a life saver in many an emergency—it is not of record that magnolias have been used in brides' bouquets, but they are as suitable for a wreath for presentation to the Fourth of July orator as they are useful for a funeral piece when flowers are scarce. With a case or two of magnolia leaves always in stock, and a bolt or two of ribbon, the florist absolutely is monarch of all he surveys; he can make a funeral design at a moment's notice. If flowers are available he may add as many as he will, but if he is a good salesman and a fair designer he can get away with it without the use of even one bloom.

Then, too, there is another merit of the magnolia: one can carry one or two or half a dozen wreaths made up, ready for a call, and in ten minutes he can add a cluster of green and roses and have the piece on its way. There is more than one florist who has a transient funeral trade who does just that.

Yes, accommodation is good, decidedly good, but for the country florist the ever present case of magnolia leaves is like the friend in need, a friend indeed.

FLOWERS FOR DEWEY

A NOTABLE DISPLAY.

Quality and Good Taste.

Again the florists of Washington have, at short notice, met an unusual demand in a way that does much credit to their resources and to their artistic and business ability. Washington is the scene of more funerals of national importance than is any other city in the country, more even than Chicago or New York, and the retailers there are not inexperienced in handling a rush of big work. This time it was for the funeral of Admiral Dewey, held January 20.

The showing of flowers was one of the largest in years, orders coming, not only from persons prominent in Washington life, but by telegraph from all over the United States. The designs averaged much above the usual in size and value; also, the majority were in excellent taste, the freak designs being not numerous.

Small & Sons in Charge.

A huge wreath, fourteen or fifteen feet in diameter, was the feature which stood out most prominently at the funeral. This was made by J. H. Small & Sons for the men of the Atlantic fleet. It was of leucothoe sprays gilded, with American Beauty roses cascading from the center, and beneath this were orchids, the whole wreath being entwined with ribbons. This was one of the most massive pieces ever seen in Washington and it stood out in bold relief at the tomb of the admiral.

J. H. Small & Sons had the bulk of the business incident to the funeral and, in addition, had charge of the floral pieces, which required seven large trucks for transportation to the cemetery. Among their own fifty to sixty pieces was a 12-foot cross furnished for the Navy Department, a wreath of orchids made up for Mrs. Dewey, two wreaths for the Senate and House of Representatives, a wreath of magnolia leaves with a spray of white heather across the center for Mrs. George Vanderbilt, and pieces for the Russian, Japanese and Chinese ambassadors, and many other people well known in public and social life.

Gudes Have Many Orders.

Gude Bros. Co. filled orders for nearly a score of wreaths and sprays. Among the handsomest and most elaborate of these was a wreath of magnolia leaves and yellow roses. A wreath of magnolia leaves, freesias and white sweet peas was excellent. A vase of American Beauty roses, a spray of Mock roses, a wreath of laurel and palm leaves and a wreath of orchids also were out of the ordinary.

George C. Shaffer had a number of large pieces, the most commented on of which was a reproduction of a six-pounder gun and gun mount. This piece was furnished for Columbia Lodge No. 174 I. A. of M., Naval Gun Factory Machinists. The barrel of the cannon was nearly five feet long and stood three feet in height. The barrel was made of white carnations, tulips and narcissi, with the projections that would hold the gun on the mount, at the center, outlined by clusters of yellow daisies. The gun mount was made of rubrum lilies and maidenhair.

Another piece which was effective, furnished by Mr. Shaffer for the Society of Manila Bay, was an anchor made of rubrum and calla lilies, asparagus and maidenhair. Cattleyas tipped the flukes and stock and aided in forming the ring at the top of the anchor.

In addition this store furnished a wreath for the District of Columbia Spanish War Veterans. A spray of Easter lilies was the offering of the office of the Navy Department of which Admiral Dewey had been the presiding officer. A spray of white roses and single violets was made for the Women's Section, Navy League of the United States.

Many Other Good Pieces.

The Washington Floral Co. furnished a 6-foot standing anchor made largely of rubrum lilies, violets and lily of the valley. A large number of cattleyas also were used and Ward carnations and Russell roses were employed effectively in the work done at this store.

Marche & Co. furnished for the Marine Corps a huge panel eight feet long and six feet wide. This panel was made by covering a board of those dimensions with silk and placing in the center a 5-foot anchor made of Double White Killarney roses. In each of the four corners was a large star formed with clusters of narcissi. At the top were drooping palm leaves. Marche & Co. also furnished two anchors, two standing wreaths and an urn which, with its pedestal, was five feet in height. The urn was made of white narcissi and tulips. In the urn was a cluster of Hadley roses, while the pedestal was covered with a cluster made up of six dozen Easter lilies. The whole was backed by an arrangement of palm leaves.

Z. D. Blackistone had quite a number of exceptionally fine pieces, chief among which was a 7-foot wreath made of orchids, American Beauty roses, violets and white carnations, furnished for the General Staff of the United States Army. A basket of Mock roses and Easter lilies was made up for the General Board of the Navy Department and there were a number of pieces for private individuals which bore the shipping card of the Blackistone store.

One piece from this establishment, made for Paymaster General of the Navy McGowan, represented the Admiral's flag. The body of the flag was made of violets. When it came time to put in the four stars which are on the flag, the man making up the design was sort of puzzled; neither carnations nor narcissi gave the desired appearance. At the suggestion of the Paymaster General himself Easter lilies were used after one petal was stripped from each. The center of each lily was filled with a carnation.

George H. Cooke, the Du Pont Flower Shop and others of the downtown establishments each received a share of the business. C. L. L.

THREESCORE TEN AND FIVE.

As Father Time clips off the years with his speedy scythe, semicentennial anniversary celebrations on the part of commercial establishments are bound to become more frequent, but as yet in this country seventy-fifth business birthdays are almost as rare as billionaires. This year, however, the diamond anniversary falls to the lot of Louis Menand, Florist, of Albany, N. Y., who conducts a business that was established during the less strenuous but healthier days when John Tyler occupied the White House and Abe Lincoln was yet to be heard from.

On this propitious occasion Louis Menand has sent his customers a pretty billet-doux, in which he thanks them for their patronage in the past and their good will in the future. In harmony with the event, the message is embellished at the top with a colored reproduction of forget-me-nots.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Savanna, Ill.—The Savanna Greenhouse Co. has made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors, C. M. Walter being the trustee. There are secured mortgage claims against the corporation amounting to $10,000, but the unsecured claims are not large and ninety per cent of them are held by local creditors. Trustee Walter will continue the business to see if it can be put on a paying basis, of which he has considerable confidence, but if this proves not to be the case the assets will be liquidated. The Savanna Greenhouse Co. was incorporated in 1912 to take over the business formerly conducted under the name of Lambert & Dunn and later by Joseph W. Dunn. The capital stock was $20,000 and the incorporators were J. W. Dunn, F. L. Bliss, W. W. Gillespie and Chesley M. Walter.

Rock Island, Ill.—A defective boiler flue is believed to have caused the blaze that destroyed the boiler shed and damaged one greenhouse of the H. H. Hensley range early on the morning of January 13. Mr. Hensley fired the boiler about midnight and again at 3 o'clock, but did not notice anything wrong at that time. One hour later, however, the fire was well under way and the smokestack had collapsed. The damage amounted to about $1,200 and is a total loss, as Mr. Hensley carried no insurance.

ally is one who has been called on for quick service, who has such short notice that he has no time to obtain flowers from his usual source of supply. If he has neighbors to whom he can go in an emergency, all well and good; otherwise, is the order to be lost?

With such resourcefulness as a florist ordinarily possesses, or he would not be a florist, it usually is possible to meet almost any demand after a fashion. But the sudden demands nearly always are for funeral work; the wedding flowers almost always are ordered ahead, as are the flowers for other social uses. With such orders the florist in the country does not get into trouble unless the shipment misses a connection; it is with the order for the funeral to be held within a few hours that he gets his grief.

A Florists' Life Saver.

Perhaps it was not for such a perplexity [illegible] that prepared magnolia leaves were invented, but certainly they have been a life saver in many an emergency. It's lucky for us that magnolias have been used in brides' bouquets, but they are as suitable for a wreath for presentation to the Fourth of July orator as they are useful for a funeral piece when flowers are scarce. With a case or two of magnolia leaves always in stock, and a bolt or two of ribbon, the florist absolutely is monarch of all he surveys; he can make a funeral design at a moment's notice. If flowers are available he may add as many as he will, but if he is a good salesman and a fair designer he can get away with it without the use of even one bloom.

Then, too, there is another merit of the magnolia: one can carry one or two or half a dozen wreaths made up, ready for a call, and in ten minutes he can add a cluster of green and roses and have the piece on its way. There is more than one florist who has a transient funeral trade who does just that.

Yes, accommodation is good, decidedly good, but to the country florist the ever present case of magnolia leaves is like the friend in need, a friend indeed.

FLOWERS FOR DEWEY

A NOTABLE DISPLAY.

Quality and Good Taste.

Again the florists of Washington have, of their latest [illegible] remarked in a way that does much credit to them [illegible] skill and [illegible]less ability. Washington is the scene of more funerals of national importance than is any other city in the country, more even than Chicago or New York, and the retailers there are not inexperienced in handling a rush of big work. This time it was for the funeral of Admiral Dewey, held January 20.

The showing of flowers was one of the largest in years, [illegible] not only from persons prominent in Washington life, but by telegraph from all over the United States. The designs averaged much above the usual in size and value; also, the majority were in excellent taste, the freak designs being not numerous.

Small & Sons in Charge.

A huge wreath, fourteen or fifteen feet in diameter, was the feature which stood out most prominently at the funeral. This was made by J. H. Small & Sons for the men of the Atlantic fleet. It was of leucothoe sprays gilded, with American Beauty roses cascading from the center, and beneath this were orchids, the whole wreath being entwined with ribbons. This was one of the most massive pieces ever seen in Washington and it stood out in bold relief at the tomb of the admiral.

J. H. Small & Sons had the bulk of the business incident to the funeral and in addition, had charge of the floral pieces, which required seven large trucks for transportation to the cemetery. Among their own fifty to sixty pieces was a 12-foot cross furnished for the Navy Department, a wreath of orchids made up for Mrs. Dewey, two wreaths for the Senate and House of Representatives, a wreath of magnolia leaves with a spray of white heather across the center for Mrs. George Vanderbilt, and pieces for the Russian, Japanese and Chinese ambassadors, and many other people well known in public and social life.

Gudes Have Many Orders.

Gude Bros. Co. filled orders for nearly a score of wreaths and sprays. Among the handsomest and most elaborate of these was a wreath of magnolia leaves and yellow roses. A wreath of magnolia leaves, freesias and white sweet peas was excellent. A vase of American Beauty roses, a spray of Mock roses, a wreath of laurel and palm leaves and a wreath of orchids also were out of the ordinary.

George C. Shaffer had a number of large pieces, the most commented on of which was a reproduction of a 5-inch pounder gun and gun mount. This piece was furnished for Columbia Lodge No. 174 I. A. of M., Naval Gun Factory Machinists. The barrel of the cannon was nearly five feet long and stood three feet in height. The barrel was made of white carnations, tulips and narcissi, with the projections that would hold the gun on the mount, at the center, outlined in clusters of yellow daisies. The gun mount was made of rubrum lilies and maidenhair.

Another piece which was effective, furnished by Mr. Shaffer for the Society of Manila Bay, was an anchor made of rubrum and calla lilies, asparagus and maidenhair. Cattleyas tipped the flukes and stock and aided in forming the ring at the top of the anchor.

In addition this store furnished a wreath for the District of Columbia Spanish War Veterans. A spray of Easter lilies was the offering of the office of the Navy Department of which Admiral Dewey had been the presiding officer. A spray of white roses and single violets was made for the Women's Section, Navy League of the United States.

Many Other Good Pieces.

The Washington Floral Co. furnished a 6-foot standing anchor made largely of rubrum lilies, violets and lily of the valley. A large number of cattleyas also were used and Ward carnations and Russell roses were employed effectively in the work done at this store.

Marche & Co. furnished for the Marine Corps a huge panel eight feet long and six feet wide. This panel was made by covering a board of those dimensions with silk and placing in the center a 5-foot anchor made of Double White Killarney roses. In each of the four corners was a large star formed with clusters of narcissi. At the top were drooping palm leaves. Marche & Co. also furnished two anchors, two standing wreaths and an urn which, with its pedestal, was five feet in height. The urn was made of white narcissi and tuberoses. In the urn was a cluster of Hadley roses while the pedestal was covered with a luster made up of six dozen Easter lilies. The whole was backed by an arrangement of palm leaves.

Z. D. Blackistone had quite a number of exceptionally fine pieces, chief among which was a 7 foot wreath made of orchids, American Beauty roses, violets and white carnations, furnished for the General Staff of the United States Army. A basket of Mock roses and Easter lilies was made up for the General Board of the Navy Department and there were a number of pieces for private individuals which bore the shipping card of the Blackistone store.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Berried Solanums.

In making your sowings of seeds, do not overlook the necessary Jerusalem cherries. Select one or two large berries on specially strong plants. They will contain all the seeds you will need, as practically every one is sure to germinate. Transplant these into flats. Later pot off singly and set the plants outdoors about the middle of May. Do not trouble to root cuttings; they are not worth the candle. It is true they will ripen fruit earlier than seedlings, but there is no special sale for them until Christmas and then seedling plants are well ripened in a cool greenhouse. Furthermore, plants grown from cuttings are too squatty, so why waste time with them?

Hardy Perennials from Seed.

Perhaps yon want to work up a large stock of hardy perennials and would like salable plants by fall. If so, get a good batch of seeds sown now. Later prick the seedlings off into other flats. They can go into coldframes in April and planting out can be done by May 1. This will give them a long season for growth. Such perennials as delphiniums, aquilegias, Shasta daisies, lupines, Lobelia cardinalis, lychnis, hardy primulas, galegas, campanulas other than C. Medium, poppies, pyrethrums and a number of others can be advantageously sown now.

Deciduous Shrubs for Forcing.

It is somewhat early to start forcing any deciduous shrubs for Easter, but there always is a call for nicely flowered plants earlier than that date, and if you can house small batches of such plants as lilacs, deutzias, Azalea mollis, Prunus triloba, Malus floribunda, laburnums, Viburnum Opulus, cratægus, wistarias, forsythias, or any others of this class of stock, it will come in well for store decoration, and you could, no doubt, dispose of some at the greenhouses. It is better not to force too hard, but give the plants good light, plenty of water, frequent springings and, as flowers open, move them to a cooler house.

Marguerites for Easter.

Roses, azaleas, genistas, lilies, hydrangeas, spiræas and bulbous plants may be said to be the leading plants sold at Easter each year, with smaller numbers of ericas, camellias, bougainvilleas, acacias and a few other plants. We do not see many marguerites except as cut flowers, yet what could be finer than a well shaped and well flowered marguerite plant? The yellow varieties do not make shapely ones, but the white ones are much better to handle. To have them in good bloom for Easter give the plants their last pinch now. If they are starved at the root, give them a shift, use a rich compost and grow them in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. If any leaf miners appear, spray the foliage with Black Leaf 40, or Nico-Fume juice properly diluted, and they will be speedily destroyed.

Roses for Easter.

All rambler and baby rambler roses intended for Easter should now be under glass. Do not give the plants too much warmth at first; 50 degrees will suffice; but once they are well started they will stand a few degrees more warmth. Hybrid perpetual roses, such as Brunner, Laing, Jacqueminot, Frau Karl Druschki and others, should be pruned back now and the plants started in a cool house. They will be on time if grown in a temperature of 52 to 54 degrees at night and will be of much better quality than if grown warmer.

Standard Heliotropes.

Have you ever grown any standard or tree heliotropes? If not, try a few. Your customers are sure to admire them. Salable plants cannot be produced, however, for this season's trade. Seedlings are more vigorous than cuttings. Select some of the strongest, pot them off singly, rub off any side shoots and remove any blooms as they appear. Keep the main stem securely staked and when it has grown from eighteen to thirty-six inches high, according to how tall you want your standards, pinch out the top. This will need several additional pinchings from time to time and before fall you will have nice little heads. Carry these over in a fairly warm greenhouse and do not let them starve at the root. They will make handsome plants for selling in the spring of 1918. These standards are fine for dotting in flower beds, as indeed are standard geraniums, lantanas and fuchsias.

Ten Weeks' Stocks.

Ten weeks' stocks are favorite Memorial day flowers. It cannot be said that they are particularly popular flowers on the market except at that time. Timing a crop of stocks for Memorial day is not easy. For instance, last year, owing to the prolonged winter and cold spring, many stocks flowered too late. The plants cannot be forced hard. It is, therefore, a good plan to start the seeds soon after the middle of January for a Memorial day crop. The large-flowered ten weeks' stocks are the best for forcing, and for bunching bright colors have first call; but almost all shades will sell well. Sow the seed in shallow flats. If you have any mice around, they are sure to locate them and will soon ruin every seed. Therefore take precautions to cover the flats with squares of glass to exclude pests.

Show Pelargoniums

Keep these showy plants in a cold house. They do not need over 45 degrees at night. The majority will need repotting now, or quite soon. Finish all pinchings now. After that allow all flower buds to come along. These pelargoniums are wonderfully showy subjects and the wonder is that more are not grown as pot plants. Objections raised against them are that they do not bloom all summer, that they will not stand outdoor culture as bedding plants and that aphis has a special fondness for them. We have many other plants to which similar objections might be raised, but they remain popular pot plants, as these will continue to be.

Newark, N. Y.—Mr. and Mrs. George C. Perkins last week issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Perkins, to E. B. Estabrook, of Germantown, Pa., which will be solemnized January 27. Miss Perkins' name is familiar to the floricultural world as the name of the well known climbing rose, which was raised and introduced some years ago by the Jackson & Perkins Co. and named in honor of Mr. Perkins' daughter.

SHRAPNEL

London, England.—The hall of the Royal Horticultural Society, known to every British gardener in America, has been taken over for the use of the Australian Imperial forces. The R. H. S. shows will be held in the drill hall of the London Scottish.

London, England.—The Carnation Society held its annual exhibition early in December. It was not so large as before the war, but fine stock was staged. It will be of interest in America to note that the best pink was Pink Sensation, the best scarlet Aviator, the best white White Perfection and the second best white White Wonder. The prize for the best five vases in five varieties was won by an exhibitor who showed Mrs. Ward, Triumph, White Enchantress, Enchantress Supreme and Beacon.

Worthing, England.—In a successful attempt to secure exemption from military service for a number of men employed under glass here, the national importance of the local glasshouse industry was shown. Evidence was introduced to prove that in the height of the season the quantity of produce handled at Worthing station averages from 2,500 to 3,000 packages each Monday, Wednesday and Friday, with a third to a fourth of that quantity on other days except Saturday, so that roughly it worked out at about 10,000 packages a week. In the cucumber season as many as fifteen tons and in a heavy season eighteen to twenty tons a day of this one item are dispatched by the Worthing fruit train to London. On the three main days this special train averages five van loads or large coaches.

TESTING CANNAS IN TENNESSEE.

[This is the last of four articles pertaining to canna tests conducted near Nashville, Tenn. The preceding three articles were published in The Review of November 9, December 7 and 28.]

The former articles in this series contained reports of the tests of white, variegated, pink and red cannas, with a few words of recommendation for one foliage canna, named Greenback. This article has reference chiefly to the yellow varieties, but closes with some remarks about the qualities that may be, or should be, expected in "the canna of the future."

We are a little nearer a good yellow canna than we were a few years ago. We have several good ones in the spotted kinds, so that we need not depend longer on the old standby, Florence Vaughan. We also have several good solid-colored yellows that do not fade so badly as the older varieties.

The Spotted Yellows.

Queen Helen, at its best, is a wonderfully good canna, as large as Italia, and does not fade badly. It would be a fine variety if it were only fixed in type, but it is not. Some of the foliage is bronze with green stripes. Some shoots are almost entirely bronze, but most of them are entirely green. Some of the blooms are scarlet and some are striped, but the majority are yellow, spotted red. The flowers do not stand the wind much better than Italia, but the color is a deeper yellow.

Elizabeth Hoss, in our opinion, is the best of the spotted yellow cannas yet produced. It is about as large as any canna except the best orchid-flowering sorts. In fact, growing only two rods from Queen Helen, the flowers were nearly as large and of much better substance, so that they lasted much longer.

Koenigin der Gelben, though a high-priced canna, was a decided disappointment to us. The flowers are no better in color than Richard Wallace, are not nearly so good in quality and fade badly, and the plants are not such good growers.

A Real Yellow.

Another season with Princeton has convinced us that it is the best yellow in sight. It is yellow—not sulphur, nor canary, nor even chrome, but yellow. It is a free bloomer and a good grower. It does not fade lighter, but in the cooler part of the season fades reddish in the center. Its price is all that will keep it from becoming popular at once.

Golden Gate is good; almost equal to Princeton, which it much resembles. Brilliant is better than Yellow Bird, and possibly better than Richard Wallace or Gustav Gumpper. It is good, but not the best.

Richard Wallace and Gustav Gumpper are doubtless the best two yellow cannas today for the general planter who will not pay the price of the better varieties, and still desires a good yellow bedder.

We agree with the introducer that Favorite is much superior to the older varieties of the Florence Vaughan type. We have not decided which we prefer —this or Elizabeth Hoss. In a large bed this canna did marvelously well this season.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

Cream and Orange Shades.

The Gem is certainly a good cream-colored canna, with light carmine spots. It is about the color of Flag of Truce at its yellowest. It does well where a canna of its color is needed.

Goethe is a dandy orange yellow, not too orange. A bed of this has the appearance of deep pumpkin yellow. It is a good one in every respect—something we cannot say of most of the recent foreign introductions.

Orange Bedder is the best orange canna to date, from every point of view, at least in our climate. It should become popular and be widely used.

Yellow Bird was to be as superior among the yellows as Firebird was supposed to be among the reds. It is just as decidedly a disappointment as Firebird, but in a different way. Its foliage is healthy enough, but the flower is little more than a sulphur. Even the size is nothing to speak of.

The Colors of Dawn.

Aurora is a new variety from L. H. Read, of Alabama, and is likely to be the best he has produced. It is one of the prettiest cannas we have ever seen. Its color is best described by its name; it is a play of bronze, pink, red and orange on a creamy yellow ground, the colors being in the throat and middle of the flower.

Jane Addams is one of the three or four best yellow cannas. It is really yellow, and is good in every way. It will be cheaper this coming season and should be widely planted. It is much better than the older yellows.

Juanita is one of the most beautiful cannas. The foliage is a golden bronze, while the freely produced flowers are a deep yellow with an orange tinge. It fades rather too reddish in the throat, but this does not spoil its beauty. We have a seedling from it that is identical except that it does not have this fault.

The Canna of the Future.

Breeders are working for cannas that will produce flowers with wider petals and at the same time strong enough not to break with the wind or fade with the sun. They will be self-cleaning; that is, the flower will break off and fall when it begins to fade. The best variety in this regard that we know of at present is Lafayette.

The bloom shoot will break into more than three trusses and this will prolong the blooming period of each shoot, adding much to the value of the plant for bedding. Flag of Truce always throws four good heads, and one or two of the other Wintzer varieties do the same. We have a seedling of Olympic that uniformly breaks into six heads, and a seedling of Flag of Truce that breaks into eight, one coming after another.

The flowers will have more than four petals if it is desired. Mr. Wintzer has had seedlings that were double, as shown in a photograph reproduced in The Review some time ago. This year we have a pure yellow seedling that usually has eight petals. The flower is not large and the habit is not what we desire, but we hope to breed something desirable from it, though it has been sterile thus far. But culture will tell, and the double canna is not far in the future. Floyd Bralliar.

GIGANTEUMS BEHIND TIME.

Some of our giganteum lilies for Easter are only an inch out of the ground. We have moved them into a temperature of 70 degrees. Do you think they are run warm enough to be in time for Easter? T. N.—S. D.

The lilies are rather late, but you may get them in if you give them 70 degrees until you find they are safe. Buds should show by the end of February, or they are late. C. W.

THE SOCIETY COLUMN

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The annual meeting and exhibition takes place at the Claypool hotel, next week Wednesday and Thursday, January 31 and February 1. As this is one of the great centers of carnation growing, and is accessible from Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis and other populous centers, and as good delegations are expected from the east, it looks like being a record meeting.

AMERICAN SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

A meeting of the executive committee was held at the Hotel Breslin, New York, January 18, there being present President Geo. W. Kerr, Wm. Gray, W. A. Sperling and J. Harrison Dick. A letter was read from Harry A. Bunyard, who has been secretary of the society from its inception, tendering his resignation. This was accepted with regret. Wm. Gray, Newport, R. I., was appointed secretary to carry on the work until the annual meeting in July. As this left a vacancy on the executive committee, J. H. Stafford, Bar Harbor, Me., was named. The schedule and bulletin were discussed, and these will be issued as one publication by March 1 at the latest.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The regular weekly meeting of the National Rose Festival committee was held in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, Philadelphia, January 18. The attendance was large and enthusiastic. A committee of five was appointed to take charge of a rose garden to cover 1,000 square feet of space in the center of the First Regiment armory hall at the coming rose festival. This garden will be known as the American Rose Society's Garden and is intended to be educational and beautiful. The committee consists of John P. Habermehl, chairman; Robert Kift, Ernest F. Zieger, William K. Harris, Robert A. Craig and the presidents of the Florists' Club and Rose Society ex-officio. Mark P. Mills made a ringing speech in support of the festival that sold 1,300 trade tickets right then and there. Phil.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Secretary C. W. Johnson, 2134 West One Hundred and Tenth street, Chicago, reports having received from trade firms and others interested donations of special prizes for nineteen classes, lettered A to S, for the annual exhibition of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be held at Cleveland, November 6 to 11.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

National Flower Show.

Under the direction of Chairman George Asmus, of the National Flower Show committee, the work of the Fifth National Flower Show is well advanced. Floor plans of the Coliseum are being prepared, showing the location of the trade exhibits, and will be sent out at an early date. The first preliminary plant schedule has been distributed and extra copies may be procured upon application to the secretary, 53 West Twenty-eighth street, New York. The schedule committee will be pleased to receive suggestions as to how and where this schedule may be improved, and such suggestions and recommendations will be acted upon by the schedule committee at their next meeting, and included in the final schedule, if approved.

The guarantee fund, which is to be $10,000, will soon be completed. Any member desiring to subscribe to this fund should do so at once.

The committee would also esteem donations of special prizes, the same to be offered under the names of the donors. Kindly, if possible, select the subject for your award from the preliminary schedules, thus relieving our obligations to the prize fund to that extent.

Special prizes have been received from the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Cal., for the best display of American-grown Azalea Indica. The plants must have been growing at least three years in the United States. The collection must consist of not less than six plants, five plants of each variety. The premiums are $50, $30 and $20.

John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I., offers for Calla Elliottiana, twenty-five plants in bloom, premiums of $20 and $12; for twelve plants in bloom, $10 and $6.

Hail Insurance.

Secretary J. G. Esler, of the Florists' Hail Association, calls my attention to a typographical error which appears in the "Suggestions to State Vice-Presidents," sent out from this office a few days ago. The paragraph reads that the Florists' Hail Association now underwrites risks on 4,000,000 square feet of glass. This should read 44,000,000 square feet of glass.

John Young, Sec'y.

Milwaukee, Wis.—As the dates of the carnation convention at Indianapolis conflict with that of the Milwaukee Florists' Club's meeting, President W. A. Kennedy has postponed the club meeting from February 1 to February 8. A number of club members expect to attend the Indianapolis convention.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

THE NEW BEGONIAS.

With reference to the article in The Review for January 11, entitled "Mrs. Heal Begonias for Holiday Sales," this type of begonia, the result of crossing B. socotrana and the tuberous varieties, is known all over Europe as "winter-flowering begonias."

The first of the winter-flowering begonias to receive recognition was the variety named John Heal, October 13, 1885, and it was not until ten years later that the variety Mrs. Heal was recognized. While a highly recommendable variety of the winter-flowering begonias, still there are, at the present time, so many varieties that are much more beautiful and much more desirable, that it would not at all do to call these begonias, as you did, Mrs. Heal begonias. To do so would tend to deceive the readers into believing that the two types are distinctly two different types. We are enclosing one of our pamphlets giving some further facts about winter-flowering begonias.

Since this country seems to have become wide-awake to the enormous possibilities of these new types of begonias, it is to be regretted that you used, in your otherwise interesting article, the misnomer. John Scheepers, Inc.

PRIMULA POISONING.

The inquiries and answers in The Review dealing with poisoning from Primula obconica plants and giving remedies for this trouble, have been of special interest to me, as I have had some experience along these lines. I have grown primulas for the last thirteen years, but have never been poisoned. One of my assistants, however, was poisoned and suffered severely on the hands, arms and neck. He made several calls on the doctor, but the medico's methods failed. At this time I recalled that I had had a severe case of poisoning from the common ivy, and that a complete cure had been effected by the use of sugar of lead, one teaspoonful to three quarts of water. I took this recipe to my employee, and in a few days the mixture stopped the irritation and stamped out the poison. Since then I have often used this sugar-of-lead solution after working with Primula obconica, and I think every greenhouse operator ought to keep some of it on hand. W. W. Walker.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

EARLY MUMS BETTER LATE?

Please advise me when is the best time to flower Golden Glow and Early Snow mums. That is, at what time do the blooms pay best? When should these two varieties be planted from 2½-inch pots and which of the buds should be taken, the crown or terminal bud? J. S.—Ill.

It is difficult to advise when to have Golden Glow and Early Snow mums in bloom to pay best—every man is more familiar with his own market and better able to work out his own salvation in that way. I will assume that J. S. desires to have plants in bloom by October 1. Golden Glow, of course, can be gotten into flower any time during the year, but I have always felt it does not pay to have yellow mums at that time in the fall when there are bewildering assortments of yellow outdoor flowers to select from.

After the plants are propagated in February and March and planted out on the bench when ready in May or the first week in June, it will then be a question of taking the proper bud. The question of crown and terminal buds does not enter into this case, because we are looking for early flowers, and therefore we have to take the crown bud. If the bud is taken as soon as possible after August 1, this will allow the bud eight or nine weeks to develop, which usually is the time required, and that will bring the crop in just the time the first frost has wiped out the outdoor flowers.

LATE PLANTED MUMS.

Please inform me if it is possible to get good blooms from chrysanthemum plants set in ground beds August 1. When should I buy the plants? Would June 1 be time enough? Which would be the better at that time, rooted cuttings or 2¼-inch plants? How large should the plants be to set August 1; that is, from pots of what size should they be taken?

For a beginner, what varieties are the best and easiest to grow? I want fifty per cent of them yellow and twenty-five per cent each of white and pink. I would like to have the plants bloom as early and as late as possible; that is, a succession of blooms in all varieties. What are the proper night and day temperatures? How often should liquid manure be applied, what kind is best for this purpose and what is the right proportion? Should the plants be trimmed to one or two buds? What is a fair price for the ones trimmed to two blooms? L. K. M.—Pa.

You can have fair success with plants set out in August, providing you procure good plants to set out at that time. They should be from 2¼-inch pots. I would not suggest buying rooted cuttings in June, as the weather at that time is hot and much loss ensues, particularly if the cuttings have to be shipped any distance. It would be a good deal better for you to order pot plants when you want them.

When stock is planted as late as August 1, the number of varieties suitable will be limited. For the fifty per cent yellow I would suggest Yellow Chadwick, Dolly Dimple, Mrs. Morgan; twenty-five per cent white, White Chadwick, William Turner, Thanksgiving Queen, Autocrat, Jeanne Nonin; twenty-five per cent pink, W. T. Brock, Pink Chadwick, Wells' Late Pink, Maud Dean.

You say you want plants that will bloom as early and as late as possible, to have a succession of blooms. It is impossible to have early flowers when planting is done as late as August 1. Those I have mentioned will bloom satisfactorily on late buds. Plants must have a season of growth of eight or nine weeks before the bud is set. If you are looking for early flowers you will have to get plants in June, of early sorts.

A night temperature of 40 to 50 degrees and a day temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, with ample ventilation, are proper. Plants set out as late as August 1 should be kept to one bloom, or flower, as otherwise they will not give good results.

Prices for the blooms will be gauged entirely by the market to which they are shipped and the quality of the stock. The prices will range from 5 to 30 cents per flower.

Liquid manure may be applied to the plants during the growing season, after the stock is well established in the soil. If applied before the stock is growing, it is liable to do more harm than good. If you have ever used liquid manure on previous crops, you will know the right proportion. It is always better to err on the side of weakness than strength when applying liquid fertilizers, since too strong applications will destroy the root action by killing the root hairs.

THE FALL BEAUTY MUM.

Major Bonnaffon was originated in the Dorner establishment at La Fayette, Ind., and it has put more money in growers' pockets than has any other one variety ever introduced. So when the Dorners state that they have developed another variety of exceptional commercial value the growers will not fail to watch its progress. Fall Beauty is pink, with a shading of cream at the base of the petals and in the center of the flower. It is of the reflexed type, as shown in the accompanying illustration. But the chief merit of the variety is expected to be found in its lateness and in its keeping qualities.

Washington, Pa.—Feeling the need of organized coöperation among themselves, the florists here are forming a club. Albert Marland and others are to prepare the by-laws, etc.

Macomb, Ill.—F. E. Bonham has moved his store into handsomer and larger quarters. The formal opening was well attended, the special display including a large variety of orchids.

NEBRASKANS' MEETING

GOOD WORK UNDER WAY.

Officers Elected.

At the meeting of the Nebraska State Florists' Society at Lincoln January 16 the following officers were elected:

President—C. H. Frey, of Lincoln.

Vice-president—G. M. Johnston, of Beatrice.

Secretary-treasurer — Lewis Henderson, of Omaha.

Directors—W. B. Yule, of Lincoln; J. R. Simanton, of Falls City; W. E. Davidson, of Holdrege.

The Business Session.

The attendance was the largest in the history of the organization, there being members of the trade present from four states.

Perhaps the most important feature of the meeting was the action which followed a discussion of credits and discounts. A committee consisting of Roy Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia.; J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia.; Frank X. Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo.; C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, Neb.; C. P. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., and J. J. Hess, of Omaha, was appointed to educate the florists of the states of Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska to the fact that twenty per cent discount is the limit of safety and good business in any case where an agent turns in orders.

J. J. Hess, C. H. Green and Lewis Henderson were appointed on a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of H. H. Frey, one of the pioneer florists of the state of Nebraska.

A resolution was adopted expressing the appreciation of the society for the fact that a Nebraskan, J. J. Hess, of Omaha, was regularly elected treasurer of the S. A. F. at the Houston convention, after having been appointed by the board of directors to fill an unexpired term.

C. H. Frey read an interesting paper on the history of Carnation Nebraska.

The Banquet.

The annual banquet was held in the evening, President Ed. Williams, of Grand Island, presiding. The following men responded to toasts: Charles Green, Fremont, State vice-president of the Society of American Florists, "Membership in the National Society;" J. J. Hess, Omaha, "American Florists;" Chas. Mueller, Wichita, Kan., "Production;" P. J. Foley, Chicago, "The Affiliated Society;" Roy Wilcox, Council Bluffs, "Cost of Production;" J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia., "The Floral Industry;" M. H. Levine, New York, "Coöperation."

P. J. Foley, who had been elected to honorary membership earlier in the day, offered a prize, to be awarded at the meeting next year, for the best vase of Carnation Nebraska, which variety was originated by C. H. Frey, of Lincoln, and which was used to decorate the banquet tables. Mr. Foley was a resident of Nebraska in the early eighties, having had a homestead in Frontier county.

The Exhibits.

An excellent display of cut flowers was staged in the Auditorium and the following prizes were awarded:

Vase of fifty roses—Lewis Henderson, Omaha, first; Simanton & Pence, Falls City, second.

Vase of fifty carnations—J. K. Hiltner, Lincoln, first; Simanton & Pence, second.

Display of 100 sweet peas—J. K. Hiltner, first; Simanton & Pence, second.

Display of cut flowers—Simanton & Pence, first; Lewis Henderson, second.

The day following the meeting was devoted to local hospitalities, the visitors inspecting the greenhouse establishments of Lincoln and receiving entertainment at each.

WANT A QUARANTINE.

According to C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, who spoke before the American Forestry Association at Washington January 19, imported tree and plant diseases destroy $500,000,000 worth of property every year and the insect pests eat up another $500,000,000.

This, in the opinion of some of those present, was the clinching argument for the enforcement of a quarantine against the importation of plants and seedlings, for a time at least. This question was argued for and against all through the sessions of the conference, but no agreement could be reached.

PROGNOSTICATION.

For the benefit of the florist pessimist I wish to state that this spring's retail business will prove to be the best in many seasons.

The general public has now entered on the more serious part of the winter, during which the rollicking merriment of debutante parties and holiday festivities are displaced by large formal dinner parties, exclusive balls and important social events. With all of this, many delightful affairs are being planned and the call for flowers between now and Lent will be the largest in the trade's experience. You can take it from me. Samuel Seligman.

HYACINTHS FOR EASTER.

What length of time do hyacinths require to flower and to be ready for sale as plants, say as Easter plants?

W. V. R.—Minn.

Hyacinths require six to eight weeks from potting time until they have progressed sufficiently to house. Allow at this season four weeks more until flowering. Later in the season a shorter time will flower them. Hyacinths placed in pots or flats in October or November can be held back until Easter if you have a good cold cellar. C. W.

SMILAX CULTURE.

When shall I sow smilax seeds to have good, strong 2-inch plants in July?

L. C. B.—Kan.

Fresh smilax seeds sown in March will give a good 2-inch pot plant in July, but it is preferable to sow seeds in February and to shift the young stock from 2 to 3-inch pots, thus providing stronger stock for planting.

WOULD STOP IMPORTS?

BOARD WANTS POWER.

Trade Makes United Protest.

An effort is being made by the Federal Horticultural Board to secure the enactment of an amendment to the Federal Horticultural Quarantine Law which will give the board unlimited powers. This measure is being opposed by William F. Gude, national representative of the S. A. F., who, with Curtis Nye Smith, attorney for the American Seed Trade Association and general manager of the American Association of Nurserymen; Wm. Pitkin, of Chase Bros.; Thomas Meehan, of Dreshertown, Pa., and James McHutchison, of New York, has been pulling strings here, there and everywhere to prevent such drastic action being taken.

"For the last week or ten days," said Mr. Gude, "there has been considerable agitation here as a result of the general scare which seems to have afflicted the nurserymen throughout the United States, as well as all of the importers of horticultural goods. The suggestion from the Federal Horticultural Board to the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, in the form of an amendment to give to the board what seems to the nurserymen and importers to be arbitrary powers to quarantine anything, anywhere and at any time, affords great alarm.

Mr. Gude Thinks Things Safe.

"The agricultural appropriation bill went through the House of Representatives without any such objectionable feature attached to it. The question is now pending before the Senate committee. I have had numerous conferences with the secretary of the committee and with Dr. Kellerman, of the Federal Horticultural Board, and the amendment at this writing, in my opinion, is in such shape that the nurserymen and importers need not fear anything more drastic than they have been facing since 1912, irrespective of how drastic this measure may seem."

The Proposed Amendment.

The amendment proposed is as follows, the parts in capital letters representing what the board is seeking to have enacted:

That section 8 of an Act entitled An Act to Regulate the Importation of Nursery Stock and Other Plants and Plant Products; to Enable the Secretary of Agriculture to Establish and Maintain Quarantine Districts for Plant Diseases and Insect Pests; to Permit and Regulate the Movement of Fruit, Plants and Vegetables therefrom, and for other purposes; Approved August 20, 1912, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

Sec. 8. That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to quarantine any State, Territory, or District of the United States or any portion thereof, when he shall determine THAT SUCH QUARANTINE IS NECESSARY TO PREVENT THE SPREAD OF a dangerous plant disease or insect infestation, new to or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States; and the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to give notice of the establishment of such quarantine to common carriers doing business in or through such quarantined area, and shall publish in such newspapers in the quarantined area as he shall select notice of the establishment of quarantine. That no person shall ship or offer for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier receive transportation or transport, nor shall any person carry or transport from any quarantined State or Territory or District of the United States, or from any quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or District, any class of nursery stock or any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products, OR ANY CLASS OF STONE OR QUARRY PRODUCTS, OR ANY ARTICLE OF ANY CHARACTER WHATSOEVER, CAPABLE OF CARRYING ANY DANGEROUS PLANT DISEASE OR INSECT INFESTATION, specified in the notice of quarantine except as hereinafter provided. That it shall be unlawful to move or allow to be moved any class of nursery stock or any other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products, OR ANY CLASS OF STONE OR QUARRY PRODUCTS, OR ANY OTHER ARTICLE OF ANY CHARACTER WHATSOEVER, CAPABLE OF CARRYING ANY DANGEROUS PLANT DISEASE OR INSECT INFESTATION, specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from any quarantined State or Territory or District of the United States, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or District, in manner or method or under conditions other than those prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture, WHEN THE PUBLIC INTERESTS WILL PERMIT, to make and promulgate rules and regulations which shall permit and govern the inspection, disinfection, certification, and method and manner of delivery and shipment of a class of nursery stock or of other class of plants, fruits, vegetables, roots, bulbs, seeds, or other plant products, OR ANY CLASS OF STONE OR QUARRY PRODUCTS, OR ANY ARTICLE OF ANY CHARACTER WHATSOEVER, CAPABLE OF CARRYING ANY DANGEROUS PLANT DISEASE OR INSECT INFESTATION, specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from a quarantined State or Territory or District of the United States, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or District; and the Secretary of Agriculture shall give notice of such rules and regulations as hereinbefore provided in this section for the notice of the establishment of quarantine: Provided, That before the Secretary of Agriculture shall promulgate his determination that it is necessary to quarantine any State, Territory, or District of the United States, or portion thereof, under the authority given in this section, he shall, after the notice to interested parties, give a public hearing under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe, at which hearing any interested party may appear and be heard, either in person or by attorney.

The Federal Horticultural Board, through its chairman, C. E. Marlatt, has started an agitation for the complete exclusion of seedling and other plant imports "at least for a time," as Mr. Marlatt told the American Forestry Association at its meeting last week.

A "MIXTURE" FOR FUMIGATING.

I have purchased about twelve pounds of a fumigant, the label on which reads as follows: "Cyanide-Chloride-Carbonate Mixture—Fused. Eleven and one-fifth to twelve per cent cyanogen. Equivalent to twenty-eight to thirty per cent potassium cyanide. Sodium cyanide, twenty-one to twenty-three per cent. Inert ingredients, seventy-seven to seventy-nine per cent."

I have been using for fumigating my greenhouse seven ounces of potassium cyanide, ninety-eight to ninety-nine per cent pure, and fourteen ounces of sulphuric acid, in twenty-eight ounces of water. Can you tell me what quantity of the cyanide-chloride-carbonate to use to obtain the same result as I get from the ninety-eight to ninety-nine per cent potassium cyanide, and can you state what proportions of sulphuric acid and water should be used?

C. J. S.—Pa.

From the analysis given, it would appear that the "cyanide-chloride-carbonate mixture" contains about twenty-seven per cent as much cyanogen as does the ninety-eight per cent potassium cyanide, and hence, to equal the latter, about three and one-half times as much should be used, or approximately twenty-four ounces where seven ounces of potassium cyanide are required. However, although it would appear that the cyanide-chloride-carbonate mixture is in the form of sodium cyanide, and that a portion of the inert ingredients is in the form of sodium chloride and sodium carbonate, the exact amounts of each of these and other ingredients are not stated, and whether they are such as will be likely to injure plants, or to lessen the effect of the cyanide, cannot be determined without a chemical analysis or an actual trial.

So far as sodium cyanide is concerned, it may be substituted for potassium cyanide and used in the same quantities and with the same amounts of water and sulphuric acid. The present price of potash makes the cost of cyanide of potassium almost prohibitive, if, in fact, it can be obtained at all, and recourse must be had to sodium cyanide.

I would suggest that a sample of the mixture be sent for analysis to the State Agricultural College, State College, Pa. The chemists there will be able to say whether it is safe to use it for fumigating greenhouses, and they can state the amount that will be required.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

H. G. BRAMM.

FROM the pungent odor of a tannery to the pleasant fragrance of a greenhouse—that was the transition made by H. G. Bramm, president of the Bristol Floral Co., at Bristol, Tenn., and vice-president of the Tennessee State Florists' Association for Sullivan county. Though he may not have found every phase of the florists' trade as agreeable as the perfume of the flowers, he permitted none of the objectionable features to hinder his success. He was born at Port Jervis, N. Y., in 1866. For some years he was a tanner in New York city, but removed to Bristol in 1893, continuing in the leather trade until 1908, when he purchased the establishment of the D. S. Simpson Floral Co., with its 10,000 feet of glass. He thus founded the Bristol Floral Co., which now has 30,000 feet of glass in town and 10,000 feet on a 10-acre suburban tract. Last and best, he has a wife and two daughters.

The Federal Horticultural Board, through its chairman, C. E. Marlatt, has started an agitation for the complete exclusion of seedling and other plant imports "at least for a time," as Mr. Marlatt told the American Forestry Association at its meeting last week.

A "MIXTURE" FOR FUMIGATING.

I have purchased about twelve pounds of a fumigant, the label on which reads as follows: "Cyanide-Chloride Carbonate Mixture—Fused. Eleven and one-fifth to twelve per cent cyanogen. Equivalent to twenty-eight to thirty per cent potassium cyanide. Sodium cyanide, twenty-one to twenty-three per cent. Inert ingredients, seventy seven to seventy nine per cent."

I have been using for fumigating my greenhouse seven ounces of potassium cyanide, ninety-eight to ninety-nine per cent pure, and fourteen ounces of sulphuric acid, in twenty-eight ounces of water. Can you tell me what quantity of the cyanide-chloride carbonate to use to obtain the same result as I get from the ninety-eight to ninety-nine per cent potassium cyanide, and can you state what proportions of sulphuric acid and water should be used?

C. J. S. Pa.

From the analysis given, it would appear that the "cyanide-chloride-carbonate mixture" contains about twenty-seven per cent as much cyanogen as does the ninety-eight per cent potassium cyanide, and hence, to equal the latter, about three and one-half times as much should be used, or approximately twenty-four ounces where seven ounces of potassium cyanide are required. However, although it would appear that the cyanide-chloride-carbonate mixture is in the form of sodium cyanide, and that a portion of the inert ingredients is in the form of sodium chloride and sodium carbonate, the exact amounts of each of these and other ingredients are not stated, and whether they are such as will be likely to injure plants, or to lessen the effect of the cyanide, cannot be determined without a chemical analysis or an actual trial.

So far as sodium cyanide is concerned it may be substituted for potassium cyanide and used in the same manner and with the same amount of water and sulphuric acid. The lower price of potash makes the use of potassium cyanide most [illegible] in fact, it can be [illegible] because most [illegible]

I would suggest that a sample of the mixture be sent to analyst at the State Agricultural College, State College, Pa. The chemists there will be able to say whether it is safe to use it for fumigating greenhouses, and can state the amount [illegible]

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

H. G. BRAMM.

FROM the pungent odor of a tannery to the pleasant fragrance of a greenhouse that was the transition made by H. G. Bramm, president of the Bristol Floral Co., at Bristol, Tenn., and vice president of the Tennessee State Florists' Association for Sullivan county. Though he may not have found every phase of the florists' trade as agreeable as the perfume of the flowers, he permitted none of the objectionable features to hinder his success. He was born at Port Jervis, N. Y., in 1866. For some years he was a tanner in New York city, but removed to Bristol in 1893, continuing in the leather trade until 1908, when he purchased the establishment of the D. S. Simpson Floral Co., with its 10,000 feet of glass. He thus founded the Bristol Floral Co., which now has 30,000 feet of glass in town and 10,000 feet on a 10-acre suburban tract. Last and best, he has a wife and two daughters.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

SOUTHERN EASTER LILIES.

At this time of the year growers begin to get anxious about whether or not their lilies will be on time. The problem is a little different each year, as the date of Easter changes and the climatic conditions are so varied. No hard and fast rule can be laid down to have the lilies on time, simply because it is impossible here to carry out any such rule. If the weather were only fairly steady, either way, it would make the growers' problem much simpler. Then, in the more southern sections a grower must have the blooms timed almost to a day, because in the extreme heat they do not keep long—a day or so at most.

My experience has been that it is much better to push the plants at the finish than to try to hold them back. I prefer not to see signs of a bud until five weeks before Easter. At such a stage a temperature of 65 degrees at night will develop the flowers on time and in most places this temperature is easier to maintain than a lower one. The plants should be from four to ten inches high now. The main requirements now are a steady temperature, say 60 degrees at night, with a rise of 10 degrees during the day, and a care not to water too heavily. It is hard to explain how a plant should appear at a given time to be in at Easter, but a little experience will give the grower an instinctive knowledge when and how hard to push or retard a plant.

The giganteum lilies will stand a night temperature of 75 degrees, if needed, but avoid dropping the temperature during the growing period more than 5 degrees at a time. Unless the buds are almost ready to open, a drop of 10 degrees is liable to check them. L.

CARNATIONS IN THE SOUTH.

The last batch of carnation cuttings should be about ready to lift from the sand. To secure good-sized plants with which to plant the houses, it is necessary to start making cuttings early and to plant them out in the field early. There are several different ways of handling the young stock, but I have never found one more satisfactory than to first pot them in 2¼-inch pots. After they are well established and once topped back, they may be planted out in a bed containing two to two and one-half inches of soil, rather closely. This is much quicker than shifting them into 3-inch pots, and will give better results in less space. At planting-out time they have filled practically the whole bench and only need dividing.

The old plants in the beds will need more attention, as the days are lengthening appreciably. At this time of the year we make it a rule to give a top-dressing of sheep manure every two or three weeks, lightly working the surface soil at the same time. Some attention also must be paid to keeping the plants growing in their proper spaces. If the plants are allowed to wander at their own sweet will, the spaces between the rows get filled with foliage, preventing the air and sunlight from circulating properly and inviting a fungous attack. During the damp weather we are liable to have about this time of the year, it is a good rule to use a little sulphur paint on a portion of the heating pipes once or twice a week. This checks the fungus completely.

The carnation mite seems to have been more troublesome this year than previously. If the spraying with some of the tobacco extracts is persisted in, the mite will finally be cleaned out. Thrips, also, are soon liable to begin their operations. I have never found anything so good to use to suppress them as Hammond's Thrip Juice, diluted forty to one, as directed. I always pick rather closely before using and apply the mixture on a cloudy day, leaving it on the plants at least twenty-four hours before syringing off. Great attention should be given to the temperature of the houses, avoiding extremes both ways. An even night temperature helps to keep down the percentage of splits, although my observation leads me to conclude that splitting is much of a constitutional defect. L.

BULBS BEFORE FORCING.

We have our tulips in a cellar, where they made little, if any, root growth before freezing up. They are covered with two or three feet of straw. We thought of putting some manure with heat over them, to thaw them and start the root growth before bringing them into a house of 40 degrees. Would this be a good plan or would it be better to bring them directly into the house of 40 degrees? T. N.—S. D.

Perhaps your bulbs need more water. Many growers seem to think that if they soak them when placed in flats or pans they will need no more until they are wanted for forcing. This lack of water causes many failures in bulb culture. I would remove the straw and soak the soil well, then cover them with a layer of sand or fine coal ashes and leave them alone a while longer. Do not on any consideration place any warm manure over them; it would do more harm than good and would not help the root action at all. I would give the tulips a temperature of 50 degrees when housed, and if you want stems it will be necessary to darken them in a case in order to draw them up. C. W.

DUTCH BULBS

BULB GROWING IN HOLLAND.

[This is an extract from a paper read at a recent meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club, in Cleveland, O., by John Van Leeuwen, of Sassenheim, Holland. Mr. Van Leeuwen described the methods used in Holland in the culture of three groups of bulbous plants. This section of his paper has reference only to hyacinths. Two more installments, treating respectively of tulips and narcissi, will be published in future issues of The Review.]

The original of all the hyacinths with which you are familiar is Hyacinthus orientalis, and this bulb is a native of Greece and Asia Minor.

The first hyacinths were all single-flowered, but toward the end of the seventeenth century double varieties commenced to appear and until recently were most esteemed.

Some Wonderful Prices.

In western Europe hyacinths were in cultivation prior to 1597, in which year they were mentioned by Gerard. In a book which Rea wrote in 1665 several single and double varieties were alluded to, as being then in English gardens, while Justice in 1754 described more than fifty single and nearly 100 double varieties as a selection of the best from the catalogues of five then celebrated Dutch growers. Some of them surely brought high enough prices. He mentions a single white, called La Reine des Femmes, of which the list price was $20 for each bulb. Three doubles, called Conqueror, Gloria Mundi and King Solomon, at that time could not be bought under $40, $200 and $250, respectively. This shows how much double varieties were in vogue in those days. Since then, however, all this has changed. Of all the countries where we now sell bulbs, France is the only one where double hyacinths find a ready market, and of course there is no place left where we could make such prices as those mentioned. Besides that, where then hyacinths were grown by only a few, and in extremely small quantities, the number of growers now is unlimited and acres upon acres of the bulbs are grown.

The Sandbanks of Holland.

The question often is asked: "Why are these bulbs grown in Holland only?" The answer is that centuries ago, long before Holland had any history, the North sea flowed over a large part of what is now the western section of the country. Historians say that during a great storm the sea itself threw up that long row of sandhills, called dunes, which are now the natural protection against the sea. Just behind these dunes a few long, narrow sandbanks were left, and it is on these old sandbanks that the hyacinths are grown. The soil is almost pure sand, without any dust, and only mixed with the chalk of decayed shells. This peculiar condition is the reason that hyacinths can be grown successfully in Holland only.

Propagation of Hyacinths.

Holland growers have two methods of propagating hyacinths. One way is to cut the entire bottom out of the bulb. The wound thus made is covered with dry lime, to prevent rotting. The bulbs are then placed on shelves, bottom upward. These shelves are put in a specially constructed bulb house, in which the temperature is run high, and which is entirely dark. Soon the young bulbs commence to grow in this wound and they continue to appear until they number from fifty to over 100. In the late fall these mother bulbs, with the small ones attached, are planted. When they are dug the next year, the old bulb has disappeared, leaving nothing but a lot of dry skin, and the young ones have made some growth. They are still small, however; in fact, not much larger than an ordinary pea.

The other method is to give the bulb three cuts across the bottom. This method does not produce so many bulbs, but it has the advantage that the young bulbs are larger and require less time to attain their full growth. The first method, however, produces nicer, cleaner bulbs.

Preparing the Ground.

Preparatory to growing hyacinths in Holland, in the early spring we level the ground carefully. If the surface were left uneven, the chances are that in the lower spots the bulbs would drown. The surface of our land is only two feet above the water, and we therefore must be extremely careful. When the land is leveled, we put on the manure. This is pure cow manure, and we apply about ten bushels to the square rod. Our rod is only twelve feet square. This manure is spread out evenly and then dug under with a spade. As soon as this land is ready a preparatory crop is grown on it, usually potatoes, but sometimes peas. The potatoes are ripe early; in fact, they are all dug and marketed before August 1. They are generally used for foreign markets. Hollanders do not like them, because, on account of the heavy manuring, they are so greasy that they can be fried in a pan without adding either butter or lard.

Soon after this first crop is taken off the land it is again manured, this time with about two bushels of cow manure per rod. This again is dug under with a spade, and the land is now ready for the bulbs.

Planting and Protection.

Beds are made about three feet wide and never longer than about forty feet. Our gardens are laid out so that they are about eighty-five feet wide, and a path runs through the middle and along the sides. The top soil of the first bed is taken out, and wheeled to the other end of the field. The surface which is thus exposed in the first bed is raked until exactly even, and the bulbs are planted in straight cross-rows. When the entire bed is planted, the top soil from the second bed is used to fill up the first bed, and so the process goes on until the entire field is planted.

When the planting is completed, the top of the beds is raked evenly and then covered with about eight inches of reeds, as protection from frost.

As soon as the winter is over, part of this covering is taken off, so as to accustom the new foliage to the cold temperature. Soon, however, the last of the winter covering is removed, but is followed by an extremely light application of cow manure, which covers the ground and the foliage, so as to protect from night frosts and the blowing of the sand, in case high winds should occur.

Diseases of Hyacinths.

Then begins the work of keeping the fields free from weeds and hunting for diseased bulbs.

There are two diseases of hyacinths which the grower dreads. One of these, called "the yellow disease," rots the bulb the first year, and is hard to fight. Another, known as "the old disease," is slower but is mighty sure. If one bulb which has contracted "the old disease" stays in the ground, it affects ten or twelve and sometimes more bulbs around it.

We are glad to say, however, that of late years neither of these diseases has bothered us much, and we think we have conquered both of them.

Harvesting and Sorting.

When the foliage is so nearly dead that it can be raked off, the time for digging has arrived. This is done by hand. The stocks of different ages have been planted separately and are now kept apart. The stock which is not old enough to sell is put up in the bulb houses, and left there undisturbed until planting time comes again. The stock which is ready for sale is dug and placed in the paths which are between the beds, and is there roughly assorted in the various sizes. This stock is then taken to the bulb house and left on shelves to dry. As soon as the bulbs are sufficiently dry they are taken off and carefully sorted in the different sizes. Each bulb is cleaned and freed from the old roots by means of a stiff brush. This work is done by women and girls, and, by the way, is the only work for which women are employed in the growing of bulbs in Holland.

Packing and Shipping.

Each bulb is also examined to determine whether any diseased ones are still left after the examination they underwent while they were growing. The shelves are cleaned and the dirt that was brought in when the bulbs were harvested is carefully removed, so that the bulbs may have a clean place, where they are put up until the packing season opens. They are then counted into the paper bags, put in the cases and sent abroad.

Before planting the younger stock again in the fall, every bulb is examined. A certain number of each variety are examined by cutting a small part of the top away, and when any diseased bulbs are found the entire stock of this variety is examined in that way. If no diseased bulbs are found, the only additional precaution is to hunt for dead or deformed bulbs, and these are thrown away.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Pittsburgh's weather of late has been everything from spring showers to zero blasts, but business nevertheless has continued good. Stock of some kinds, especially roses, remains scarce, but bulbous stock and carnations are in adequate supply. Orchids have become plentiful.

Various Notes.

The wholesale houses clean up stock nicely each day, with the roses usually sold before they arrive.

The Horticultural Society of Western Pennsylvania hereafter will hold its meetings in the east branch of the Carnegie library.

At the January 16 meeting of the Horticultural Society of Western Pennsylvania, the following were elected officers for 1917: President, David Fraser; vice-president, William Allen; secretary and treasurer, Ernest R. On motion it was decided to offer a prize at the Pittsburgh June show, for a collection of twenty-five roses.

OBITUARY

Swain Nelson.

Swain Nelson, original designer of Lincoln park, Chicago, and one of the leading nurserymen of the west, died January 18, at the residence of his son, Seymour G. Nelson, in Glen View, at the age of 89 years.

Mr. Nelson removed to Chicago in 1855 and engaged in the landscape gardening profession, having previously prepared himself for it in Sweden, his native land. His designs for Lincoln park were accepted in 1865 and during the following fifteen years he directed the work of developing that park as well as several others in Chicago, including Humboldt, Garfield, Douglas and Union parks. He laid out Graceland cemetery and also the Waller estate, now known as Buena park.

He was a lifelong member and devout believer in the Church of the New Jerusalem and helped form the Chicago society of the church. He moved from Chicago to Glen View in 1893 and was an active member of the firm he founded up to the time of his death. The business now is known as Swain Nelson & Sons Co., having been turned into a corporation. He is survived by two sons, Seymour G. and Alvin E. Nelson, and three daughters, Mrs. A. L. Gyllenhall and Miss Emelia and Miss Adah Nelson.

Funeral services were held January 21 and were largely attended. There were many flowers.

C. W. Schwomeyer.

C. W. Schwomeyer, of Schwomeyer & Son, Indianapolis, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home January 11. Mr. Schwomeyer's earlier life was spent in the dry goods business and later in the real estate business. For the last few years, in connection with his son, he had been in the florists' business on Shelby street, Indianapolis. Mr. Schwomeyer was born in Indianapolis and was 60 years old. Six children survive him. He was highly respected.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held January 17, President Bradley presiding. As this was carnation night, a fine display of cut blooms of the best varieties and recent introductions was made. First prize for three varieties, six of each, was awarded to A. Weeks; second prize was won by J. Straitheway. The thanks of the society were tendered to other exhibitors.

A fine seedling specimen of adiantum was shown by George McIntosh, who received a certificate of merit. An interesting discussion on the cultivation of carnations followed the judging and many valuable points were brought out.

For the February meeting the exhibits will be flowering plants in pots, not to exceed seven inches, and twelve cut roses, six each of two varieties other than American Beauty.

E. S. Dodd, of Irvington, and John W. Dowling, of Tarrytown, were elected to membership.

John Grant, Cor. Sec'y.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

John Madden, of Highland, N. Y., specializes in Adiantum hybridum, which yields an average annual return of $7 per thousand fronds. A house 26x162, one of several, produced a crop of 250,000 fronds in the year. Manager H. Bate says that by alternating the plantings a satisfactory rotation of crops is obtained.

"Consider the lilies—how we grow them," observed J. E. Sambrook, of Sambrook Bros., Troy, N. Y. "We never had finer results from cold storage bulbs." In pointing to a vase of extra quality blooms, he said they were grown since six inches high among Richmond roses. This did not appear to affect the roses in the least, judging by the vigorous growth of foliage and profusion of bloom. Next season the firm will grow the lilies among carnations, as the crop comes off quickly and much space is saved. The store business was good, with fine stock in sight, both from the home range and Berlin, N. Y.

Henry Schrade, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., was putting in a No. 46 Kroeschell boiler, intending to add another house. He remarked that "one essential during these strenuous days is good nights' sleep."

Henry Bensel, of Ballston Spa, N. Y., reported a shortage in princess pine, which usually is easily obtained from the woods nearby.

Apropos of advertising, Julius Eger furnished an auto carload of palms for the Schenectady festival chorus, held in the Opera House recently. No charge was made, nor any promise of reciprocity. In return he received free notice in the program, a good write-up in the two locals, an order for a basket and two bouquets for the prima donna, a decoration admired by 3,000 auditors. True, the weather was favorable, and little risk was run, "but even so," remarked Mr. Eger, "we have to take some chances nowadays."

John Strong, of Oneonta, N. Y., stated that, while business is good, he felt afraid to speculate during the holidays and had to refuse orders beyond his own limited production. I had a chat with Mr. Strong, Sr., who owns up to three years short of a century, and said that, save for a touch of rheumatism, he felt bully. What a philosopher!

B. Ackley, of Oneonta, rebuilt his entire range last summer and sees the benefit in a fine lot of stock, particularly carnations.

C. W. Peck, also of Oneonta, remarked that, while many had their measure of trouble, he has no kick coming—business and stock are all one can wish.

The Suskana Greenhouses, of Binghamton, N. Y., intend launching out as growers of rooted cuttings and plants for the trade. Quoting Manager T. W. Hannah: "We have now an up-to-date range of 30,000 feet of glass, with the option of a fine stretch of land suitable to the business, and success seems assured. Yes, we shall patronize the advertising columns of The Review, for I have big faith in it as a medium to reach the trade.''

John B. Rudy, of Elmira, is preparing for a record-breaking spring business, basing his plans upon present returns.

F. L. Jennings, of Elmira, has found the sale of plants a valuable adjunct to the seed business. Sales more than doubled during the season, reported Manager A. C. Young.

KNOXVILLIANS BANQUET.

The Knoxville Florists' Society held its third annual banquet January 16, at the Seilaz cafe. The banquet hall was decorated with palms and cut flowers, while on each table was placed a handsome vase of cut flowers. The officers' table was particularly attractive, having as a centerpiece a bowl of orchids and yellow narcissi. Dr. Sam Boyd acted as toastmaster and quite a number of members responded to toasts. The festivities were started promptly at 7 o'clock and were over at 9 o'clock, at which time the party adjourned to one of the local theaters. There were about forty members present and everyone seemed to enjoy the occasion. R. E. Mapes.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply of stock has shortened and everything is cleaning up on sight. Prices are higher as a result. The shipping business is excellent.

Roses are in short supply and many more could be used were they available. All carnations prove good property and Easter lilies are selling well. Callas and rubrum lilies are offered. Daffodils and tulips have been added to the list of small bulbous stock. Orchids, single violets and valley are in fair supply. Sweet peas now are abundant and generally sell readily. Other offerings include snapdragons, primroses and forget-me-nots. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

William Brueggeman, of the P. J. Olinger & Co. force, is the proud father of a boy, who arrived January 21. Congratulations, Will.

C. E. Critchell has had a good market for his Easter lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett plan to spend the month of February and part of March with Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ohmer at West Palm Beach, Fla. Last week Mr. Gillett took an order for 2,000 wire hanging baskets.

The William Murphy Co. has been having an exceptionally strong shipping business during the last fortnight.

Wm. Taylor has been sending some fine Trumpet major jonquils and Murillo tulips to L. H. Kyrk.

Robert Shoch, representing the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week. C. H. H.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

January business has been good, some of the florists reporting it in excess of last January's. Prices are keeping up well. Jonquils are coming in better and tulips are more plentiful. There is a good supply of stevias. White lilacs, which recently appeared, are now arriving in large quantities. Carnations are plentiful, but the price remains steady for the better quality of bloom. Sweet peas are abundant now.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club was held January 18 in the Krueger auditorium. Reports for the work of the year were made and officers were elected as follows: President, John L. Pfeuffer, of Irvington; vice-president, James J. McLaughlin, of Newark; secretary, Edward Jacobi, Jr., of Irvington; treasurer, Edward Persson, of Irvington. William G. Miller, of Newark, was elected a trustee in place of Henry A. Strobell.

Plans were made for a ladies' night, which will be held at the Krueger auditorium on the evening of February 22. There will be a special program for the occasion, a banquet, a social hour and dancing. The committee having in charge the arrangements for ladies' night consists of James J. McLaughlin, chairman; Richard Youill, E. Brunner, Henry Hornecker, Charles Maillard and John L. Pfeuffer.

Various Notes.

McLaughlin & Murphy report that business has done well for the new year so far, business conditions generally being satisfactory.

Charles J. Connolly reports January business this year a little ahead of that of the same month last year.

J. W. Blakely, of Elizabeth, states that 1916 was the best year he has had since he went into the florists' business about forty years ago. January of this year has been the best January he ever had. R. B. M.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

The scarcity of stock seems to have become a habit here. Roses are in heavy demand, but the supply is much too small. Carnations now are coming into their own; they are of best quality. The cut of spring flowers sells well, especially jonquils. Plants also are on the short side, and there is but a small variety to choose from. Azaleas and cyclamens are in liveliest demand at present.

Business picked up during the latter part of the week, funeral work starting the improvement, and as roses were scarce it gave retailers an opportunity to push the sales of orchids and violets, these being in abundance.

Various Notes.

John Breitmeyer's Sons had the decorations for the Bachelors' ball last week. The effect was Japanese.

In addition to a large batch of funeral work and decorations, there were several important weddings last week that kept the retailers on the jump.

The Detroit-Cleveland Clash.

The Detroit bowlers last week lost three of the four games they played with the Cleveland Florists' Club bowlers. The scores were:

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1917: President, Robert C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; vice-president, A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.
Thirty-third annual convention, New York, N. Y., August 21 to 24, 1917.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

WHATEVER may have been the fact at Christmas, there is no scarcity of cyclamens now.

IT is well to keep one's self informed as to what one's competitor is doing—frequently it will serve as an admonition as to what not to do.

No recent wedding has attracted so much attention as that of McCutcheon, the cartoonist. The photographs show his bride carried a bouquet of freesias.

THE increased prices asked on advance orders for Dutch bulbs are making many buyers hold off, and to this extent should prove of advantage to resident dealers.

DON'T be afraid to charge what your stock and your service are worth—it rather raises you in popular esteem if you can charge more than your nearest competitor.

THAT this is an unusually good season for the disseminators of novelties is the opinion of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, but its two new roses will not be ready until 1918!

WHEN this week's issue of THE REVIEW is "put to bed," as the printers phrase it, the editor is going out to buy himself a drink, a big, black cigar, or something else with which to properly celebrate the occasion—for it will be an even 1,000 times the event has occurred.

NEXT Monday, January 29, is McKinley day, the day some of the trade tried to have observed by the wearing of carnations. But it was a flash in the pan. In only a few cities was it possible to establish a special demand for flowers that day.

EAST OR WEST.

The press room order since January 4 has been to print 12,500 copies of each issue of The Review, but it looks as though the edition soon will have to be increased again, as new subscriptions still are coming in steadily. But with 12,500 copies going out regularly, there can not be many florists, east or west, who do not read The Review, with this result:

Please cancel my ad of mum stock plants, as I already am all sold out.—Gove the Florist, Burlington, Vt., January 17, 1917.

Please discontinue my ad of pansies, as my entire stock is sold and orders still are coming in. —George F. Ode, January 15, 1917.

MUST RAISE THE PRICES.

"While florists generally seem well satisfied with the volume of business done so far this season," says H. E. Humiston, special representative of the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., "there seems to be considerable complaint in some localities that profits have been materially decreased, due to the great increase in cost of production with no general corresponding increase in the prices of flowers. The large increase in the cost of fuel and the scarcity of competent labor have undoubtedly imposed a heavy burden on many of our florists."

There is only one course open to the trade—it is necessary to obtain better prices to compensate for the unavoidable addition to costs. In dealing with the public small increases in price will be accepted absolutely without comment, so accustomed to them have shoppers become.

COLLECTIONS.

In the wholesale end of the trade there has been complaint for some months that collections were slower than they should be on so good a volume of business. Comparatively speaking, they have not been better in January. The retailers excuse themselves with the statement that they can not get their money from their own customers.

This trade is notoriously slack, from one end to the other, in the matter of credits and collections. There are individual exceptions, but as a whole florists give too much credit and pay too little attention to collections and the discharge of their own liabilities. The other day a wholesale dealer in plants, etc., told The Review he had on his books a sum equal to his sales for the entire year of 1916! It is due to lack of system, that and the fear of losing a customer.

In the years when there were large profits in the business lax methods were bad enough, but now, with a steadily narrowing margin of profit, they are positively dangerous. The florist who does not collect his accounts and keep his bills paid up is risking his business life on a continuance of general prosperity.

THE LABOR SITUATION.

The question of labor will be one of the most difficult the florists' trade will have to meet this spring.

Under normal conditions it is bad enough during the weeks of the spring bedding season, and during the time that replanting is going on under glass, but this year the situation will be far worse than usual. Skilled help never is plentiful—there never are enough men who really know their way around among plants—and it is less abundant now than ever before, for the simple reason that wages in other occupations have advanced faster than in the florists' business. The conditions in the east, where hundreds of thousands of unskilled men have been drawn into munition-making, are worse than in the central states, where miscellaneous manufacturing and agriculture make work for every able-bodied man at better than the usual wages. The florist who does a big spring bedding business will find greater difficulty than ever in handling the trade of 1917. It should be a big season and a profitable one, but it will be a season during which the greenhouse owner will earn all he gets out of it, for the reason that he will have to do so large a part of the work himself because of his inability to secure competent assistance.

THE ENERGETIC GERMANS.

The following recently appeared in one of the British trade papers:

It is interesting to note that American gardening papers still carry advertisements of German nurserymen, who are evidently plucky and energetic enough still to peg away and take all risks in regard to transport of their goods across the seas. There doesn't appear to be that increase in the number of British advertisements in these papers one might have expected, and although I know a few firms who are doing an increasing amount of export trade, there appear to be many who have the goods to sell, but not the enterprise and initiative to hunt up the orders. The American trade is worth making big efforts to secure, but we must not expect it to come to us unbidden, and to wait until the war is over will be to lose the golden opportunity.

No doubt the present does offer an unusual opportunity for developing American trade, for nearly all kinds of stock are wanted here. It is equally true that the Briton, with his proverbial reluctance to change his methods, is not taking advantage of the opportunity, but as for the ads of the German firms, it is a fair guess that they were ordered before the war, to run until stopped, and the American publishers are keeping them going although they have received no pay for perhaps two years and mail communication is known to be cut off by the British blockade.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The feature of the market is the low level of prices as compared to what the trade is accustomed to in the latter part of January. Carnations are not bringing much more than half, on the average, what they did at this time last year, the average price of roses is considerably lower than last January, because of insufficient demand to clean up the longer grades at their full value, and even sweet peas, which are increasingly popular and hurting the sale of violets, are not making the prices they did last January. On the other hand, however, taking the market as a whole, the supply of stock is much larger than it was last year in January. There has not even been the usual scarcity of roses this year, as the Christmas crops went off; the supply shortened up, of course, but orders have been filled in far better shape than in any recent January. With carnations, where the difference in price is most pronounced, the cut is so much greater with some growers that their money is the same as in the excellent January of last year. One wholesaler estimates there are twice as many sweet peas now on the market as at this date last year. This ability to fill orders with comparative ease at lower prices creates a situation not unsatisfactory to growers, not displeasing to wholesalers and highly advantageous to the retailers.

The middle of last week was the dullest of the year to date. Although the week had started well, January 17 found business slow, with stock dragging heavily. The end of the week, however, the market took a brace and stock was cleared out well. The new week started well January 22, with good business obtaining. Cold weather has further shortened stock and prices are holding up or advancing.

The wholesaler who is receiving his supply of American Beauties may well consider himself fortunate, for stock is extremely short and finds a ready market at quotation prices. Good Russells are also scarce and clean up quickly. Considerable of the stock which reaches the market is of inferior quality. The supply of white roses is also less and no difficulty is found in clearing either these or other varieties. Short lengths clear most easily. The supply of carnations is at least ample to meet all needs, but stock is moving well and better prices are generally obtaining.

The arrival of freesias has eased the situation of valley, the former being a frequent substitute for valley in corsages, brides' bouquets, etc. Easter lilies continue to arrive in limited quantities and move at an even rate. Orchids took a considerable slump last week, but cleaned up at the end and are now selling well. Good violets are not plentiful, and find a ready market. Sweet peas arrive in good supply. The quality continues excellent and stock sells well at fair prices. The quality of Paper Whites is good and stock is selling fairly well. Tulips also arrive in fair supply and are disposed of easily. Mignonette and calendulas are in short supply and the quality of the stock on the whole is poor. A little stevia still is arriving, but it is not in request and no longer is an important item. The supply of jonquils is small and what stock arrives clears readily. Snapdragons are unusually late this year, but are now beginning to arrive in larger quantity. They find a ready sale. Greens of all kinds are in sufficient supply.

Mr. Frese Gets Promotion.

O. W. Frese was last week appointed general manager of the downtown store and offices of Poehlmann Bros. Co. Mr. Frese has been with the company for almost fifteen years, serving in the capacity of credit man and manager of the country sales department, and has for many years borne a good portion of the heavy responsibilities incident to the management of the company's Chicago sales department.

"P. & D. at Cost."

There is agitation for a return to the old rule of charging for the boxes used in shipping cut flowers out of this market. Years ago, when competition was less keen than some wholesalers think it is now, the box always was charged for at a standard price, but now there is no uniformity in the charges. As the prices of boxes, paper and twine are much higher than ever before, it is thought not one house is charging enough to cover the cost, especially on small orders, and there is talk of concerted action to plug this leak.

Various Notes.

The last week has been the worst of the season in the matter of coal supply, especially for those who depend on wagon delivery from neighboring yards. The smaller places, which burn two or three cars of fuel a year and do their own teaming, if forced into the market last week paid nearly three times a normal price for low grade coal.

Mrs. Wm. H. Green, of Louisville, Ky., has opened a store at 1534 Jarvis avenue, Birchwood. The store will be known as Green's Floral Shop. This location formerly was occupied by the Birchwood Flower Shop. Mrs. Green has been connected with the trade nearly all her life and is familiar with every end. The store will be attractive, the windows artistically decorated. Goldfish and canaries are used for decorative effect as well as being offered for sale.

A shipment of 225,000 Manetti stocks reached Poehlmann Bros. Co. last week. According to Adolph Poehlmann, shipments were not up to par the beginning of the season, but he says the situation has taken a favorable turn and indications now are that there will be a sufficient supply.

Those who have seen Fred Breitmeyer's Rose-pink Ophelia think well of it. C. L. Washburn has ordered 1,000 plants through the American Bulb Co., Mr. Breitmeyer's local agent.

In rebenching two of his plant houses, Frank Oechslin is using concrete posts and pecky cypress.

A. Henderson and family paid a visit to their friends, H. N. Bruns and family, January 21. They had a pleasant time and stayed longer than they had intended. When they came out the new Oldsmobile Six was not at the curb. But Mr. Henderson holds a perfectly good insurance policy less than a week old and the combined efforts of the insurance people and the police resulted in the recovery of the car within twenty-four hours.

George Asmus is celebrating today. He was born January 25, 1872.

Peter Pearson was first in with Rainbow freesia, cutting a marketable quantity January 20.

January 26 a party of seven leave for California: E. C. Amling, Mrs. Amling, Harold Amling, Miss Gertrude Amling, H. N. Bruns, Mrs. Bruns and Miss Madeline Bruns. The Amling family have taken a cottage at Orange for two months. The Bruns family may return sooner.

January business is better than usual, according to C. A. Samuelson, who paid one of his infrequent visits to the market January 22.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, thinks highly of the new Superb carnation produced by the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., and is strongly advising his growers to plant it.

A bright window of hyacinths and tulips attracts attention at John Pehrson's store at 1134 Bryn Mawr avenue.

Among the most enthusiastic boosters of Champ Weiland is Emil Reichling, foreman of Peter Reinberg's houses. He plans to plant 35,000 for the next year. He will also plant four more houses of Ophelia than last year and increase on Russell.

January 18, F. A. Parkmire, 1429 Morse avenue, had a leak in his boiler that for a time caused him much anxiety.

Edward H. Goldenstein, of Langhout & Co., Sassenheim, Holland, January 19 returned to Chicago, where the firm has temporary offices, after a trip through the northwest, which, he says, exceeded his expectations.

After having worked north from Kansas City and homeward through Iowa, since Christmas, Robert Newcomb, of the American Bulb Co., says the trade in that section is having the biggest season ever, but that there are several bad features, chief of which are the excessive cost of coal and the great losses due to inadequate express service at Christmas.

J. Ziska & Sons are getting ready to move into their new second-floor quarters at 169 South Wabash avenue. They expect to be open for business there by the beginning of next week.

Philip Schupp, of J. A. Budlong, thinks favorably of the Lady Alice Stanley rose, which his firm has been growing the last year. Although it is a little shy in the winter, he says it is a good summer rose and amply makes up at that season.

The coal famine took a lick at the florists' trade from a different angle January 21, when, because of the coal teamsters' strike, coal transportation was threatened with paralyzation and the Atlas block, the home of many of the wholesalers, was kept without heat.

John Kruchten, of the John Kruchten Co., is much pleased with the company's shipping business, which, he says, shows a material increase over last year.

Shipments of California flowers, which were more or less irregular at the beginning of the year, are now coming in with greater regularity, according to S. Kitisawa, of the South California Flower Market, Inc. Among other novelties received are orange blossoms and acacia.

The arrival of a car of canna roots January 20 is reported by Henderson & Co. The shipment traveled in fine shape.

The wind storm which swept over Chicago and vicinity January 21 did considerable damage to the houses of Peter Reinberg, and the men were obliged to work almost all night to cover the holes made in the glass. Thirty boxes of glass were needed to replace broken panes.

At Kennicott Bros. Co., certain days each week are coming to be regarded as $1,000 days, for on those days, according to H. B. Kennicott, sales regularly aggregate that figure. Mr. Kennicott is greatly pleased with his shipping trade, shipments last week going to fourteen different states.

While Otto Goerisch, of the A. L. Randall Co., was being married to Miss Maeta Martins January 20, burglars broke into his new home at 1923 Argyle avenue and gathered quite a harvest of the young couple's property.

A visitor at the greenhouses of W. H. Amling January 20 found the president of the Chicago Florists' Club so far improved in health that he was out and picking freesias.

Peter Reinberg, president of the county board, was the speaker at Tuesday's weekly luncheon of the Cook county board at the Hotel Sherman, his subject being: "Forest Preserves—Good Roads."

"The ads in The Review are paying specially well this month," said A. Henderson to the compiler of this column, "but then," he added, for fear he had inspired chestiness, "they always do at this time of year."

That there will be a marked increase in the private glass in this locality is the report of the J. C. Moninger Co., the latest order for a conservatory and service building coming from M. Born, of Glencoe. R. E. Kurowski comments on the number of inquiries received as to the effect on deliveries this season caused by the recent fire, although it has been plainly stated that it was only a warehouse that burned and that millwork was not interrupted at all. To him the interest in the matter indicates an unusual demand for early deliveries.

Visitors.

L. H. Archias, of the Archias Floral Co., Sedalia, Mo., and Alois Frey, Crown Point, Ind., were visitors January 24.

The Market.

Business during the month of January is holding up well and, with the exception of the few days of rush previous to Christmas, the volume of January business compares favorably with that done during the month of December. Funeral work has been especially heavy during the last two weeks, and the demand for flowers for social functions continues to be greater than ever. The sale of blooming plants is reported to be unusually heavy. The weather has been extremely wintry, with the mercury hovering around the zero mark, and there have been several dark days. These conditions have necessarily shortened the production of stock, particularly roses and carnations. Roses in the longer-stemmed grades are hard to obtain. American Beauties are scarce and Russell and Killarney are in exceedingly short supply. The quality is good. Easter lilies are also scarce; callas are in good supply. Dutch hyacinths and daffodils made their appearance during the last week, both potted and cut stock. Sweet peas are plentiful, and there are some excellent flowers in the Spencer varieties. Narcissi, primroses, forget-me-nots and snapdragon meet with a good demand.

Cattleyas and vandas are in excellent demand for corsages. Violets are meeting with a fine call this season. Valley is scarce and high-priced. Azaleas that were intended for the holiday business are coming into bloom now, and they find a ready sale. Tulips, daffodils, primulas, Dutch hyacinths, yellow and white narcissi and primroses constitute the variety in potted plants.

Various Notes.

The Doswell Floral Co. had an elaborate decoration last week. Shawyer and Ophelia roses, Spencer sweet peas and snapdragons were used in the table

A. J. Lanternier & Sons are having a heavy sale of blooming plants. They are showing the first Dutch hyacinths of the season. Funeral work has been unusually heavy.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey had charge of the elaborate decorations for the annual banquet of the S. F. Bowser Co. Covers were laid for 500 persons, and the decorations were baskets of Shawyer roses and Enchantress carnations. MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The Market.

Having recovered from the customary after-holiday period of calm, business now is good enough to please the majority of this town's florists. Social activities on a larger scale and a higher rate of mortality have combined to augment the demand for cut flowers.

The bitterly cold weather that has prevailed has heaped hardships on both shippers and consignees; delayed shipments from out-of-town points have caused buyers unpleasant embarrassments.

Splendid roses now occupy the center of the stage, with Ophelia leading the offerings at $8 per hundred, although Richmond and Killarney are favorites at the same price. These roses are in large demand, and the call for Cecile Brunner and other roses of like type is urgent. Of the baby roses the yellows are quoted at $2, while the better-liked pinks command $3. Improved carnations have been worth $3 per hundred.

Orchids remain among the things scarce, and the prices continue steep. Sweet peas are receiving more attention by reason of their increased numbers, but they as yet are not abundant. Their larger blooms, longer stems, and here and there varieties of special fragrance, attract buyers at $1 per hundred. Corsage work has created a demand for hyacinths, which bring $3 cut. Narcissi

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business last week continued brisk, with prices good. The supply of flowers in all lines shortened, but this was offset in part by some exceptionally good blooming plants, including azaleas, begonias, cyclamens and lilacs. Purity freesia is coming in more plentifully and is selling at $6 per hundred. Narcissus also is plentiful, but meets with a slow sale and is largely being used to fill in at times when the shortage of other flowers is most marked.

There were few roses last week that could be had for less than $8 per hundred, and from that price they ranged to $20 for average stock, the best grades bringing $25 and $30 per hundred. American Beauty roses at from $3 to $6 per dozen cleaned up nicely each day, and there were enough of these to meet the demand as it arose. Carnations are moving freely at $5 and $6 per hundred, but there are hardly enough to fill all orders. White carnations and those of the lighter pink shades sell best, although with the scarcity of stock the deeper colors move almost as well.

Some exceptionally fine Harrisii lilies, grown locally, are to be had. These sell quickly at up to $15 per hundred. The cloudy weather last week had a marked ill effect on the sweet pea crop. Some of the flowers are good and sell readily, but on the whole the better stock is scarce. The prices range from $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Gardenias are still selling well at $3 per hundred. There are not enough of these at the present time to supply the demand. Single violets sell readily at $1.50 per hundred and the colder days of the week served to accentuate the demand. In Washington this is essentially a cold weather flower, and the minute the sun shines and the weather moderates the sale of violets diminishes. Snapdragons are scarce and bring $3 per dozen. Valley continues to hang fire at $6 per hundred. The people decline to pay so high a price for these.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Queer weather continued during the week ending January 24 without materially affecting the supply of flowers. I do not mean by this that the supply is large; far from it, but it is increasing slowly. Carnations are the mainstay of the market now. While not yet in full crop, they are in splendid form and prove most satisfactory. The deep rich pinks command the highest market prices; then come the whites and light pinks. Scarlets bring up the rear. Not but that scarlets are good, they are uncommonly good, but when they are wanted they are wanted dreadfully, and when they are not wanted it is hard to push them on the buyers.

The quantities of fine lilacs and fine freesias are features of the market this week. The first are as good, the second a little better, than those seen here in the past. They come at an opportune time and are steadily making ground. Daffodils are becoming more plentiful; they have receded a point. There are a few more tulips, white now as well as yellow, but they do not amount to much.

The miscellaneous flowers, those that are not grown in quantities but are highly prized by true flower lovers, are now nearing their best. They form a larger proportion of the sum total products at this time than at almost any other season. Pansies, primroses, daisies, mignonette and so forth are all highly prized and highly priced for such modest flowers.

The rose crop is at low ebb, with indications that it will improve. Beauties, however, are not likely to become plentiful for a while. Cattleyas are coming in again. Valley is unusually plentiful, owing to lack of support; in other words, there is not so much coming in, but there is even less going out. Sweet peas are in active demand. Violets are rather dull. Snapdragons with long stems are eagerly sought. Easter lilies are plentiful, callas fewer, so both sell. Greens are in demand. Taking it all in all, the market is satisfactory.

The Situation in Valley.

There is considerable anxiety felt among those interested in the future of the cut flower market as to the fate of lily of the valley. When the European war curtailed the supply of valley pips from Hamburg and increased the cost of getting them here, it was felt that something must be done. Valley could not be profitably grown and sold at the old price under the new conditions. So the price of valley steadily advanced from $4 to $5, $6 and $8 per hundred. This advance seems justified under the circumstances. During the last three weeks, however, the buyers all over the country appear to have decided that valley is too expensive a flower to push at this price. The demand has practically disappeared and the price has fallen. If the retailers feel that lilies of the valley are of sufficient importance to them to be kept on the flower list, they will be obliged to support valley at these lower prices, or it will not be grown under such discouraging conditions.

An Open Letter to Mr. Therkildson.

To Mr. W. F. Therkildson,
Chairman Essay Committee,
Florists' Club of Philadelphia.

Dear Sir:

Two members of the Florists' Club, who are in good standing, request that you set a time, as soon as possible, for an open discussion of the express delivery question. They believe that improved transportation facilities are absolutely necessary to the development of the florists' business. They believe that it is the duty of the Florists' Club to promote the welfare of its members as well as to afford them a place of meeting and amusement. They therefore ask that you give this important matter a hearing at the earliest regular meeting.

A Shop Window.

It has been suggested that some of The Review readers might enjoy looking into one shop window each week at this season of the year. Not with the idea that that window is a model or anything more than just a good, plain, live window, but simply because it never does any harm to know what the other fellow is doing. So, for the present week, the window of M. J. Callahan was selected.

The window seems like a sort of oasis in the desert of Market street industry, and as such it brings joy to the passer-by. Cabbages, shoes and whatnot with their prices are forgotten when you look into that window. The lesson that was taught today was that cut flowers were rather expensive, save possibly daffodils and Paper Whites, and were not to be courted by the unwary, but that plants, attractively displayed, were just the thing for a gift. Of course this lesson was for the primary student, not for the kindergarten. What he saw was this: On the left of the window were some specimen Pteris Wilsoni ferns in tumbler baskets, most petite and charming; then a basket of a trifle larger size containing a single specimen Primula obconica. There were several of these in various shades. Some of the baskets were openwork. The center of the window was filled with a group of perfect cyclamens, in medium sizes. The white hued flowers on long stems were in the center, a purple behind them, a lavender nearby. On the right of the window was a small, shapely Pandanus Veitchii plant in a pretty basket. Nearby were a couple of rose-pink azaleas; in the background a large Dracæna fragrans and one of the Boston sisters, in form most symmetrical. The vases of daffodils and Paper Whites, acting as a reminder of the flowers that bloom in the spring, completed the attractive window.

Various Notes.

Paul Richester has returned to the city.

Frank R. Hastings has established a reputation for taste.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving Purity freesias that have startled the experts. They are a little better than anything seen in the market before.

Charles W. Jennings, of Olney, has abandoned the road to become a P. M. shipper.

Charles W. Moorby has put a car on the street.

Buyer—"Where are your roses?" Seller—"Nobody wants them." That is market humor right up to date.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Market.

Business has showed an improvement. Large funerals have kept the stores busy; social functions have helped the demand for cut flowers.

A severe drop in the temperature last week gave the greenhousemen considerable trouble in keeping the houses warm. The growers are also having trouble in getting coal. This is an outrage, because the coal is mined in this city and vicinity. At the mines the dealers are only allowed four tons each per day.

Roses have been off crop of late and the prices continue high, Russell, Ophelia and Prima Donna proving the best sellers. Carnations are arriving more plentifully and are selling at $1 and $1.50 per dozen. Sweet peas are of excellent quality and find a ready call. Narcissi, yellow and white, are in good demand. Valley and Easter lilies are in limited supply. Snapdragons, freesias, tulips, daffodils and bouvardias are making their appearance in the stores. Greens continue plentiful.

Various Notes.

A grand assortment of potted plants and baskets of cut flowers was the attraction in the windows of A. L. Besancon & Co. last week. The company reports business good. Miss Besancon is able to be around again, after a week's illness.

T. B. McClintock, chairman of the committee on trade exhibits for the spring show, reports that much space has already been reserved.

B. E. and J. T. Cokely report that they have received a number of large orders for wax designs. J. T. Cokely has returned from a trip through New York state with a book full of orders.

Muir & Co. report a satisfactory business since the holidays. They have had a continual rush of funeral work.

F. J. M.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Business in the wholesale cut flower market last week was quiet, but the shipments of roses were light, this fact holding the market barely steady, with prices for everything else on the down grade. The supply of first quality American Beauties is limited and top prices on these have been easily maintained. The same may be said of Hadley. The shorter grades of roses are far below the demand and they sell much more rapidly than the long-stemmed grades. For some time there have been no roses sold under 3 cents and few under 5 cents.

Carnations have fallen; $4 per hundred was the extreme top last week. In large lots $3 was accepted and any of the medium varieties, not up to the standard, were offered at $20 per thousand. Lily of the valley holds steadily at the quotations of the last few weeks, the top being $4 to $5 per hundred. Longiflorums and, in fact, all the lilies, have held their prices well ever since Christmas. Callas still are limited in supply and $2 per dozen for the best is easily obtainable.

There is an abundance of gardenias, even the best not selling at over $20 per hundred. A great many low-grade flowers are sent in and have to be sold as low as 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen. There is an oversupply of orchids. Prices declined rapidly toward the end of last week and January 20 the best cattleyas were selling at 40 cents each, cypripediums at $1.50 per dozen and oncidiums at 8 to 12 cents per flower.

The violet market is unsteady and prices have fallen; 50 cents per hundred now seems to be top for the best doubles. The selected singles are most in favor. Purple sweet peas, arranged in bunches like the violets, are popular and salable. The best Spencers are bringing $2 per hundred and over. The market is overstocked with Paper White narcissi, but no fault can be found with the quality of the stock. There are too many short-stemmed tulips. No one seems to want them. Freesia is superb, and its popularity grows. There is a sufficiency of daffodils, mignonette, daisies, lilac, calendulas, forget-me-nots, stevia and pansies. Acacia is here again.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will hold its tenth annual banquet at the McAlpin hotel, Saturday evening, February 17. These affairs are decidedly classy and exclusive. John H. Fiesser is president. Secretary Siebrecht says this year's festival will be supreme.

The wife of Wm. L. Trumpore died last week at the family home in Stapleton, L. I. Mr. Trumpore has the sympathy of all in his bereavement, especially sad because of his own confinement in the hospital following a serious operation. Sincere hopes are entertained of his recovery. Mr. Trumpore has a store at Stapleton, under his son's management, and recently has been one of the force of J. H. Small & Sons.

Great importance is given St. Valentine's day by New York's enterprising and progressive retailers and methods are being devised to make the day one of the best of the whole year.

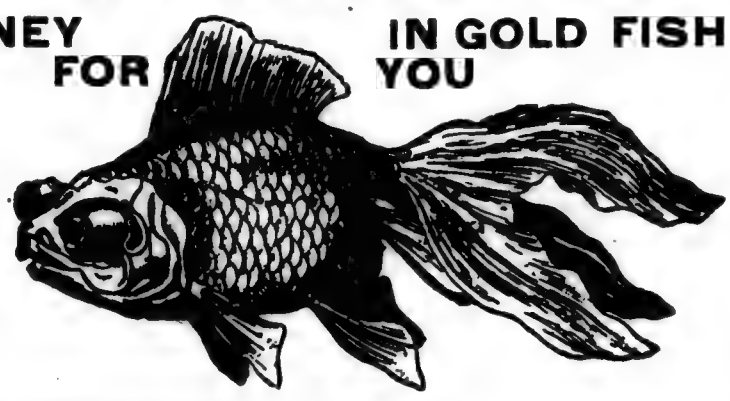
Peter Beuerlein, of Elmhurst, will move to Hillsdale, N. J., this spring, where he will erect greenhouses. He has a farm there of over fifty acres.

Oscar Leistner, of Chicago, is in the city on his way to New England.

Sam Seligman, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago, is here for a two weeks' business trip, with his headquarters at the Hotel Wallach.

New York will be well represented at the meeting of the American Carnation Society at Indianapolis. J. H. Dick is chairman of the transportation committee and associated with him are A. J. Guttman and W. E. Maynard. Those desiring berths should inform the chairman without delay.

His friends will be glad to know of the recovery of W. H. Long, of 412 Columbus avenue, after many weeks in the hospital.



F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, celebrated his sixty-second birthday anniversary January 22. A visit to his "handsomest flower shop in the world" last week emphasized the fact that in its building he must have had in view a monument. Mr. Pierson just now is enthusiastic over his new rose Daphne, to which he will devote one of his half-acre houses next season.

Wm. Mack, head salesman for Wm. P. Ford, has been seriously ill with pleurisy.

Great Bend, Kan.—"The railroad owns the cars and the coal mines, and therefore does as it pretty well pleases with us western Kansas fellows," say Stoke & Stoke in speaking of the uneasiness caused by the more severe coal shortage.

Saginaw, Mich.—Grohman the Florist had planned a wide distribution this season of stock of Dahlia Camelliaflora, which has proved extremely useful under glass for summer design work, but the unfavorable season of 1916 resulted in the loss of most of the stock plants in the open ground. It therefore is necessary to take at least another year to work up a quantity of plants.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

POLLINATION OF TOMATOES.

Will you kindly tell me through the columns of The Review what is the best method of pollenizing tomatoes? I have followed two systems—by gently shaking the vines to liberate the pollen; by going over the blossoms with an envelope and gently pressing the envelope against the blossoms. In each case I have had fruits that failed to set.

T. E. H.—Can.

Use a good-sized camel's-hair brush, or a piece of cotton wool tied to the end of a stick. I have on many occasions tied the end of a rabbit's tail on a stick and pollenized not only tomatoes, but also grapes, nectarines, peaches and other fruits. Keep a uniformly dry atmosphere in your tomato house. Allow the plants to dry out well between waterings; do not apply liquid manure at all at this season. Plants with a large root run, which make a strong growth, are less likely to set freely than those with roots in a more limited space. The night temperature should be 60 to 62 degrees. C. W.

The Market.

There continues to be a decided scarcity of nearly all flowers, and prices remain high, in some cases having advanced since a week ago. The weather has remained steadily cold and the cuts of growers have been small. The prevailing high prices have practically closed up some of the small retailers, temporarily. It also has had the effect of reducing purchases, as a good many dispense with flowers while they are so dear. The wholesalers are probably in the worst, and the growers in the best, position at present. Some retailers are pleased with the present high prices, but the majority are not.

Roses continue in short supply. Particularly is this the case with short-stemmed flowers, which have been making $8 to $10 per hundred. There is a rather better supply of medium and first-grade flowers, which clean up at excellent prices. Carnations remain about the same as those of a week ago, the prices varying from $4 to $6 per hundred. Sweet peas sell well; good Spencers make $2. The supply of tulips and daffodils is not yet large and excellent prices still rule. This holds true also of Paper Whites, Romans and freesias. Yellow marguerites are selling at fancy prices, all the way from $1 to $6 per hundred. Valley moves somewhat slowly and lilies are in abundant supply. There is an abundant cut of stevia still available, or makers of funeral designs would have difficulty in finding sufficient material.

Cattleyas are lower priced, Trianæ being worth $35 to $45 per hundred. Gardenias wholesale at $3 per dozen. There is a somewhat better call for asparagus.

Club Field Day.

There was an attendance of over sixty at the postponed field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Framingham January 20. The establishment of S. J. Goddard was first visited, and the carnations, which are the leading specialty, were found in splendid condition. The seedlings here are worthy of more than passing mention. A few of the more striking are 167-12, a beautiful clear scarlet; 36-12, salmon, clear and distinct, darker than Lady Northcliffe, a great producer; 34-13, a nice variegated, penciled with carmine, a big cropper; 45-13, a good scarlet; 119-12, a new shade of shell pink; 113, a good crimson; 81-13, a fringed pure white, similar to White Wonder; 116-12, a beautiful fringed light pink; 107-12, of Gloriosa type. Some of these are likely to be heard from again.

Rosalia, Laddie and Dorner's seedling No. 148 attracted much favorable notice. Pink Sensation seemed to be blooming freely for so large a flower. Rosette, Yellow Prince, Doris, the latter a fine, new crimson now being disseminated, of a glowing shade; Pink Delight, Matchless, Beacon, Benora and Gloriosa were all fine. Gloriosa still holds its own here. Nancy looked well and seems destined to displace Pink Delight. A good general line of stock for the retail trade, such as freesias, snapdragons, marguerites, mignonette, etc., is grown here, and everything looked well.

After leaving Mr. Goddard's, the establishment of W. R. Nicholson was visited. Carnations are the leading crop here and it would be hard to find finer beds of Alice, Matchless, Rosette, Beacon, Good Cheer, Benora, Pink Delight and Ward, than are to be seen here. A crimson seedling, No. 51, took everyone's eye and looked like a winner. Belle Washburn was doing well. The mignonette here, always fine, seems this year to be better than ever and was an eye-opener to many; the spikes were magnificent. Freesias were good; so were winter-blooming wallflowers, and the visitors had never seen Godfrey callas blooming with such wonderful freedom as here. Yellow marguerites, sweet peas, Gypsophila elegans and a variety of stock coming along for Memorial day were also noted.

Nelson the party was conducted over the various houses by John Nelson, Jr. Some 45,000 carnations are grown, the principal varieties being Peerless Pink, Matchless, White Wonder, Fenn, Benora, Beacon, Pink Delight and Ward. All the plants were in tremendous crop and were a revelation to the visitors, a house of Matchless being a truly wonderful sight. The young stock was in extra fine condition. Rose Queen sweet peas were remarkably fine.

When J. T. Butterworth's place, in South Framingham, was reached, darkness was approaching and it was necessary to turn on electric lights to see the plants properly. Here orchids are the great specialty. Specially noteworthy were the batches of Cattleya Trianæ, Lælia anceps, fancy cypripediums, cymbidiums and odontoglossums, but many other genera were represented. The plants are vigorous; even those which had been here for many years were in ruddy health. Tulips, narcissi and other bulbous flowers, also lily of the valley, are forced here in quantity. Two houses of carnations, comprising all the best varieties, were in good crop.

Mr. Butterworth furnished the visitors with a collation, which was much appreciated. President James Methven, on behalf of the visitors, thanked Messrs. Goddard, Butterworth, Nelson and Nicholson for the courtesies extended. Messrs. Goddard and Butterworth expressed their pleasure at the club members' visit. John H. Stalford, of Bar Harbor, Me., who had just returned from a visit to leading establishments in the vicinity of New York and Philadelphia, said he had seen better stock at Framingham than anywhere else he had visited. The special car reached Boston safely at 7:15 p. m., after a most enjoyable and profitable outing.

James Wheeler now has 16,000 feet of glass devoted to yellow marguerites and is the leading local specialist in these popular flowers. His best grade realizes as much as $6 per hundred. Among carnations Nancy is now doing better. Pink Delight, Alice, Benora and Matchless are the other leaders. Alice yielded eight flowers per plant up to January 1, ahead of all other varieties.

At the club meeting January 20, C. F. Guenther, of Hamburg, N. Y., showed a nice vase of his new chrysanthemum. A seedling crimson carnation from W. D. Howard, originated by A. B. Knowlton, showed up well; also a pink seedling from Littlefield & Wyman. At the meeting February 20 carnations will hold the center of the stage. There will be a notable display of flowers and talks by several specialists.

shipments of Campbell. Speaking of violets, it is a noteworthy fact that they have declined in popularity in Boston of late years and several specialists have dropped or will soon drop their culture.

Patrick Welch, among other florists, is receiving regular shipments of Buddleia Asiatica, Erlangea tomentosa and English primroses.

I regret to report that George Hannan, of Dorchester, is dangerously ill at the city hospital with sciatic rheumatism. His friends are much worried over his condition.

E. P. Matson has purchased the John A. Cox greenhouses at Reading and will grow carnations, calendulas, Asparagus Sprengeri, sweet peas, stocks, spiræas, bulbous stock and pansies. He has a charming pure white pansy, also a pleasing pale blue one.

W. N. Craig lectured on "Seed Sowing Suggestions" at Horticultural hall January 20. The attendance was 300. Questions from the audience occupied one and one-half hours, showing the interest of the public in horticultural topics.

At Welch's business is good, but Edward Welch says prevalent prices are so high that they hurt business considerably. This house carries a fine line of roses, carnations, valley, cattleyas and other flowers.

Among the growers who are sending in good cyclamens just now are W. T. Walke, of Salem, and Axel Magnuson, of Manchester. The last named has sold all his Primula malacoides plants. This variety sells far better now than either P. Sinensis or obconica.

quantities of cattleyas from South America this season. At present Cattleya Trianæ is his leading variety. He is cutting gardenias more heavily.

The Rawson Conservatories, of Arlington, produce numerous carnations, there being some 40,000 plants. The leaders are Ward, Enchantress Supreme and Matchless. There are splendid Spencer peas and quantities of Spanish irises.

The noted evangelist, Billy Sunday, closed his Boston campaign January 21. The total attendances at his tabernacle have aggregated 1,500,000, and Boston is sorry to lose him. The florists have benefited by his presence here, as numerous delegations have presented him with floral tributes.

William H. Ward, of Montvale, is getting a nice crop of forget-me-nots, freesias, sweet peas and Asparagus plumosus; also, a good cut of Matchless, Pink Delight, Benora, Beacon and White Wonder carnations.

There will be a lecture at Horticultural hall January 27 by Alfred P. Dachnowski, of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., on "Formation and Characteristics of Peat and Muck Lands, and Some of Their Uses."

The Market.

The local wholesale market was in a splendid condition last week. There was a decided shortage of roses and carnations, and prices went up a few cents. There was no glut of any flower and the market was cleaned up daily. The retailers report splendid business throughout the week—society was working overtime on social functions. The shortage in roses was noticed most, and all varieties and grades advanced in price. Extra fancy long Beauties brought $6 per dozen. Russell and Ophelia were in good demand, also Killarneys. Extra choice carnations were sold at $4 per hundred and these cleaned up well. Enchantress was the leading seller; Matchless, Ward and Beacon also sold well during the latter part of the week. The supply was not equal to the large demand. Sweet peas are coming in well. Fancy butterfly sweet peas clean up daily and it is expected the supply will be greater from now on. Violets are becoming more plentiful. The bright, cold weather was just right for them and the supply became quite heavy the latter part of the week. The average price asked was $5 per thousand. Romans and jonquils are scarce, as are valley and Paper Whites. A large cut of Paper Whites is expected this week. Orchids sold well at $6 per dozen and the supply was good during the week. Easter lilies and callas are in large demand, but scarce. All greens cleaned up well, with adiantum, smilax and asparagus leading.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting January 15 at the Mission Inn Garden. President Young presided over a large attendance. The nomination of officers resulted as follows: For president, Fred H. Weber, Richard Tubbesing and Otto G. Koenig; vice-president, T. Miller and Oscar Ruff; secretary, Frank X. Gorly, Marion Uhlschmidt and Oliver K. Sanders; treasurer, Emil Schray, John W. Boerm and Fred C. Weber. The election will take place at the February meeting. There was a lengthy discussion on publicity after the report of the publicity committee. The plans outlined by the committee were adopted. It was decided that the association do all in its power to help to make the coming spring flower show a big success. It was requested of those who attend the Indianapolis carnation convention to be prepared to make a report at the next meeting.

Arthur Wettig, of 5318 Quincy avenue, died January 15 at the City hospital, of tetanus poisoning. Mr. Wettig fell against a radiator at his home Christmas day and struck his head. Several days later the injury became painful and the decedent went to the hospital. He was born in Germany. He leaves a family to mourn his loss.

Seed Trade News

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

EDWARD LEONARD, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, has been confined to his bed by an attack of the grip.

AMONG the few catalogues received quoting all seeds by the pound, is the 1917 catalogue of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago.

DESPITE the Dutch embargo, the Sluis Seed Store, Chicago, received a small shipment of Spinach seed from Holland last week.

JAMES R. CLARK, recently in charge of the Jefferson Park retail market gardener store of the Leonard Seed Co.. Chicago, has joined the staff of the Everette R. Peacock Co., which is steadily extending its operations in the section north and west of Chicago.

"THE seed question is becoming more serious each day," say J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore. "Seed growers find their crops did not yield what they had estimated, and seed merchants are realizing their great shortage. Already many varieties of garden seed are almost exhausted. Never has the whole world faced such conditions."

AMONG the visitors in Chicago last week were J. W. Edmondson, of the California Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal., accompanied by Mrs. Edmondson; A. Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., and J. S. Michael, of the Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia., who had just come from Washington, D. C., where they were bidding on the government seed contracts.

IMPURE OR MISBRANDED SEEDS.

Proposed National Legislation.

Congressman James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, has introduced a bill into the House of Representatives "to regulate commerce in adulterated or misbranded seeds or bulbs, and to prevent the sale and transportation thereof." The bill provides:

Section 1. That the introduction into any state or territory or the District of Columbia from any other state or territory or the District of Columbia of any seed or bulbs adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, is hereby prohibited; and any person who shall ship or deliver for shipment from any state or territory or the District of Columbia to any other state, territory, or the District of Columbia, or who shall receive in any state or territory or the District of Columbia from any other state or territory or the District of Columbia, and having so received shall deliver, in original unbroken packages, for pay or otherwise, or offer to deliver to any other person any seed or bulbs adulterated or misbranded, within the meaning of this Act, or any person who shall sell or offer for sale in the District of Columbia or any territory of the United States any such adulterated or misbranded seed or bulbs, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and for such offense be fined not exceeding $200 for the first offense, and upon conviction for each subsequent offense not exceeding $300, or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

EXAMINATION OF SAMPLES.

Sec. 3. That the examination of specimens shall be made in the Department of Agriculture or under direction and supervision of such department for the purpose of determining from such examination whether such seeds or bulbs are adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act; and if it shall appear from such examination that any such specimen is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this Act, the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause notice to be given to the party from whom such sample was obtained. Any party so notified shall be given opportunity to be heard, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed as aforesaid, and if it appears that any of the provisions of this Act have been violated by such party, then the Secretary of Agriculture shall certify at once the facts to the proper United States district attorney, with a copy of the results of the analysis or the examination of such article, duly authenticated by the analyst or officer making such examination under the oath of such officer. CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

W. R. Gray, Oakton, Va.—"Fairfax Roses, the Aristocrats of Rosedom," an illustrated catalogue, with more than the usual amount of descriptive text. At the beginning are two pages of instructions for outdoor rose growers.

Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.—Sixty-third annual catalogue of seeds, plants, bulbs, tools and general nursery stock, including nut trees; contains 192 pages, in which all departments of the business are well represented. Fifteen pages are devoted to roses. The covers are artistically designed and bear colored pictures of specialties in fruits, shrubs and vegetables. "With few exceptions," says the company, "we have our usual full stock of seeds to offer."

Forbes & Keith, New Bedford, Mass.—"Supplementary List of Prize Medal Dahlias," an illustrated 12-page folder, offering "the latest novelties and rare varieties," in addition to the stock listed in the general catalogue, previously issued. TOMATO SEED FOR YOUR 1917 CROP

You will get an enormous crop of Tomatoes from Bolgiano's Tomato Seed this year. Our Seed was saved from one of the largest crops we have ever had, due to being favored by weather conditions. The vines were loaded with Large, Solid, Red Fruit. We know positively by planting Seed from this "Big Crop" your yield will be much larger than if you had bought seed grown where the weather conditions were not favorable.

There are clear and concise cultural directions at the beginning of each section.

German Nurseries & Seed House, Beatrice, Neb.—"Garden Book for 1917," the thirty-first annual catalogue. This company has sufficient enterprise to issue two editions of its catalogue, one of them printed in English, the other in German, and the two books differ considerably in matter as well as in language. The English book consists of 128 pages, besides the colored cover; the German text is expanded to 136 pages. Both are illustrated.

Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, Tex.—"Taxseed Brand Seeds, Best for the South and Southwest;" 128 illustrated pages and a colored cover. Plants and nursery stock also are listed. Department of Agriculture."

Weeber & Don, New York, N. Y.—Illustrated 120-page catalogue of seeds, bulbs, plants, fruit trees, small fruits, tools, etc. Special prominence is given, on the colored front cover and in the text, to "a real novelty for 1917," the firm's "new annual hybrid poppies." The back cover shows the "Don Extra Early Sweet Corn." An enclosed 4-page folder features novelties in sweet peas and other stock.

Arthur T. Boddington Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.—"Spring Garden Guide," a comprehensive, accurately compiled, excellently printed catalogue of seeds, plants, bulbs, roots, tools and miscellaneous supplies; 128 pages, illustrated. Sweet peas are featured in colors on the front cover and receive full and careful attention in the text; about sixteen of the Spencer introductions of 1917 are offered. Among the specialties are "English trained and pot-grown fruit trees, grape vines, etc., for walled gardens and for culture under glass."

Wm. Henry Maule, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.—"The Maule Seed Book," offering seeds, bulbs, plants, fruit-bearing stock and sundries; 176 pages, illustrated. The lists of flower seeds, plants and nursery stock occupy the last sixty or more pages and are distinguished from the rest of the catalogue by being printed on pink paper. Many specialties are shown in colors on the cover.

PEARSON'S MONEYWORTH QUALITY

ATTENTION!
HIGH PRICES!!

The annual army of Dutch bulb salesmen is advancing on the florists' trade in the United States, fully determined again to capture your orders at high prices.

If you are wise, you will not place your order now.

There is plenty of time to buy at high prices.

The information available, together with a knowledge of the situation in general and the bulb markets at the present time, proves conclusively that the present high prices asked for Holland bulbs will not hold through the season unless some great disaster should befall the crop now in the ground.

Hold your order.

Pasadena, Cal.—At the recent meeting of the Pasadena Horticultural Society George F. Nelson was elected president in place of W. Shields, George Kennedy still holding his position as secretary.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Another cold snap has materially checked outdoor carnations and other flowers just as they were getting into their stride; but, fortunately, both wind and rain accompanied the cold and prevented its settling down to a frost. Nothing grows except violets, and these appear to like the cool, moist conditions now existing. Even the hardy blue cyanus, or cornflower, does not open freely and there is some shortage. Sweet peas are scarce and only of medium quality, while outdoor roses at present are practically out of the market. A scarcity of indoor roses, or rather a reduced supply, has again come to pass, several growers being more or less off crop. Good Cecile Brunner roses are nearly as scarce as orchids, and corsage flowers generally are short, with the exception of violets.

Callas are coming in slowly, the earlier ones being somewhat damaged by frost. There is a nice supply of Easter lilies, both in pots and cut, but the demand for potted stock is extremely light. Asparagus plumosus is in much smaller supply, the cold weather having checked the growth and the frost browned the tips of much of it, making it unsalable. The demand for maidenhair ferns, brakes and Mexican ivy is better than for some time.

Plants are coming in more freely, azaleas that were late for Christmas, cyclamens, begonias and ferns making a good showing. The fruit branches and boughs of Acacia Baileyana and other shrubs and trees prove effective in the store windows.

Various Notes.

A. F. Levy, representing the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., is in town taking orders for supplies.

John Bodger, Jr., last week said he intended to start on his eastern trip January 16.

The L. A. Floral Co. is shipping a distinctive looking carnation, a sport of Mrs. Welch. The color just now is not so good, Fred Sperry says, as later in the season, but even now it is so different from other carnations on the market here that it meets with a fine demand. It lasts well, is a good shipper and the color is described as an American Beauty tint.

Darling's Flower Shop reports business excellent, better than at the beginning of the month. The windows have been exceptionally attractive of late, some novel ideas having been worked out.

Although I knew of the addition of new greenhouses at the H. N. Gage Co. nursery at Montebello, I was surprised to see what a great improvement had been made all around. The two new houses, each 200 feet long, are filled with ferns, palms and other stock, and outdoors the bulbous stock looks exceptionally well. H. N. Gage in the selling department, and his brother, L. Gage, in the growing end, seem a pretty strong combination.

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

Germain Seed & Plant Co.
Los Angeles. By M. L. Germain, Pres.

Friends of H. W. Turner will be sorry to hear that he broke his right arm January 15, thus more or less incapacitating him at a busy time. Everyone knows that the temporary loss of an arm will not keep Mr. Turner out of business, but it makes it a little awkward just the same.

A big shipping business and the job of moving has kept all hands on the jump at the S. Murata & Co. store this week. Purity freesias have met with an exceptionally fine demand, the Fischer quality doing the trick.

At Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson's this week there has been a large demand for the better class of funeral work.

Friends of Arnold Ringier, secretary of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, will be glad to hear that Mrs. Ringier is progressing favorably at the Clara Barton hospital.

Walter Armacost & Co. are sending in fine Easter lilies, both potted and cut stock; also some excellent cyclamens in all colors.

James McGilvray, the well known superintendent of Eastlake park, January 12, was married to Miss Maud Davis, one of Scotland's sweetest singers, better known as Beatrice Maud. The lovely Los Angeles climate was in part to blame, but the languishing James said that was not the only reason for Miss Davis's journey from Bonny Scotland. Despite the attentions of a cordon of police and a detective squad around the park for two months, James got away at lunch time January 12 and the next time he was seen was at 151 South Hancock street, in full enjoyment of connubial bliss. "Here's tae ye, baith of ye; may there be mair o' ye."

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The cold weather of last week shortened the supply of nearly all kinds of flowers, with the result that stock is scarcer and prices higher than usual at this time of the year. The coldest day in four years killed the remainder of the mums and damaged the violets seriously, just as the cut was recovering from previous setbacks. Giant stood up fairly well, but Princess was about killed to the ground. From present indications there will be few violets to ship for a week or two. The rose cut is short. The few growers who have a good cut are making more money on roses than ever before during January. Carnations are less plentiful and prices have stiffened.

Bulbous stock also is held back by the cold, but a few warm days will bring out heavy supplies of daffodils, narcissi, tulips, hyacinths, etc. Freesias are more plentiful and the offerings clean up quickly. Now, when practically everything else is scarce, orchids are plentiful. They were short for a long time, but there are enough now for all the stores. Many are being used in funeral work. There is a good cut of gardenias and the demand is unusually brisk. In potted plants the principal offerings are azaleas and primroses; both are having a good call. Acacias are earlier than usual, several of the downtown stores having had a nice supply for several days. Many pussy willows are used.

At the seed stores extensive preparations are being made for the spring season. Seedsmen look for a good business this year, judging from the interest shown at this early date.

Various Notes.

Under the supervision of F. J. Bertrand, of the B. M. Joseph store, a large decoration was carried out at the Palace hotel a few days ago. It was a Hawaiian affair and a tropical effect was obtained by the use of aquariums, fishes, miniature cocoa palms and dancing girls. Mr. Joseph says business is reasonably good, notwithstanding the scarcity of stock and high prices.

One day last week Podesta & Baldocchi used about 200 orchids in funeral work, according to N. L. Baldocchi.

Harry Hanson, formerly with the Art Floral Co., has accepted a position with MacRorie & McLaren, as head salesman of their store on Powell street. Frank H. Forrest, who has been serving in that capacity, is no longer with the company.

C. S. Quick, who makes a specialty of growing dahlia novelties at Berkeley, has issued a new catalogue. It lists more than 600 varieties of dahlias, as well as other flowers.

The California Dahlia Growers' Association is preparing to send out the premium list for the second annual show, which will be held in the Palace hotel ballroom, September 3 to 5. The list will be ready in time for exhibitors to start plants for any entry they may choose. Getting the premium list out early this spring will also give the advertisements in the schedule longer life. Additional space has been obtained for the 1917 display and no effort will be spared to make the exhibition a signal success. A special table will be reserved for showing flowers from the dahlia trial gardens, which will be located at San Rafael, under the auspices of the association. The January bulletin of the association contains much information of interest to dahlia growers.

Joseph Proietti, who handles the daffodil cut of several places near San Leandro, says there will be a big crop as soon as the weather moderates.

F. C. Burns, dahlia specialist of San Rafael, Cal., has issued a new catalogue of dahlias, "The Pride of the Garden." He does not list a large collection, but devotes particular attention, he says, to such varieties as have been selected for their superiority in color, perfection of form, length and stiffness of stem, continuous blooming, etc. Half-page illustrations are given the varieties known as Tom Lundy, Geisha, Wodan, Henry Maier, Mrs. T. A. Munro, Alaska, Charminster and George Walters.

J. A. Axell says that the E. W. McLellan Co. has a fine cut of Russell roses and about a normal cut of other varieties.

C. Kooyman is congratulating himself on having a fine cut of roses while they are scarce and high.

T. Mosco reports a good demand for bulbous plants, with hyacinths the principal feature and tulips next.

Frank Peliçano is expecting a visit from Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago.

Miss Bertha Cohn, of the Bellevue Florists, says they are handicapped to a considerable extent by not being able to procure cheap flowers for fill-in orders.

Milton Tonino, manager of the Bay Counties Seed Co., reports that the spring season is opening up nicely.

A full line of plants, seeds, etc., has been assembled by W. F. Pitts, of the

The Market.

The only complaint in connection with business is that there is not enough stock available, carnations being especially short. This is due not so much to a decrease in the number of carnations cut, which in most places would hardly be true, but rather to a splendid business that takes up almost every flower available.

There are a few late mums of medium grade still appearing in small batches, which are used chiefly in funeral work. The usual cloudy conditions of this season are telling on the rose crop, but good stock is arriving from eastern growers, so that good roses are always to be had. Ophelia is entrenching itself more deeply in the regard of florists and their customers by its splendid shipping qualities. Bulbous stock is appearing, though still in limited quantities. Bulb shipments to this section were greatly delayed, some not arriving until after December 1. Paper Whites and Soleil d'Or are about sufficient to meet the demands. A few Golden Spur have appeared and are eagerly snatched up at good prices.

Various Notes.

The Spokane Florist Co. has been making a good showing in its windows of potted tulips and Golden Spur daffodils, which were furnished by the Spokane Greenhouse Co., of Marshall.

The Hoyt Bros. Co. has been busy with several decorations for weddings and parties. In common with other florists, the company is experiencing difficulty in getting sufficient valley to meet the requirements of the better class of work. There is at this time no assurance of any more valley before June 1.

Henry Reimers last week treated his store and greenhouse help to a goose and turkey dinner, with all the "trimmings" attached. The store was closed and the help went out to the Reimers home, at Reimers station. The guests, about twenty-five in number, when not indulging in the splendid "eats" provided, spent the time in dancing, the music being supplied by graphophone and piano.

H. L. Olsson has had splendid cineraria and Primula malacoides plants, for which there has been a good demand.

W. S. Van Dorn, formerly in business at Post Falls, Idaho, has bought the greenhouses and business of A. Gardner at Greeley, Colo. The deal includes about 15,000 feet of glass, within two blocks of the business center of the town. Since selling his place at Post Falls last spring, Mr. Van Dorn has been employed by the Milot-Mills Co., at Wenatchee. While there he had charge of the roses, mums, peas and poinsettias.

Mrs. Thomas Christensen, wife of the Wallace Florist, of Wallace, Idaho, was a recent visitor. L. B. H.

The Market.

Clear weather has had a stimulating effect on business; large funerals also have been a factor in the trade, and with fair supplies of flowers there is little to complain of. A few chrysanthemums of fine quality are still to be seen and are selling well at good prices. Carnations are improving in quality and increasing in quantity. Roses are not overplentiful, the bulk of the stock being of southern origin. The demand for roses is good. California violets are now about at their best and sales of these and the few locally grown ones are at their maximum. Bulbous stock is not plentiful, except Paper Whites. A few tulips and daffodils are coming in and quickly disposed of. Cyclamens are the best sellers in pot plants; primulas move slowly and the few azaleas offered have not much to recommend them to buyers. Pussy willows are seen in all the stores.

Various Notes.

Fred Schleicher, who has had charge of the greenhouses at the nursery of J. J. Bonnell for some time, has gone into partnership with C. Haas, at his range at Bellevue. It is their intention to rebuild those of the houses which were destroyed last winter.

Lambert Pedersen is building an addition to his range at Queen Anne. As most of the material was already in his possession, it will not be such an expensive proposition as if the material had to be purchased at this time of high prices. He has an excellent crop of carnations in one of his houses and finds business good.

J. J. Bonnell has received most of the goods he purchased while on his recent trip to Japan, but has some still on the way. He, with other nurserymen, is wondering when the Holland shipments are to arrive. They have been a long time on the way and the chances are they will not arrive in good condition.

A movement is on foot to form a landscape gardeners' association in this city, and certainly it is a step in the right direction. There are so many who call themselves landscape gardeners and so few who have any claim to other than an unerring eye in the navigation of a lawn mower, that it is time there should be coöperation among the competent ones for their own protection as well as in the interests of the public.

The Fleur-de-lis Store, in the Henry building on Fourth avenue, closed its doors and went out of business this week. While there has been an increase in size of some of the stores of late, there has been a decided decrease in the number operated during the last two years.

Club Meeting.

About thirty members attended the meeting of the Portland Floral Society held January 16. It was reported that a payment had been made of twenty-five per cent of the bills for the floral center in the last festival, and that there was a good prospect that the remaining twenty-five per cent would be paid soon. Members of the legislation committee related their experiences with the Multnomah delegation to the legislature and said that the amendment to the state's laws necessary to extend the right of lien to florists and nurserymen, for goods furnished or service or labor performed, was a short and concise extension to the mechanics' lien laws already in force. A bill for such extension is now before the state senate.

President Walker reported that F. A. Van Kirk had been elected a trustee of the association formed to guard the interests of the rose test garden proposed by the American Rose Society. In the ensuing discussion several members spoke of the benefits of such a garden to the trade and to the "Rose City." Someone asked about the experimental gardens started last spring under the supervision of Father Schoener. It was reported that there had been considerable friction between Father Schoener and the committee of shareholders in the garden association, and that work at the gardens had been partly suspended.

The president announced the nominating committee, as required by the by-laws. The committeemen are William Borsch, chairman; Henry Birchler, A. I. Gale, William E. Wood, S. G. Lubliner, A. Matsinger and J. Zimmerman. The committee will report at the May meeting and the election takes place in June.

J. G. Bacher, of the program committee, presented several questions for discussion. The first was, "What flowering shrubs are considered desirable by the retailer as spring-blooming pot plants?" The reply was made by A. J. Clarke, who said, in part: "The list

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

THE death of Swain Nelson, one of the oldest of nurserymen and designer of Lincoln park, Chicago, is recorded in the obituary column this week.

THE meeting of the Western Association of Nurserymen, which opened at the Coates House January 24, has drawn a large number of nurserymen to Kansas City this week.

IT is stated that Charles Willis Ward, president of the new Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Eureka, Cal., has placed orders in Europe for about forty carloads of stock for shipment during 1917.

LOSS OF CONIFEROUS SEEDLINGS.

Damping-off of coniferous seedlings, in the opinion of forest pathologists of the United States Department of Agriculture, causes losses ordinarily considerably heavier than the nurseryman realizes. Young seedlings decay and disappear so soon after infection that the number of dead seedlings visible at any one time is but a small part of the total loss. Furthermore, many of the seedlings are killed immediately after the seed sprouts and before the seedlings appear above the soil surface.

JACKSON & PERKINS CO., Newark, New York

Many failures hitherto attributed to poor germination, in the opinion of the specialists, are due in reality to the work of the damping-off parasites in the sprouting seed, underground. The high price of most evergreen seed, which ranges from a minimum of 50 cents per pound for western yellow pine to $2 to $4 per pound quoted for native spruces, and even $5 to $10 per pound for Norway pine, makes the loss of young seedlings a serious expense.

To assist nurserymen in controlling damping-off, the United States Department of Agriculture conducted extensive experiments in various sections of the country. The methods employed in these experiments and the success attending their use are reported fully in Professional Paper No. 453, "The Control of Damping-Off of Coniferous Seedlings," by Carl Hartley, forest pathologist, and Roy G. Pierce, forest assistant, Bureau of Plant Industry.

To decrease losses from the disease, it is urged, excessive moisture and shade should be avoided. Caution must be used in following this recommendation, or many seedlings may be killed by drought or by white-spot injury to the base of the stem. Damping-off can often be decreased by putting beds on sandy soil. Seed should not be sown any thicker than necessary. It appears better to sow broadcast than in drills. Late fall sowing results in decreased losses at some nurseries and is worth trial. Proper attention to all of these measures will decrease the losses from damping-off, but at most nurseries they are not sufficient really to control the disease.

The addition of lime, wood ashes, and in some cases nitrogenous fertilizers seems to increase damping-off. The use of unrotted stable manure has had bad results; properly rotted manures seem less objectionable.

Soil disinfection has so far proved the best method of combating damping-off. Of many methods tested, treatments with sulphuric acid, copper sulphate, zinc chloride and formaldehyde have proved the most satisfactory. The disinfectants, however, behave quite differently at different nurseries. In addition to decreasing damping-off after the seedlings come up, the chemical disinfectants, when properly used, cause an increase in the apparent germination and are very helpful in controlling weeds. This latter effect alone at some nurseries pays the entire expense of the treatment. Sulphuric acid has, furthermore, at some places resulted in marked increases in the late season growth of pines.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business at this time is remarkably active. The florists are more than pleased, as well as greatly surprised, at the way things are running. The immense quantity of funeral work called for daily is rather out of the ordinary. At this season business generally is somewhat quiet, but it cannot be called that now. We are on the eve of February graduations and several large orders have already been placed. Counter trade was good last week, with a brisk sale of potted bulbous stock. Owing to the scarcity of cut flowers, pans of potted hyacinths, fitted with handles and decorated with mats and chiffon, have been pushed for funeral work.

The daily shipments are not so heavy as the trade really calls for in some lines. Roses are not so plentiful as might be desired, and the high prices are keenly felt. Good varieties reach us, including Montrose, Francis Scott Key, Sunburst, Ward, Maryland and Killarney roses. Sweetheart roses sell well. Orchids and gardenias are not overplentiful. The supply of valley meets all demands, but the quality of some of the shipments cannot be considered good. Easter lilies sell easily and the demand for callas is somewhat larger. Freesias sell well. White and pink bouvardias find their way to the market in small quantities. The demand for jonquils and Paper Whites has been heavy during the last few days. Carnations are not overplentiful, because of the lack of sunshine. Sweet peas move steadily at good prices. Violets continue good and sell well. Roman hyacinths and stevias are not plentiful. A good supply of cypripediums is on hand.

Various Notes.

Charles W. Curtis, of Irondequoit, N. Y., has a house of fine sweet peas, which are now coming into bloom. His Easter stock is splendid indeed and the cut promises to be large.

George T. Boucher reports business as being brisk. He has had an unusual quantity of funeral work during the last two weeks, which has necessitated putting on a new designer, Frank Mahoney, formerly of Buffalo. His East avenue window display in purple and gold was most attractive, jonquils and primulas being used liberally.

Paul Campus, who for several years has occupied a stand at the corner of Main and Exchange streets, will open up a new store at 137 South Clinton street, under the name of Rosery Flower Shop. He intends to have the opening in about a week.

F. R. Bohnke is doing a splendid business in potted plants this season, but next year he expects to devote most of his time and room to carnations.

Several tradesmen visited the city last week, including H. S. Price, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; G. W. Cohen, of Cohen & Hiller, New York; H. Meyer, of Meyer Bros., New York; E. H. Bishop, with D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit.

Do It Now!

Go over your Rose Houses carefully and estimate the plants you need for replanting this Spring, and place your order. Roses are going to be scarce. The Manetti situation is such that those who get it are fortunate, and the demand is far greater than the limited supply. We have sold over 100,000 grafted Roses in the last two weeks. We have 200,000 more to sell. There is considerable building contemplated. "Changing from Carnations to Roses" is a frequent explanation made when placing an order. If you are short at planting time it will be your fault and not ours. The growing of grafted Roses is an industry in itself. At Cromwell the large quantity of Roses grown for cut flowers makes it possible to get scions that are first-class. We want your Rose Plant order, and we want to be able to say "yes" to your inquiry. Three New Roses

DONALD MacDONALD

A new Hawlmark Red Rose sent out this year by Alex. Dickson and Sons. This rose has been tested for winter forcing for two years, and it produces more red roses during the winter than any rose now being grown. It is not a large rose, but has perfectly formed medium sized flowers that sell at sight. Color bright orange carmine; will not turn blue because the base of the petals are orange.

It is not a summer rose, as it has the same substance as Killarney, and from Thanksgiving until May it is a money maker for the rose grower, as no pinching is necessary.

is limited and the sale uncertain in this market.'' (Incidents were given to illustrate this condition.) ''Azalea mollis, Kalmia latifolia, Prunus Scheideckii, rhododendron, Hydrangea Hortensia and paniculata, Spiræa Van Houttei, lilac, magnolia, are among the kinds most likely to produce salable plants. The imported shrubs usually have too few buds to make showy plants.''

The second question was, ''What varieties of hardy perennials are best for pot culture or forcing?'' George Zimmerman answered and named lily of the valley, Dicentra spectabilis, myosotis, helleborus, double arabis, violets, trollius, Funkia variegata, calendula, coreopsis. The delphiniums and Canterbury bells do not force well, said another member.

Third question: ''Name twelve hardy shrubs best for an amateur to plant in a small home garden.'' Reply by Guy M. Pilkington: ''Jasmine, weigela, spiræa, cotoneaster, Japanese single snowball, syringa, buddleia, barberry, elder, lilac, high cranberry, abelia and, if the garden could accommodate but one plant, I would suggest Spiræa Van Houttei.''

A vote of thanks was tendered, through August Zitzewitz, to all who took part in the entertainment on ladies' night. A banquet and cards interested nearly everyone until the curfew rang.

Various Notes.

E. H. White, of the Willamette Dahlia & Floral Co., says this has been an unfavorable season for dahlias and that all the growers have lost heavily on account of the roots rotting. Early frosts followed by heavy rains have caused the trouble.

The Rahn & Herbert Co. sold out so closely during the holidays that it has found it hard to fill orders for blooming plants since. The empty benches are being filled with bedding stock. Several houses that are uncovered in summer have been closed in with coldframe sashes and planted to roses and other stock for early spring blooming.

William E. Wood, of the Scott-Wood Co., says his concern has built a store for a retail salesroom in front of the main greenhouse.

The Irvington Park Floral Co. has closed its store on Union avenue, near Broadway, and will devote its entire attention to its store in the Cascade Market building in the public market district.

The following incident, which recently happened here, shows that a florist is expected to know nearly everything and demonstrates how one of them made good under difficult circumstances. The wife of a prominent minister was personally directing the arrangement of her home decorations, which the young man from the flower store was putting in place. Being called away, she gave him instructions how to finish. Selecting the best palm, she told him to place it on the left of Moses and she was gone before the florist could ask where Moses was. Several pieces of statuary stood about the rooms and the florist at once concluded that one of the figures must be Moses. But which one? All he could recall about Moses was that he had something to do with bulrushes. There were no bulrushes about any of the figures, but the thought of them suggested whiskers and he placed the palm on the left of the figure sporting the most patriarchal beard. Later the hostess complimented him on his work, so he knew he had found Moses, and now he says he will know him wherever he may meet him.

Pussy willows have appeared in the market. S. W. W.

"Mrs. Sarah Yeats"

The New Queen of Red Roses

The buds of this new and beautiful red rose average two to three inches long, and open into large flowers with soft, velvety petals.

The color is a rich brilliant red, new and very attractive.

Stems run from eighteen to forty-two inches without pinching. Foliage is a rich green.

Its shipping and keeping qualities are remarkable. A dozen specimen roses were brought by train from Champaign to Chicago, taken to several places, inspected and finally left lying on a desk in our office. Though in bloom when finally put in water and placed in our refrigerator, we found them closed to buds in the morning.

"Mrs. Sarah Yeats" is not an experimental rose, but one that has been successfully produced under ordinary greenhouse conditions.

There are only 38,000 plants left to be sold. Orders will be filled in rotation. We urge your ordering now.

The Market.

Business has been unusually good during the last few weeks. The supply of roses now is rather inadequate and prices are high. Carnations are plentiful; some of them are good, but more of them are extremely poor. Why do some growers persist in overfeeding their carnations and burning them up with tobacco smoke? They do it year in and year out, and then wonder why the stems are so weak, why they get so many splits and why their stock has not the keeping qualities it ought to have.

Violets and sweet peas are plentiful and of fair quality, but valley, snapdragons and calendulas are scarce. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The report that the Misses Longren and Swedland, who conduct the Flower Shop, have dissolved partnership, is not founded on facts. It was news to the partners themselves.

Stewart's Seed Store reports business good in all lines. The force is busy these days getting ready for the spring rush. The new catalogue is just off the press and is a credit to the concern.

Hess & Swoboda report their rose crop as being short of the demand, but that they have plenty of other flowers to help out. This firm has some of the finest cyclamens ever seen in this locality.

Mrs. Lewis Henderson has been suffering from poisoning in the hands caused by rose thorns.

The regular meeting of the Omaha and Council Bluffs Florists' Club will be held Tuesday, February 8. A full attendance is requested.

Recent visitors included M. Le Vine, representing Lion & Co., of New York; A. Longren, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, Burlington, Ia.; R. Newcomb, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago; C. Pruner, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago; J. S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia.

Bluffs Boys Win Again.

Members of the Omaha and Council Bluffs bowling teams met at Council Bluffs last week for a contest. This was the first match of the new year and the Bluffs boys carried off the victory by winning the three games straight. After the last frames had been chalked up, everybody was invited to the new store of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, to partake of coffee and sandwiches. The scores were:

The Market.

With the close of this week there was a scarcity of cut flowers of all kinds, caused by an unusual quantity of funeral work, despite the fact that there was a large quantity of cut stock coming into the market. The supply of low-grade stock is unusually light in comparison with that of former years. During this month it seems as though everyone is growing a better grade of stock. Roses of all grades are high in price and less in number than at any time since last summer. The quality is all that could be desired. Carnations have not been so plentiful as formerly. There have been few splits this season, and the only flower to be had that is cheap at present is a split carnation.

Sweet peas are good and have long stems. Good prices are obtained for these and they now are the most plentiful flowers in the market. Lilies are about the same as last week; the supply is not large, but sufficient for the demand. There still are some high-grade stevias, but the season is about over. Bulbous stock is more plentiful than formerly, especially tulips and jonquils. Paper Whites are about the same as last week.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Elberfield have departed for a two to three weeks' vacation in the south. The store force reports that out-of-town funeral work has been unusually heavy.

Nelson Jarrett reports business better than it ever has been. He has one house of ferns and one of begonias; the rest of the range is devoted to bedding stock. Mr. Jarrett has been paying, and expects to keep on paying, a lot of special taxes. The boulevard, sidewalk curbing and street paving taxes all come at once.

R. E. Sturgeon has his houses in good condition. The butterfly sweet peas are good and the men are getting bedding stock into line for the spring trade.

H. B. Laundy & Son are busily preparing for the Easter trade. They will have a nice line of begonias and lilies.

W. J. Barnes had one of his busiest weeks in funeral work. There were three prominent funerals in one day near his establishment.

Arthur Newell reports a record-breaking week in funeral work, both in and out of town, and business in general also is satisfactory.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. cut some roses last week that were hard to beat.

Jacob Hepting is a busy man. His carnations this year have done exceptionally well. He now has over 20,000 young carnations in 2-inch pots and a large number of cuttings in the sand.

Henry Kusik & Co. report that some of the largest shipments ever made of cut flowers were made during the last three days. They report roses scarce.

John S. Meyer last week died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Heite. He is survived by two sons and four daughters.

The municipal greenhouses across the line, in the city park, suffered a loss from fire of about $2,000. Immediately after the fire J. B. Clark, superintendent of parks, had a force of men rigging up a temporary greenhouse to protect the stock that had escaped the flames.

The Market.

An unusually large number of weddings and funerals has caused business to become more active. The weather has been rather severe and flowers, especially roses and carnations, are slow to open.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met January 10 at J. C. Elspermann's. After the business routine C. E. Gyseman gave a talk on pansies and begonias. He was given a vote of thanks. The next meeting will be at Karl Zeidler's, Thursday evening, February 15, instead of February 14, St. Valentine's day.

C. E. Gyseman has part of the glass on his new house. The weather has delayed the work greatly.

Otto Kuebler has a stand in the Kresge's 5 and 10-cent store, where he sells plants and flowers on a commission basis. The stand is near the door and neatly arranged. E. L. F.

CLEVELAND, O.

Cleveland expects to be well represented at the annual meeting of the American Carnation Society at Indianapolis next week. Small announcement cards giving details of the trip have been circulated through the wholesale houses and mailed to all the private gardeners in the Cleveland section. A special rate of $6.50 each way has been secured. A special car will be attached to the regular Big Four train leaving Cleveland at midnight January 30. M. A. Vinson, who is in charge of organizing the Cleveland party, thinks that two sleepers will be needed, judging by the interest shown and the questions asked in regard to the details of the trip.

The return trip will be made through Richmond, where the big plant of the E. G. Hill Co. will be inspected. Those who desire to accompany the Cleveland party should notify M. A. Vinson, 402 Leader building, or leave word with any one of the five Cleveland wholesale houses.

At the annual meeting the Cleveland delegation will extend an invitation to the American Carnation Society to hold a fall meeting together with a fall show in Cleveland, as part of the Cleveland flower show, November 6 to 11, 1917.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

HEAT FOR ROOTING CONIFERS.

We intend to install a heating system in a shed attached to our packing house. The shed is eighty feet long and will be heated by a 7-section Moninger boiler, located directly to the south. We wish to know what piping will be needed to heat this shed to the right temperature for rooting cuttings of conifers, etc. The temperature, I suppose, should be 55 to 60 degrees in the coldest weather. The height of the shed is eight feet at the west side and twelve feet at the east side, where there is a wooden wall. The west or outside wall contains three feet of concrete; the remainder is glass. The south end also is glass. There are three benches, arranged as follows: A 3-foot bench against the concrete wall on the west, a 6-foot bench in the center and a 3-foot bench at the back or east side. V. N.—N. C.

The letter does not state the width of the house, but from the width and number of the benches we infer that it is approximately sixteen feet. We are also in some doubt about the construction of the house. It would appear that there is a wooden wall twelve feet high on the east side and that the west wall has three feet of concrete and five feet of glass. The building is spoken of as a "shed," but we infer that the roof as well as the south gable is of glass.

If this is correct, there would be not far from twenty-two feet of glass, measuring from the top of the concrete wall to the plate on the east side. For a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees in zero weather we would use a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each plate and nine 2-inch returns, distributed under the benches.

PIPING A SET OF FRAMES.

I am enclosing a sketch of a proposed set of ten coldframes, each 12x100, to be used in the spring, from March onward, to take care of bedding stock, geraniums, etc. They will be about twelve feet away from the greenhouse boiler room. How can I heat the frames successfully with 2-inch pipe for flows and 1½-inch pipe for returns? I shall use glass cloth if practicable, sloping it to each side like a roof, with a ridge along the middle of each frame. The boiler pit is sunk six feet below the surface of the ground. How many of these frames can be heated by a boiler rated at 750 feet of radiation, when the outside temperature is about 10 degrees above zero? The frames will require a temperature of not less than 45 degrees at night.

Could I run the main flow and return directly across the end of the row of frames and just below the surface of the ground, so as to allow teams to be driven over? And can I attach a tee for each frame, thence running the pipe down one side of the frame and back on the other side, dropping it down into the return? How much more heat can I retain by using glass over the glass cloth? I intend to use the Skinner system of irrigation in connection with this arrangement. Can you give me any suggestions on the proper installation of the sprinkling system?

J. O. S.—N. Y.

For a hotbed twelve feet in width we would use, for a temperature of 45 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees above zero, one 2-inch overhead flow pipe, placed about one foot below the ridge, and a 2-inch return pipe upon each side wall. A little later in the season, or if the plants are such that it may be possible to drop the temperature to 40 degrees in cold nights in March, one 2-inch flow pipe and two 1½-inch returns would answer. They would also suffice if glass sashes are placed over the glass cloth covering. Provided the top of the boiler is two feet below the level of the returns, there should be no difficulty about running the main flow and return pipes as proposed, but we prefer to run an overhead flow, with two returns on the sides of the frames for the heating pipes.

In severe weather, each of the frames will require nearly 200 square feet of radiating surface, so that a heater rated for 750 square feet will only handle four of the frames. Later on, it should be able to heat from six to ten of the frames, according to the outside temperature and the amount of heat desired inside the frames.

There should be no difficulty in watering the frames with the Skinner system of overhead sprinklers, if one line of pipe is placed over the third frame from either side, at a height of eight feet, and connected with a water sys-

HEATED WITH GAS STOVES.

Please give me your advice about one of my troubles. I have a small greenhouse, 11x18, which I am heating with two closed gas stoves, placed under the benches. Both stoves have direct connection with flues and I believe that all of the fumes, or at least the greater part of them, are carried off to the outside. It is easy to keep the proper temperature and the outfit does not require much attention. The chief objection seems to be the amount of moisture that accumulates on the glass, sides and door. But I fear my plants are not doing well. On the begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias, and also on some of the ferns, the leaves become discolored and finally they drop off. The primroses and most of the ferns seem at present to be doing well, but perhaps after I have been firing longer they, too, will commence to show the effects.

I cannot detect the odor of gas or any fumes when I enter the greenhouse, and I have tested the pipes for leaks and found none. If any of the readers of The Review have had experience in heating directly with gas stoves, and will tell me whether I can successfully heat my place in this way, I shall greatly appreciate the favor. The convenience and the slight cost of installing make it a desirable way to heat.

H. D. H.—O.

Coal gas, even in small amounts, is fatal to all kinds of greenhouse plants, and begonias, coleus and poinsettias are particularly affected by it. We can only say that the utmost care will be necessary, if the gas stoves are to be used, both in securing a perfect combustion and in carrying off all fumes.

It is possible that some of the trouble referred to is caused by lack of proper ventilation. We would suggest that on bright days the ventilators at the ridge be opened from two to six inches and that sufficient heat be furnished to keep the house at 70 degrees. On cloudy days the amount of ventilation should be somewhat reduced, but for ordinary plants, like those mentioned, the temperature need not then be more than 60 to 63 degrees.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

During the last two or three weeks market conditions have been rather peculiar—some days there was a shortage of stock and other days there was a glut of stock. This state of affairs is attributed to a rush of funeral orders followed by a quiet spell. Flowers for sick rooms have been popular, the light colors being in largest demand. Counter trade has been a little below normal. Roses have been scarce and have brought from $4 to $10. Good Beauties are especially rare. The supply of carnations is short, with the exception of reds, which bring only from $2 to $4, with white and pink making $4. Easter lilies and callas are not meeting the demand. Paper Whites have been popular and have been quoted at $3, with jonquils and yellow narcissi bringing $3 and $4.

The dark, cloudy weather averted a sweet pea glut. Last week these blooms were scarce and the first complaints of their dropping the buds have just been heard. At present they are making 60 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Violets of good quality are to be had at 60 cents to $1 per hundred. Roman hyacinths are popular, with an ample supply on hand. Other small flowers are beginning to appear, such as freesias, snapdragons and pansies, and they are indeed welcome.

Various Notes.

Indiana florists are menaced by two new insect pests, which have come to the notice of the state entomologist's office, according to R. E. Snodgrass, assistant entomologist. One of these is a borer which has been discovered by inspectors in rose stocks imported from England and Ireland. The other pest is a chrysanthemum gall fly, which already has done considerable damage in Indiana. The rose pest lives within the stems of rose plants and can be detected only by casual observation of cut stems. The chrysanthemum fly forms little warts, or galls, on the leaves and stems in which the flies live during the worm stage. Tobacco fumes will kill the chrysanthemum pest.

Brown, the Florist, has discontinued business and accepted a position at West Baden.

Some noise about a retail florists' association was started. What has become of it?

A retail florist recently remarked that St. Valentine's day did not amount to anything, because the only stock in demand was violets and red roses, and that these flowers were more scarce at that time and almost impossible to procure. Yes, this statement is correct, if the florist sits in an easy chair waiting for sales. Valentine business is what the retail florist makes it. If he offers dainty baskets, corsages and fancy plants in baskets and hampers, then St. Valentine's day perhaps will amount to more.

Nixon Gano, of Martinsville, has been in the city looking for a location in the city market.

Walter Bertermann has returned from a flying trip to Chicago.

The Smith & Young Co. is receiving bids on a coal conveyor. This establishment hereafter will receive its season's coal August 1.

The coming carnation show is to have the support of the governor and the Chamber of Commerce, and the influence of an ex-mayor.

J. F. Dayton, of the Madison Basketcraft Co., of Madison, last week was in town with a fine line of baskets.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24¼ inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

RICHMOND CEDAR WORKS, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

The persistent efforts of the florists have at last been rewarded, for the automobile show this year will be decorated with natural flowers. This exhibition, to be held February 5 to 10, will be staged in the Steinhart building. The order of $3,000 was awarded to the Bertermann Bros. Co. Each of the floors has been allotted to a manager, each manager designing, planning and erecting his own decoration.

This week's obituary column contains the death notice of C. W. Schwomeyer, of Schwomeyer & Son. E. E. T.

Hubbard Woods, Ill.—Paul Dieball, gardener to L. B. Kuppenheimer, is said to have the finest cyclamens in this gardening community this season. He claims a cultural method different from the general one.

Norton, Kan.—The secretary of the Norton Commercial Club, John E. Gleason, believes that there is a fine opportunity in Norton for a hustling young man to build up a good florists' business. The secretary suggests that anyone interested in such a proposition should write to him, care of the club.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There was a slight improvement in business last week. Roses and carnations continue of good quality and in good quantity, while sweet peas, freesias, Paper Whites and daffodils are coming in more freely and relieving the demand for other flowers. Weddings and social functions contributed to the week's satisfactory total.

Prof. H. H. York, of Brown University, was reëlected president of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at the seventy-second annual meeting, held last week. The other officers of the society are: First vice-president, M. M. Burdick; second vice-president, Prof. J. E. Hill; secretary, Ernest K. Thomas; treasurer, Harold L. Madison; trustee for five years, Benjamin A. Jackson. The committees are: Exhibition, Eugene A. Appleton, Joshua Vose, Arthur Sellew, Cornelius G. Hartstra and J. A. Carpenter; lecture, Prof. W. G. Vinal and Willard B. Hall; auditing, William Steele, E. A. Brook and J. F. Chase.

Fire wrecked a section of the Hampden Meadow Greenhouses at Hampden Meadows last week, causing a loss of nearly $2,500. It is believed that hot ashes from the furnace in the basement started the blaze and before the firemen reached the scene one large house was in ruins. The flames were checked, however. James Ennis, of Providence, is the lessee of the property, which belongs to Moulton Stone and Frank Field. There was no insurance on the property.

H. Howard Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, is in California for a several months' stay.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, is among those who have reserved exhibition space for the spring flower show in New York.

Charles Smith made two hurried trips to Boston last week.

Frederick Dietz reports a large number of funeral orders during the last fortnight.

Miss Nellie O'Connor had several large east side decorations recently. She reports good business.

Charles H. Hunt is having plans drawn for a new arrangement of his houses, to be made during the coming summer.

Joseph E. Koppelman is rejoicing at the arrival of a 10-pound son in his home last week.

Samuel Resnick, who has been in the Rhode Island Homeopathic hospital for seven weeks, has returned to his duties with J. E. Koppelman & Co.

The home of Charles E. Cannon was broken into last week and jewelry, silverware, etc., were stolen. W. H. M.

Paterson, N. J.—Edward Sceery was reëlected president of the park commission for the seventh consecutive time at the 1917 organization of the commission. Many important improvements have been made to the local parks during the Sceery regime.

The Market.

There have been no radical changes in market conditions during the last week. Everything remains the same, except that a few items have either increased or decreased in supply.

American Beauties continue along about the same, but Russell and Francis Scott Key roses are short in supply. Ophelia, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst and Killarney are plentiful enough from day to day. At the end of the week carnations were in larger supply, but cleared without any difficulty.

Freesias, Roman hyacinths and stevias are quite abundant, and other spring flowers are now being cut in large quantities. The prices still remain the same. A few exceptionally fine sweet peas are seen occasionally. The valley supply is good; the same is true of violets. Orchids are clinging to the scarce side. Green stock is quite plentiful and sells well, especially asparagus.

Various Notes.

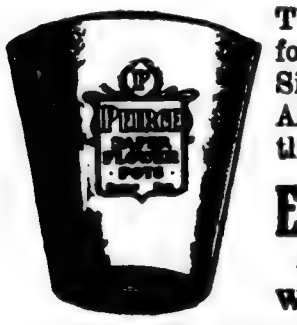
A fine batch of giganteum lilies may be seen at A. J. Reichert's greenhouses.

S. D. Greene, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week. He reports a most satisfactory business.

The next big day that florists should look forward to is St. Valentine's, and they should try to make it the most successful ever recorded. Early advertising is the most essential part.

The carnations at Barney Meyer's establishment, at Lancaster, are looking w ll and the men will be cutting vast quantities within a short time. The flowers are of good size and have good stems. Mr. Meyer is offering some extra fine valley.

Extensive improvements have been made at the greenhouses of Conrad Forbach. As most of the work here is in the cemetery in the spring, things at present are somewhat quiet.



Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wiese, Mrs. Buckhardt and Miss Rose Wiese left last week for California, where they expect to remain for about two months. They will stop off at all of the larger cities and visit the flower markets.

J. Peake, who injured himself about three weeks ago with a rusty wire, the wound later developing into blood poisoning, is slowly recovering.

The annual automobile show opened at the Broadway auditorium January 22. This show always has had a tendency to stimulate business indirectly.

W. J. Palmer & Son experienced another heavy run in funeral work last week.

The coal problem seems to be much the same at Buffalo as at other places. The only way coal can be obtained is by being persistent in demands for delivery. The severe weather that set in January 2 will make a still stronger demand for fuel. A. E.

LANCASTER, PA.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club met Thursday evening, January 18, in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Carnation night brought out a large attendance of members. On exhibition in the newer carnations were Superb, a seedling of Gloriosa x Enchantress, of flesh pink color, and Doris, a beautiful brilliant maroon. Rosalia, a cerise pink of large size, was shown and attracted much attention. A vase each of Belle Washburn and Miss Theo looked like two good commercials in their respective colors. Among the new roses shown was Donald MacDonald, sent out this year by Alex. Dickson & Sons, a variety that has the reputation of producing more flowers during the winter than any other red now growing. There were exhibits of Primrose, an Indian-yellow, of the general type of Ophelia; Rosalie, a beautiful little corsage pink rose; Little Gem, a fine yellow. The club was indebted to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, for this fine showing of the new varieties.

Elmer J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., read a paper on "The Newer Carnations." Mr. Weaver has been growing carnations since the days of Hinze's White and Portia, and, as his observation is keen, his conclusions are of much worth.

The election of officers for 1917 resulted as follows: President, Harry A. Schroyer; vice-president, W. B. Girvin; secretary, Frank L. Kohr; treasurer, Harry K. Rohrer. The president appointed the following committees to serve for the ensuing year: Program, Rudolph Nagel, Charles B. Herr, Albert M. Herr; visiting, Willis B. Girvin, L. S. Landis, Ira H. Landis; automobile, Charles M. Weaver, A. K. Rohrer, C. S. Loeffler; sports, David F. Rose, A. F. Strickler, Charles H. Tucker; exhibitions, B. F. Barr, M. J. Brinton, J. De Barry Heinitsh.

Mr. Kost, of the W. F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., was a visitor.

Prior to the meeting at 2 p. m., fifteen florists went to Strasburg and visited Amos N. Rohrer and Charles B. Herr. At Mr. Rohrer's was found the usual fine quality stock. Supreme, White Wonder and Ward are the leading carnations, with Matchless and Alice Coombs in lesser quantities. The Yarrawa peas looked most promising. In potted stock, daisies, cyclamens, Chinese primroses and heliotropes were of high merit.

The members then walked a mile to the Charles B. Herr range, where Matchless, Mrs. Ward, Supreme, Beacon and Alice Coombs are flowering, all in fine shape.

Some of the party then walked another mile to the J. Gayley establishment, where the new King house filled with Matchless carnations is a wonderful sight. The other houses are filled with Alice and Supreme, and also are extra good.

The next meeting will be held Thursday, February 15. H. K. R.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Extremely cold weather has made prices soar. Stock of all kinds, however, is of good quality. Carnations are of exceptional merit and still maintain their price of $1.25, which they have held ever since the days just after Christmas. Violets are more plentiful, but the price still holds up. Good sweet peas and roses are to be had. Among other flowers are pansies, calendulas, mignonette, marguerites and narcissi.

Various Notes.

William E. Mosher reports business to be steadily improving. Carnations have sold well with him, even though the price remains high.

Ernest Chamberlain is to vacate his present store on Union street about February 1 and move into his former stand at 3 South Sixth street.

William H. Davenport declares business unusually dull for this time of the year.

A fine crop of violets and pansies will be cut at the establishment of Edward M. Pierce for St. Valentine's day. Mr. Pierce is offering good mignonette.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society held its regular meeting January 7. Officers were elected for the ensuing year. W. M. P.

Wauseon, O.—A floral replica of the American flag recently was made by the Wauseon Floral Co. for the funeral here of a soldier shot on the Mexican border. The "flag" was imbedded in a panel of boxwoods, which was trimmed with red and white carnations and stevia. The stars in Old Glory were represented by single florets of Paper White narcissi, on a field of blue immortelles.

An Open Letter ON Jacobs' Greenhouses

S. JACOBS & SONS,
Gentlemen:—I am pleased to state that the greenhouse which you erected on the roof of the Beth Israel Hospital has proven very satisfactory indeed.

We are utilizing the same as a laboratory, and, although we thought it would be too hot in summer, have managed by painting the top of the glass with two coats of white paint, to keep out the intense heat of the sun and yet at the same time preserve the light. We also find that we can heat up the house very nicely in cold weather, and, as far as ventilation is concerned, it is excellently adapted. The house has withstood severe storms and proved to be a very substantial structure.

Visitors to the laboratory speak in high terms of its beauty and substantiality.

I am very glad to recommend the house and your workmanship.
Very truly yours,
L. J. FRANK, Supt. Beth Israel Hosp.

"TANK GRADE" CYPRESS

No other lumber manufactured is subjected to such close inspection and is graded so carefully as Cypress. It is the only variety of wood in which there is such a class as "TANK GRADE." Other woods have Firsts and Seconds, but "TANK GRADE" Cypress represents a choice, handpicked, selected quality —the very cream of Firsts.

For greenhouse construction, those who are accounted reliable among the contractors use none other than "TANK GRADE." Of course they put in "pecky" for standards and benches, but when it comes to sash-bars, sash, hot beds, cold frames, tanks, tubs, plant boxes, etc., it is cypress, "TANK GRADE," from ridge-pole to foundation.

And you will do well to follow the lead and advice of the experienced contractor.

A BOOK, PLEASE

Vol. 3, CYPRESS Pocket Library, tells a lot about greenhouse construction; Vols. 4 and 20 are for the farmer. They contain plans for all outbuildings, and they are absolutely free. There are 42 of these books, and you would better help yourself to them. Get the Carpentry Book, Vol. 36, telling you how to make easy a dozen hard jobs of carpentry; Vol. 37 is the big Silo Book. Both are full of plans for buildings and are handsomely illustrated.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, Nov. 18, 1916.

Gentlemen:—

After finishing my recent addition, it is no more than justice that I write you concerning the materials furnished. Since starting with my first house of Moninger construction, I have continually added until now my range consists of 150,000 square feet, and not one stick of any but your material.

When starting, I made a careful study of all construction firms, deciding that Dollar for Dollar you people gave me an ideal proposition. Since that time I have never found the slightest reason for changing this opinion.

Further, you people are progressive enough to make the small improvements so essential to the florist, and while the first material was excellent, every additional lot looks better. Your general service and pleasant way of adjusting small difficulties cannot be too highly commended.

Wishing you a very prosperous and successful future, I am

Yours very truly,
(Signed) F. L. LAINSON.

John A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.

Gentlemen: We have just received the forty 20th Century Double-acting Arms ordered from you a few days ago. Our putting the vents closer together than was called for in specifications accounts for requiring this additional material.

Our houses are nearly all equipped with your ventilating machinery, and we find same very satisfactory in every respect. Your Double-acting 20th Century Arm is more serviceable than the others we have in use, and if properly installed needs no more attention at all. We consider your Arm the perfect one.

We wish to thank you for your promptness in filling this order and for the courteous treatment extended in the past. Yours very truly, Davis & Steiner.
